Jori,

I'm so glad we've become friends cause you're such a sweet & pretty person. You've helped me out so many times & gave me great advice & I really value your friendship. Whenever I needed someone to talk to you were always there to help out. [redacted] Seeing this year you & I have learned a lot about love & life and unfortunately both of us got hurt. I'm [redacted] sure you'll have that feeling many more times and I hope you don't get hurt again. I'm not gonna say like everyone else good luck w/ Jeff cause you know as well as I do something called love will not always last but, I hope you & Jeff are happy together! You think it's

Well have a great summer

I'll miss you when I move

Keep in touch

Love & Luck Always

Lori,

On the clown who came to town, and signed your yearbook upside down! (Ever know me to make a fool out of myself?) I sure am glad ol' cat woman could do at least one thing right!! You've been one of the best friends I've ever had. (and still have) Just remember I'll always ~~th~~ be here to listen. Thanks a million for September 2...8:15 a.m....a shrill, grating, mechanical buzzer aroused 4058 Bruins from the hibernation of summer and launched them into a new school year. The repetition of this shrill, grating, mechanical buzzer at 9:10 was adequate warning that 1981 was to be a year of change. Extending far beyond the institution of the melodic REVEILLE signalling the start and end of classes, many trends were established that would become traditions in the years to come. The rebirth of school spirit, comparable to the esprit de corps of the INFANTRY transformed a ho-hum student body into one charged with fanatic enthusiasm. Continued excellent performances in both the COMBAT ZONE and USO gave us many things to be proud of. The extension of student involvement and participation in the facets of school life gave many of us added ACTIVE DUTY while cutting down on our time for R&R. This shifting of responsibility from the VIP's gave us the opportunity for an HONORABLE DISCHARGE of our ideas into the mainstream of student affairs in an effort to create a Livelier and Better LB.

Enjoying the diversity of tenth grade P.E., Rita Morello aims for the bull's eye in first period.

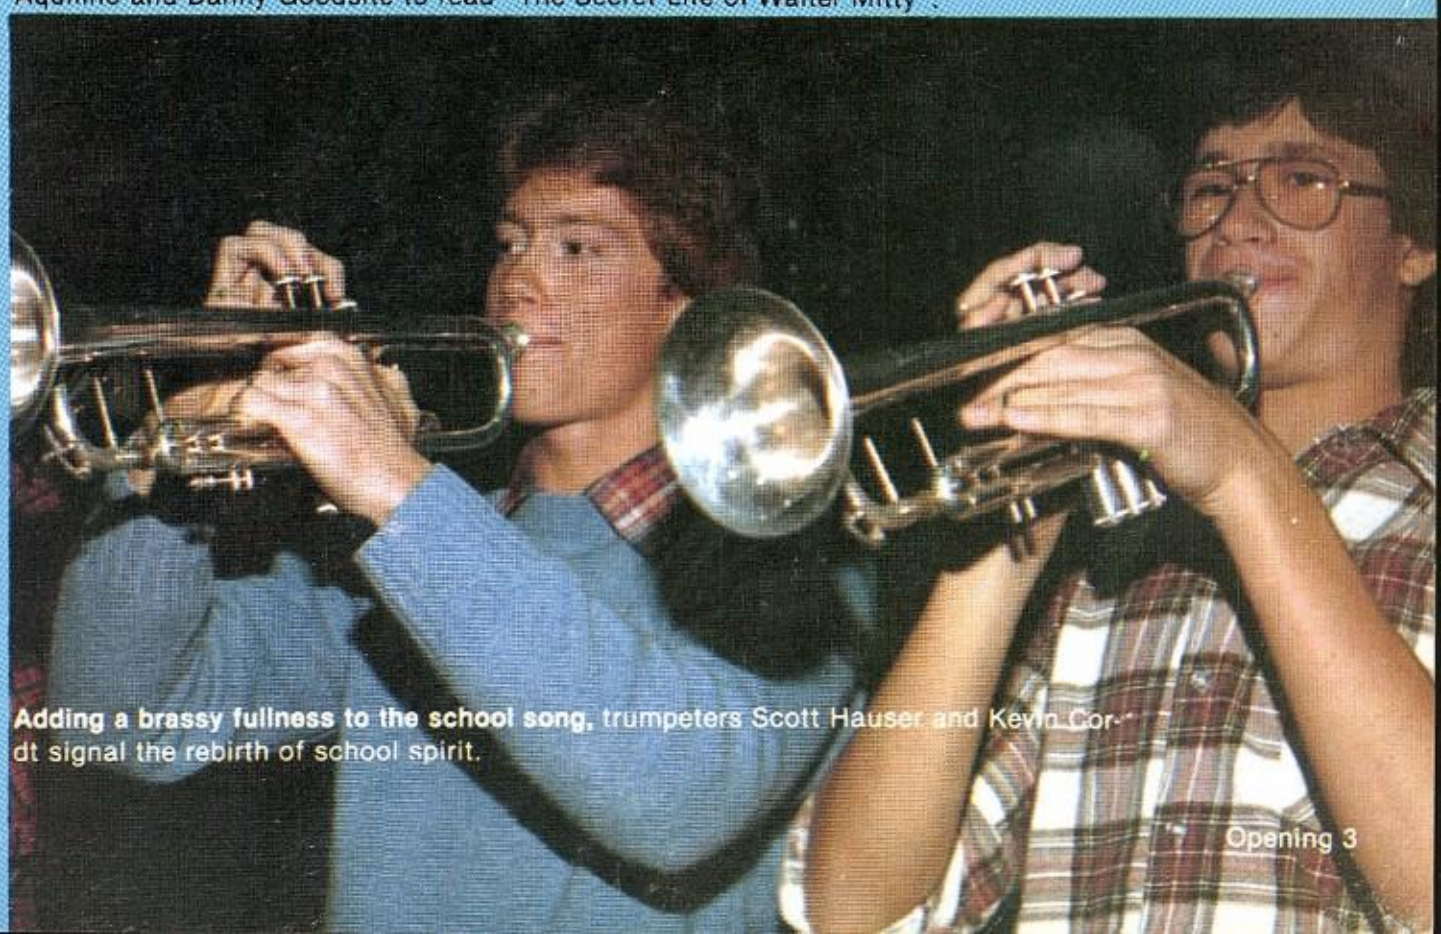
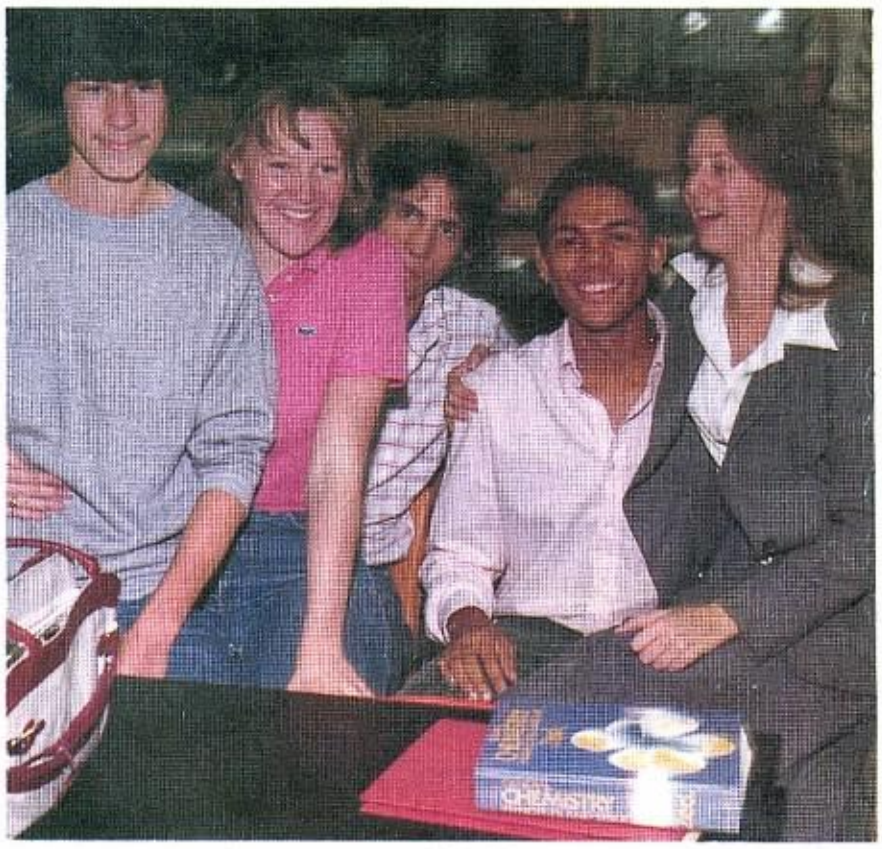
Somnolent sunny rays and a warm autumn breeze provide a relaxing atmosphere for Michelle Aquilino and Danny Goodsite to read "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty".

In the middle of D lunch, Laura Gutheridge finds some silence and solitude in which to study.

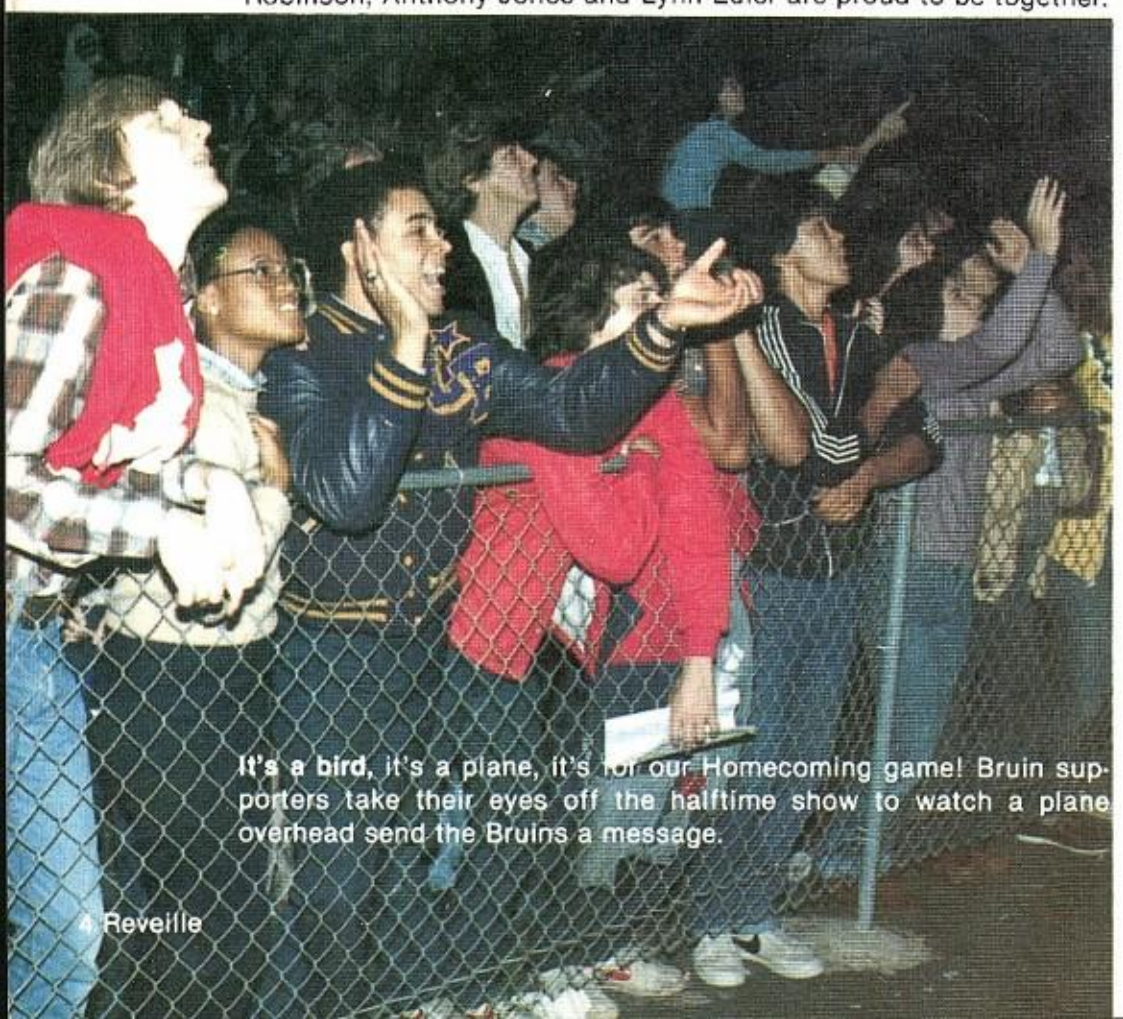


Adding a brassy fullness to the school song, trumpeters Scott Hauser and Kevin Cordt signal the rebirth of school spirit.

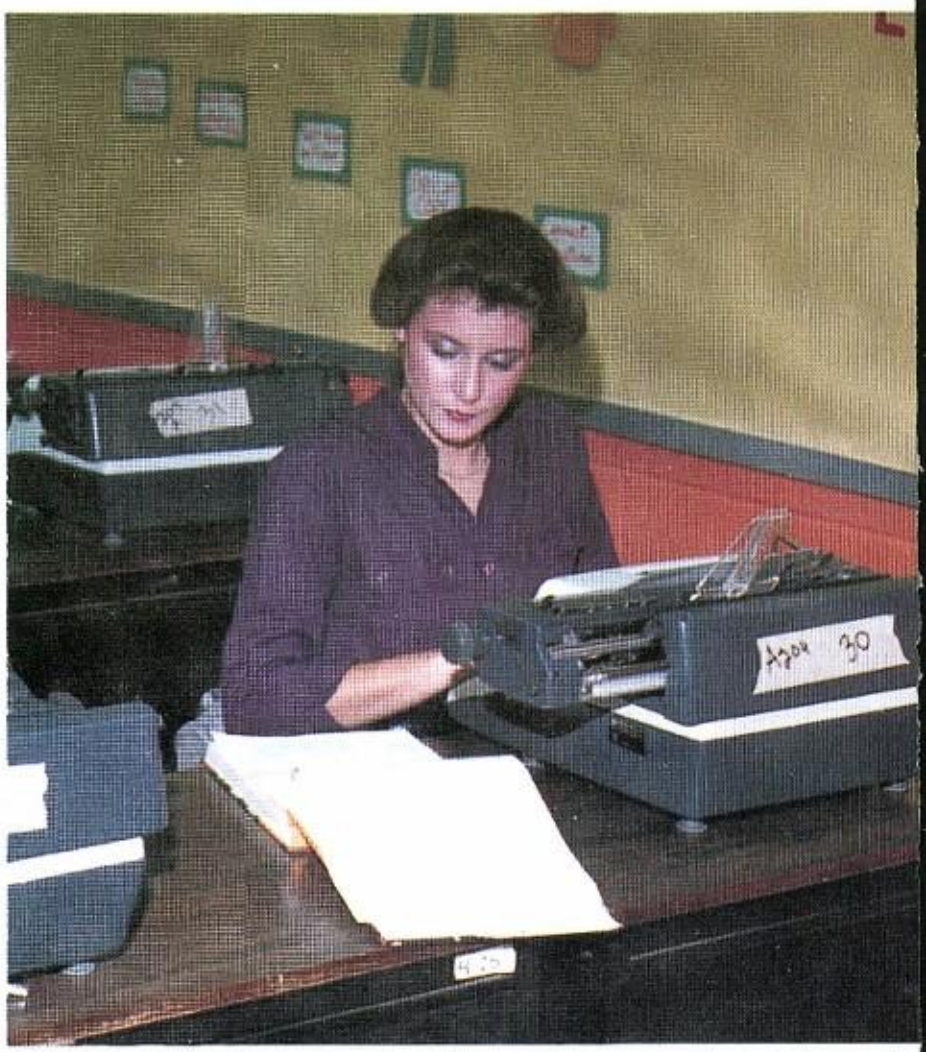
Proud To Be Together...



Enjoying each others company, Mike Thomas, Karen Donnelly, Bob Robinson, Anthony Jones and Lynn Euler are proud to be together.

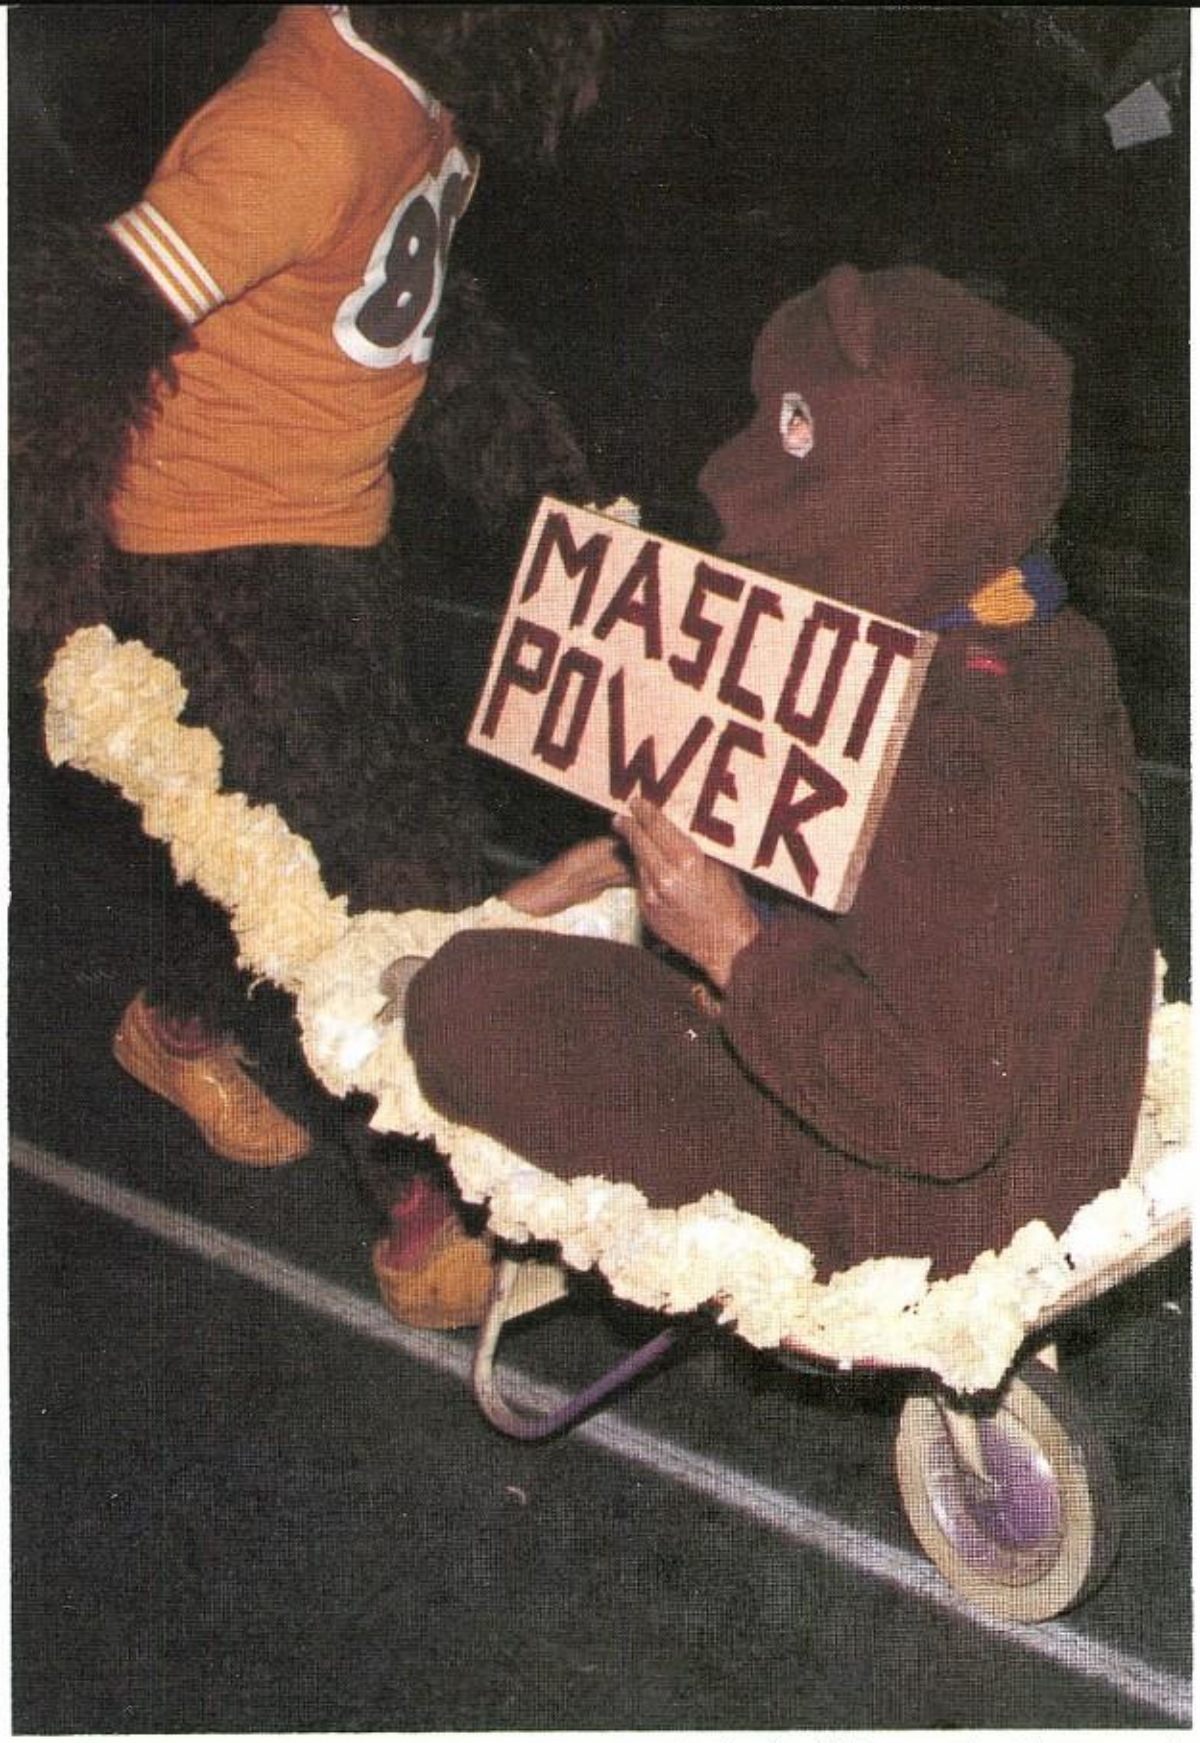


It's a bird, it's a plane, it's for our Homecoming game! Bruin supporters take their eyes off the halftime show to watch a plane overhead send the Bruins a message.

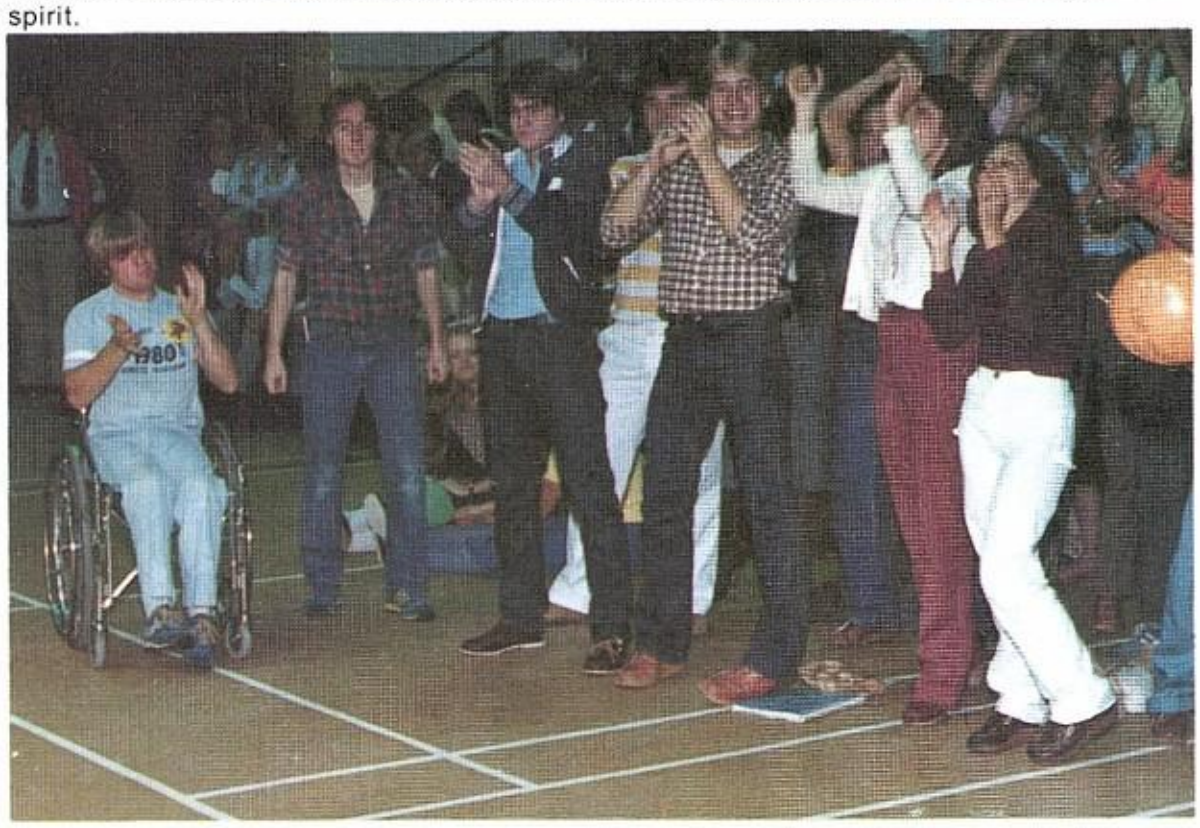


After memorizing the keyboard, Suzanne Duron can look at her assignment book and continue typing.

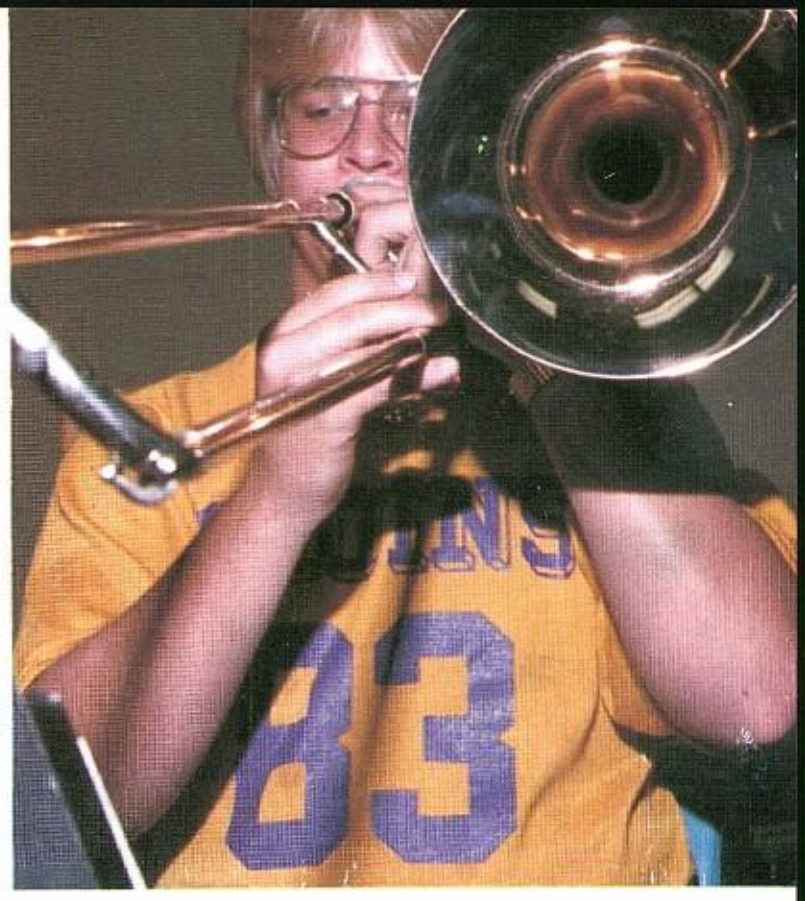
Doing her part in SGA's fourth period class, Audrey Short is in charge of making the welcome back sign for the alumni reception.



Personifications of Bruin Pride, Larry Rosenberger wheels Jim Vaile around as they promote spirit.

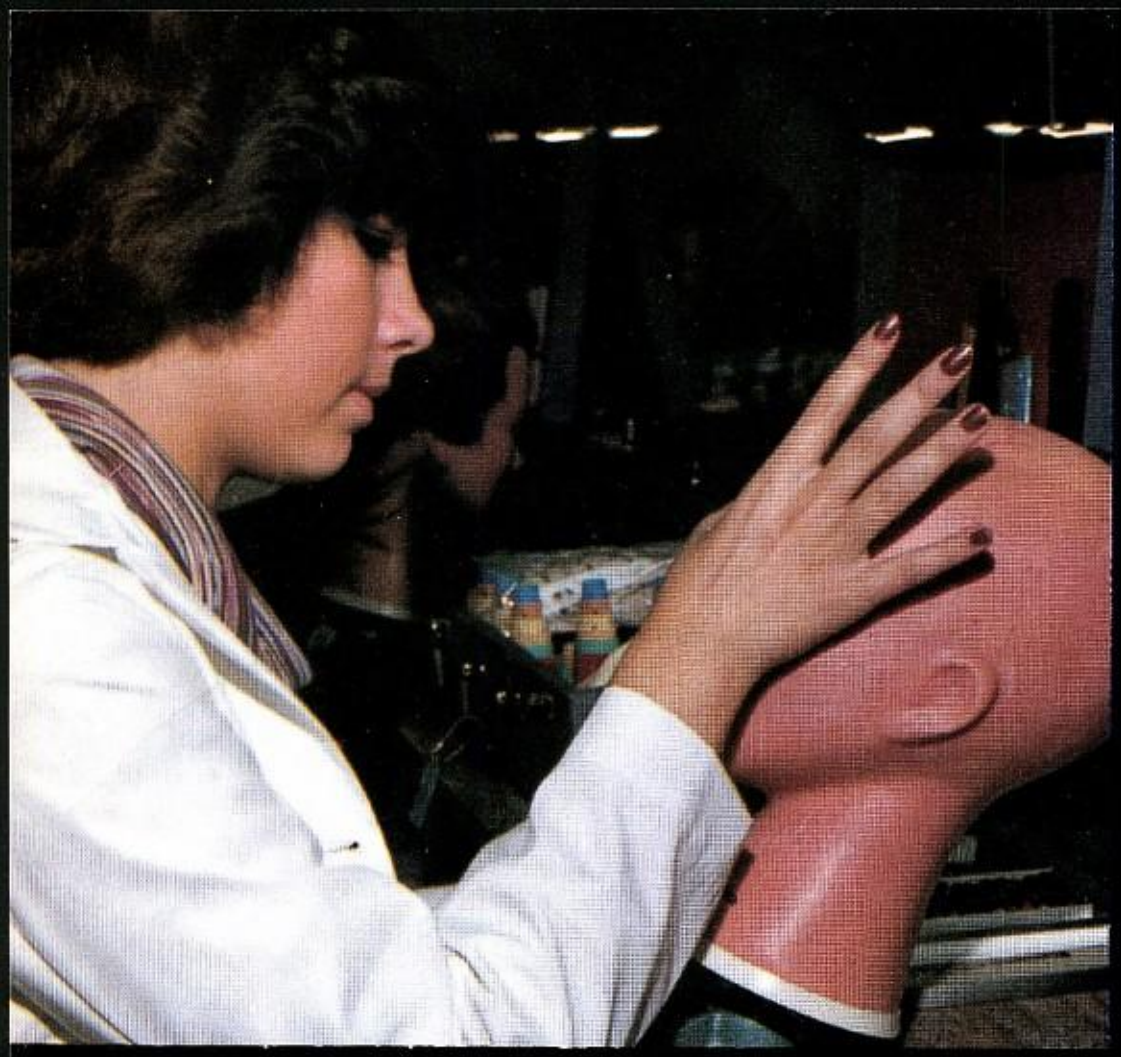


Proud to be Bruins, the senior class supports the football team with a rousing "Go Bruins, Beat Oakton" at the Homecoming Pep Rally.



For one sensational number, Matt Leland adds to the trombone section of Concert Band II while playing "One".

As the shrill sound of the buzzer subsided, a new noise, the chants and cheers of an excited student body, was heard. The first day of school brought with it the first meeting of the new Pep Club. The unexpected turnout proved that the student body was ready to cheer our purple and gold teams on to victory. Above the tooting horns and the Marching Band's grandstand support, the Pep Club could be heard echoing the cheers of the cheerleaders and the mascots. The addition of male cheerleaders enhanced the excitement of the games. Giving the students a chance to go to away games, the enthusiastic SGA provided Pep buses. This resulted in the Bruin fans outnumbering the opponents at their own field at most of the away games. Supporters came equipped with the new Growl Towels and school jerseys, as well as foam fingers showing the Bruins as being "number one". The excitement wasn't just shown at sports events, but it was carried throughout the school day as well. The SGA sponsored a new School Spirit Week to give the entire student body a chance to show school spirit. Even at Pep rallies the cheers were not only for individual classes, but for Bruins as a whole, showing that we were proud to be together...

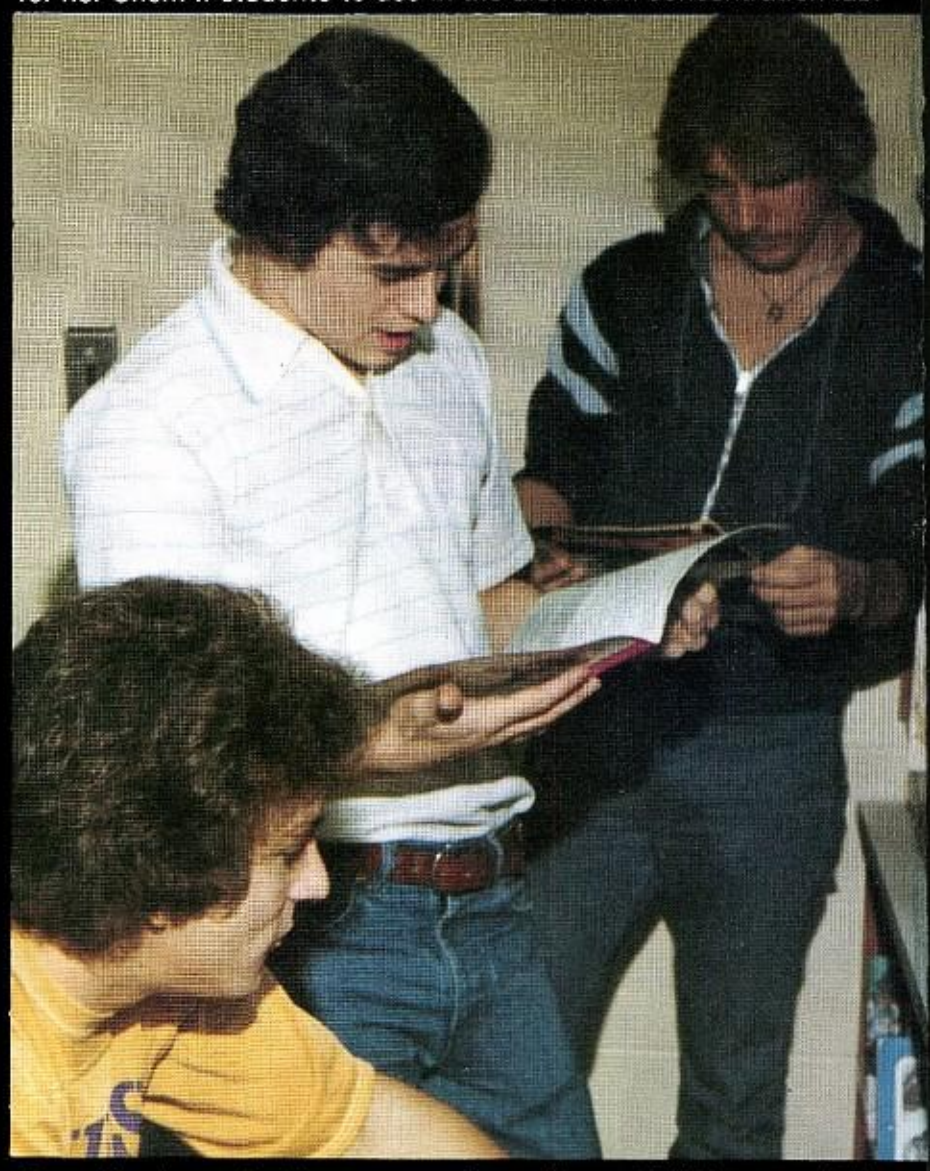


Preparing for Cosmetology's Fall Festival booth, Stephanie Hall practices 'making up' faces.

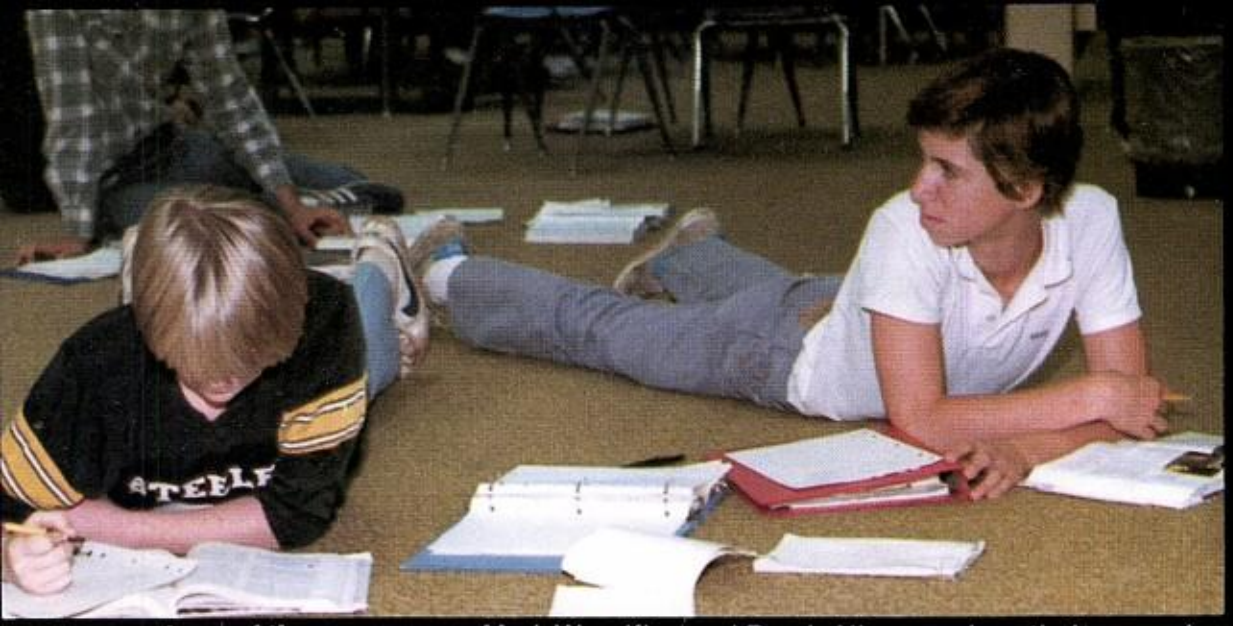
...Proud To Be One

While being proud to be together, we realized that it was actually the enthusiasm of the individual that contributed to the unity of the whole. Free to express our Bruin pride in areas beyond the football bleachers and pep rallies, our dedication to Lake Braddock branched out into different arteries within the school. Members of the newly-formed club, SCREAM, Society for the Creative Reform of Educational and Academic Matters, took the responsibilities upon themselves to upgrade the curriculum in their efforts to institute and honors government for seniors and to ease the student's work load through departmental testing.

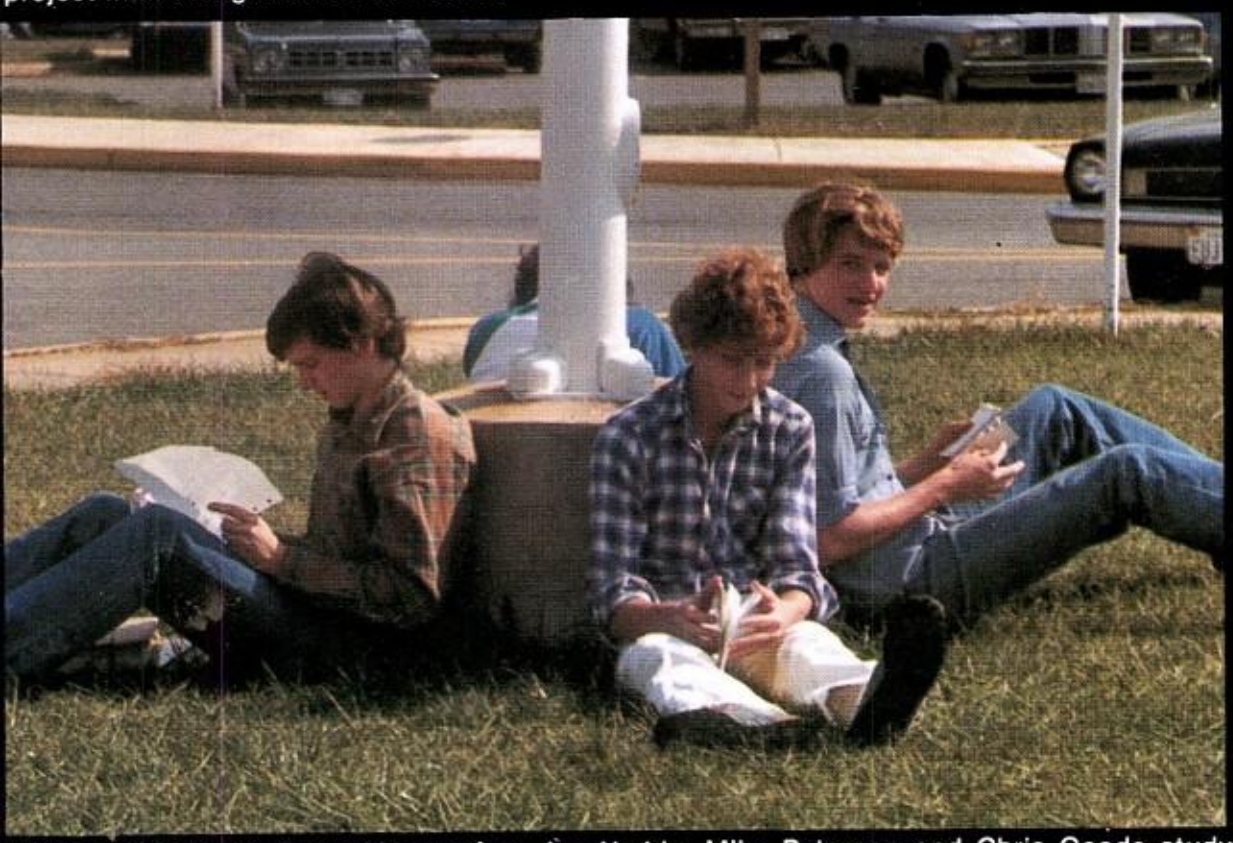
Cutting Tab cans, SCREAM sponsor Helen Price prepares samples for her Chem II students to use in the aluminum concentration lab.



Searching for material on prospective colleges, Phil Sessoms, Mike Vassallo and Keith Whitener make good use of the College Career Center during lunch.

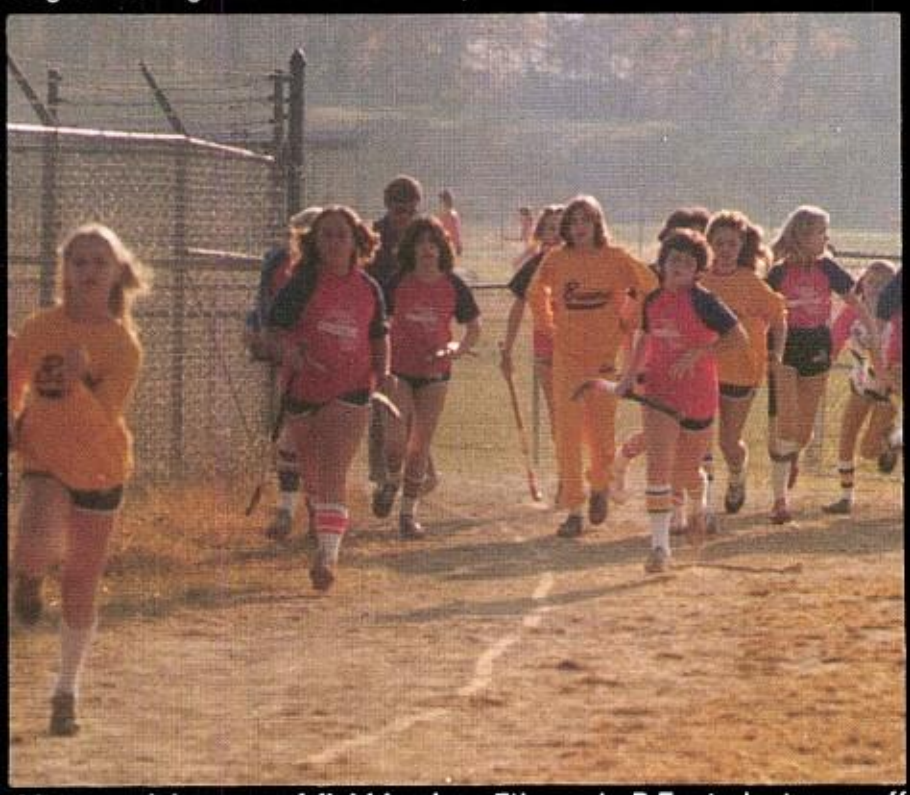


Making good use of the open space, Mark Woodfine and Randy Nixon work on their campaign project in Mr. Magathan's EMS class.

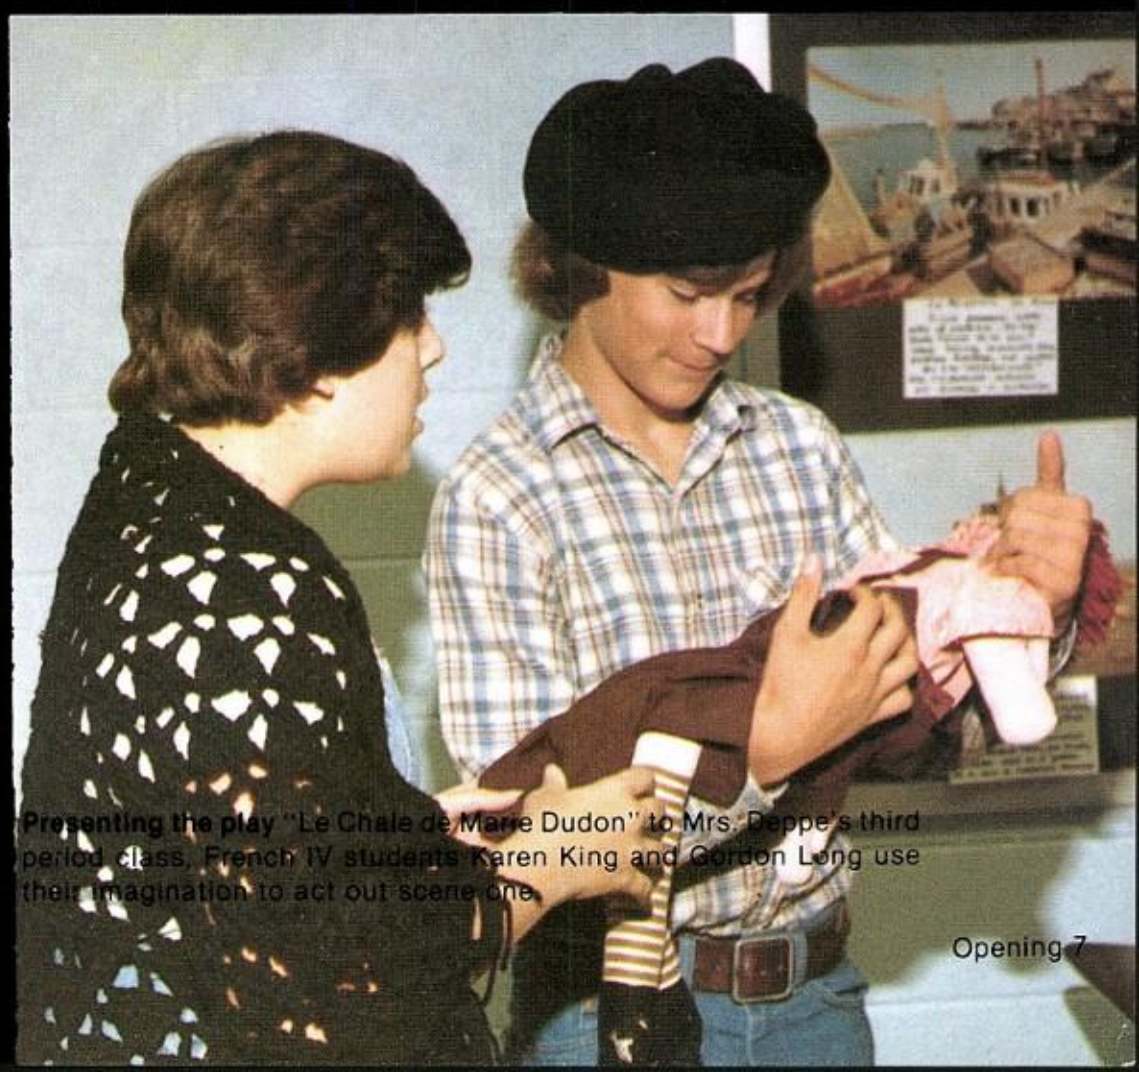


Taking advantage of the 80º weather, Jay Umble, Mike Peterson and Chris Goode study English during Mrs. Keefer's fifth period class.

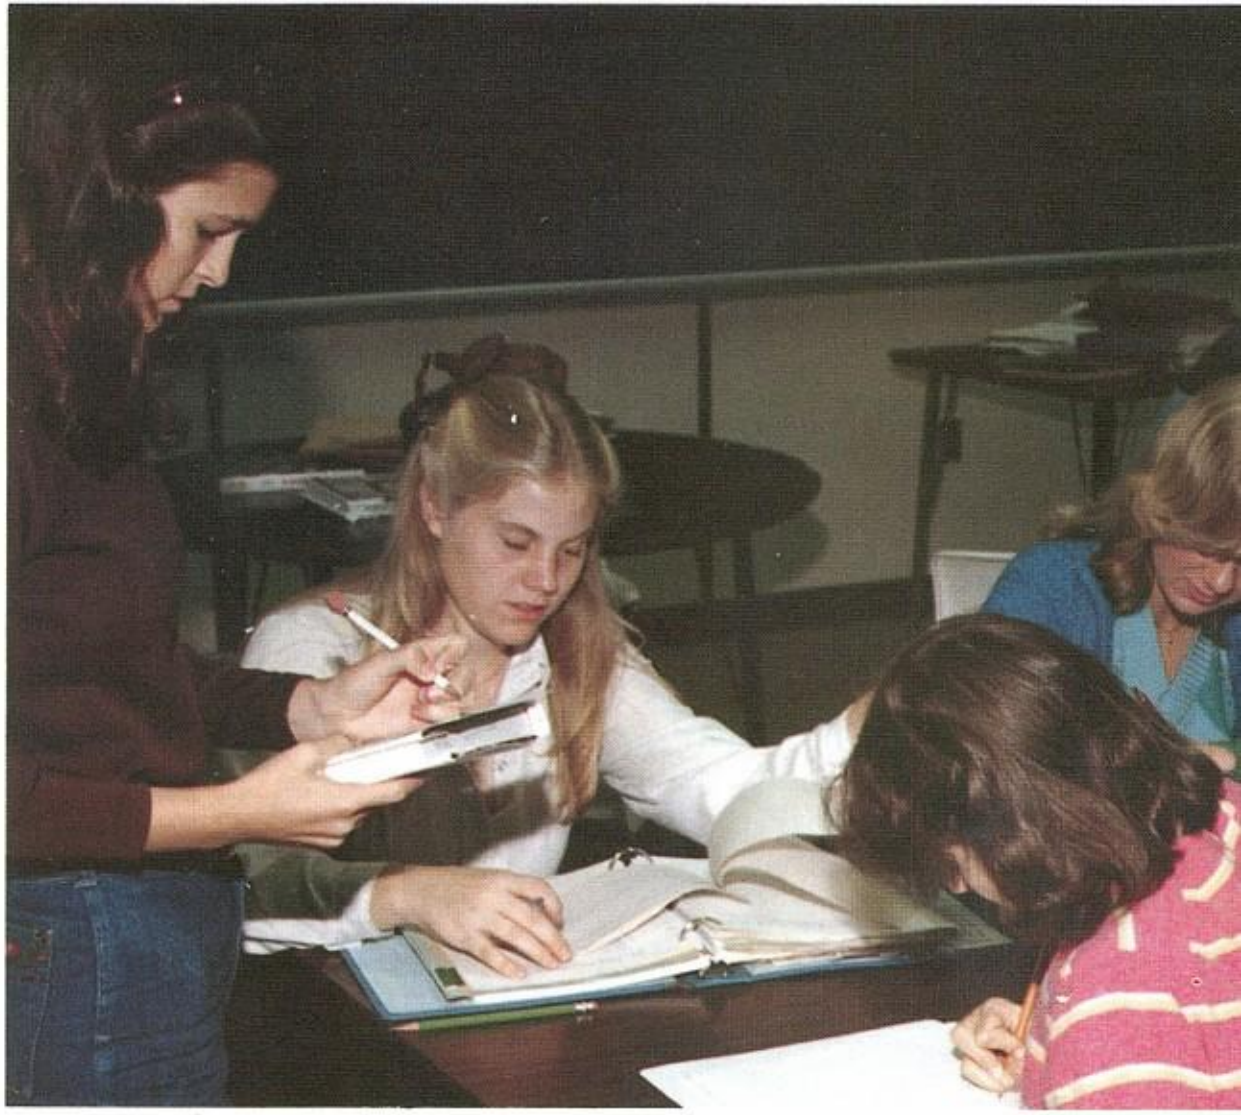
The General Assembly, an extension of the SGA, comprised of class and club representatives, undertook the rewriting of the school's constitution in an attempt to further increase student participation in school affairs. Combining technology and skilled precision, journalism students became the first in Fairfax County to prepare camera-ready pages with the use of the Trendsetter computer. Specialized within different departments, Bruin pride flourished. Exemplary performances in athletics, music, theatre arts, pep club,. Debate, forensics, and journalism earned the coveted "LB" to put upon a letter jacket. These rewards for exquisite individual activity and the jackets they were worn upon, became fashionable uniforms for which each student strived. It was the individual pride, symbolized by letter jackets and progressive reforms, that made us not only proud to be together, but proud to be one.



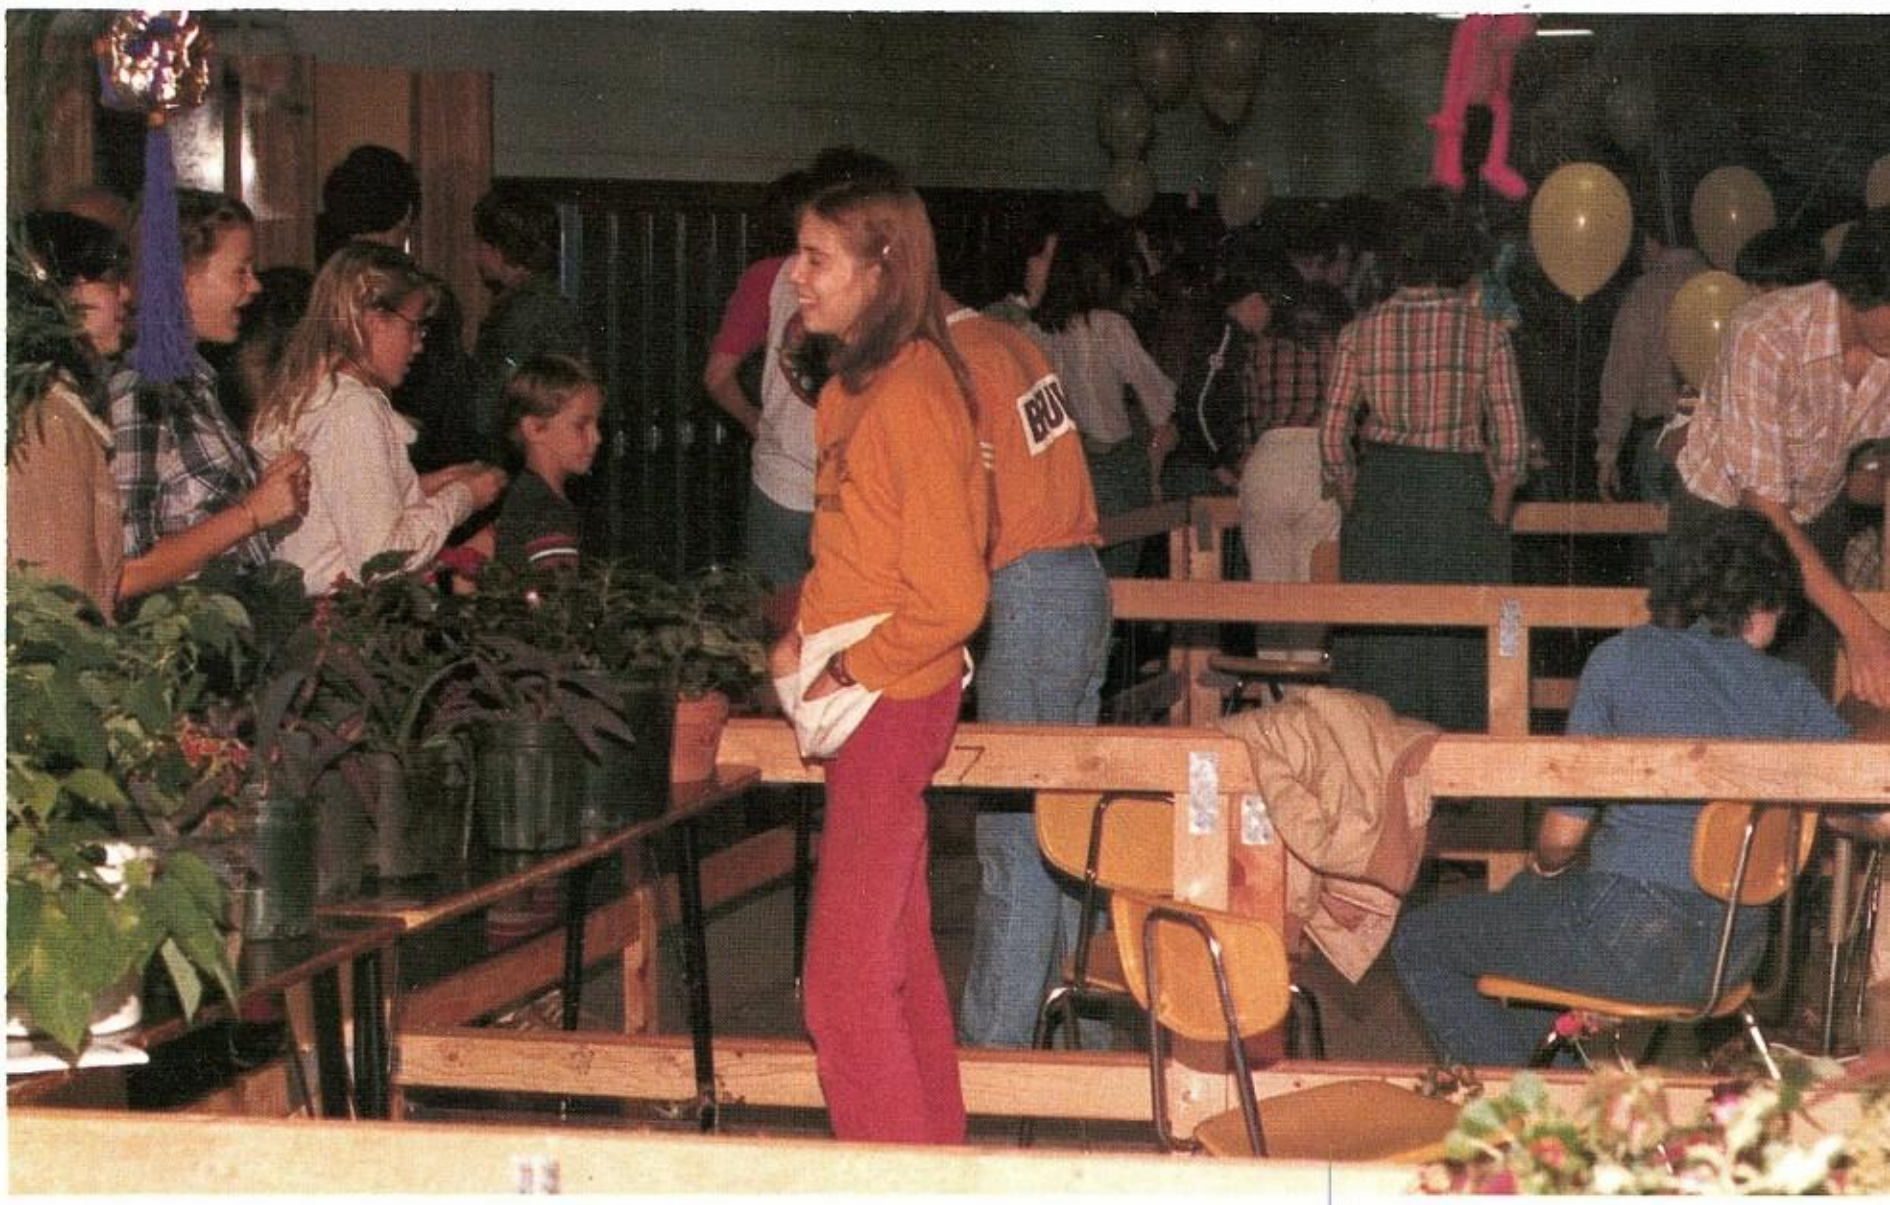
After a quick game of field hockey, 7th grade P.E. students run off the field to get dressed out for second period.



Presenting the play "Le Chale de Marie Dudon" to Mrs. Deppe's third period class, French IV students Karen King and Gordon Long use their imagination to act out scene one.



Working on her election project for E.M.S. 1, Patty Kessler polls Cheryl Pasco and Lori Risutto on whom they would vote for in the upcoming Presidential election.



Exotic plants and helium balloons are just a few of the items for sale at the Fall Festival.

ACTIVE DUTY

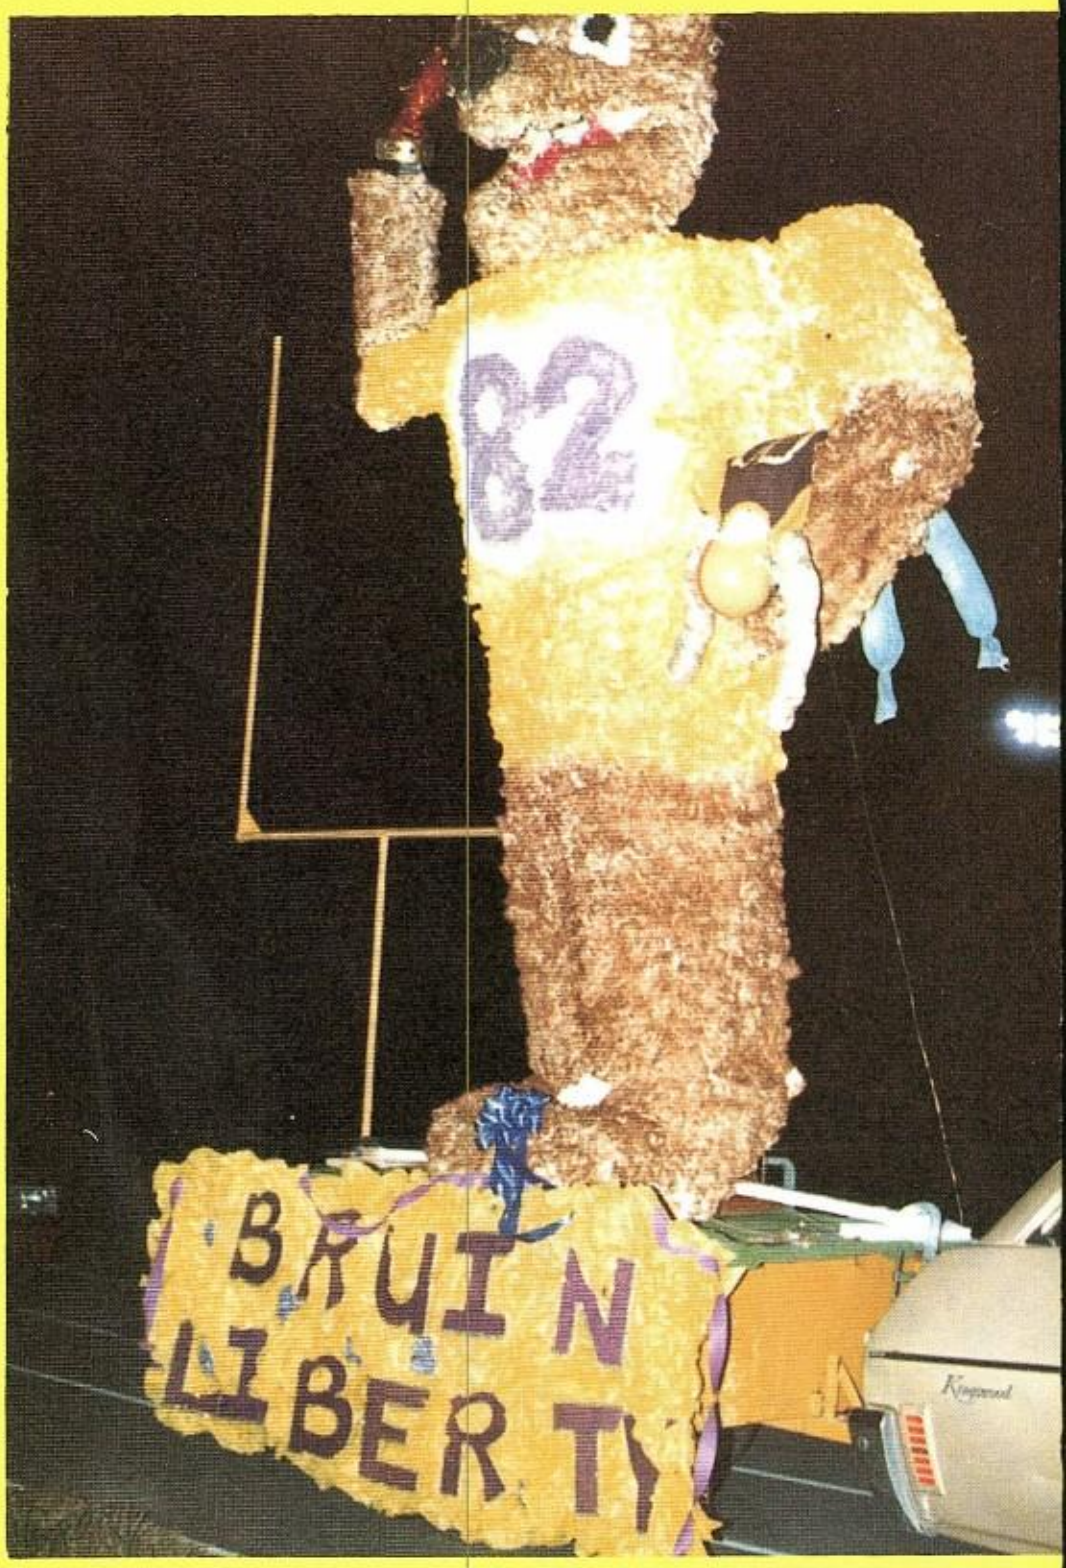
Throughout the year our school hummed with excitement that resulted from the many activities of student life. The Homecoming theme, "Bruin Pride", and the events of homecoming week inspired a patriotic spirit of enthusiasm in the school. Always on the move, we found ourselves bustling from school to concerts, to our favorite hangouts, and back again. Some of us had jobs to hold down while others had trips to go on. Everyone was moving with the growth of "Bruin Pride"and nothing could hold us back. Loaded with activities and responsibilities, we faced an active duty which was ours to bear.

Throughout Homecoming week, October 14-18, students and faculty exhibited school spirit as they reflected on the theme "Bruin Pride." Festivities began on Wednesday night as an overcapacity crowd filled the Little Theater to observe the Fall Follies. Clubs, classes, and faculty performed skits to raise money for their organizations and to have a good time. The first prize of $25 was awarded to the Pep Club with its interpretation of in the beginning were the heavens and the turf, then came the pigskin, super jock, other football players, statisticians, cheerleaders, the Pep Club, Keyettes to sell concessions, the losers--the Cougars, and the winners--the Bruins. Awarded $15 for second place was the Class of '86 performing a skit detailing the origin of our school song and Bruin pride. The Class of '81 won third place and $10 with its trip through time in search of Bruin pride and discovery that it was present in 1980.

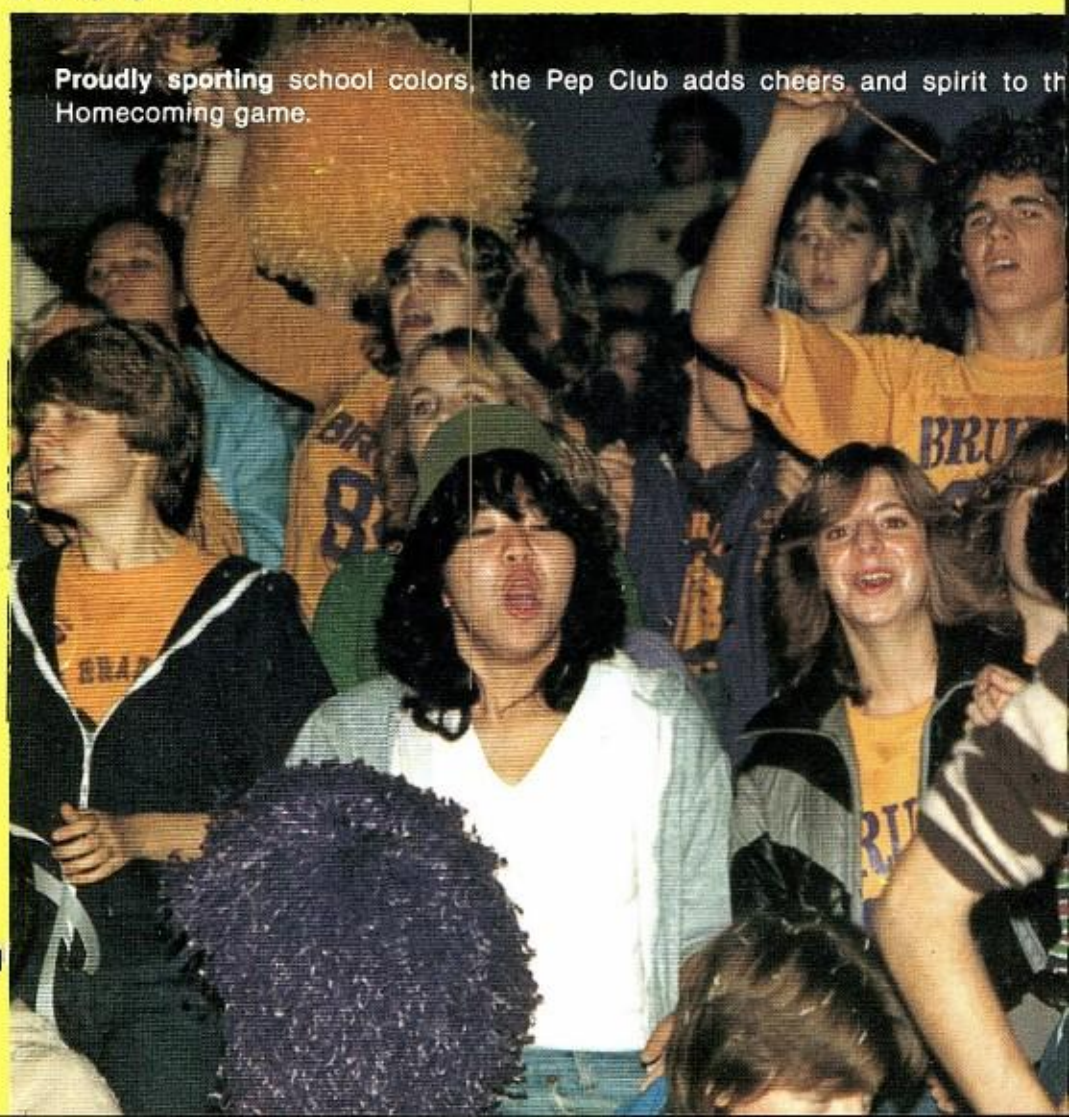
As effigies of the Oakton Cougars went up in smoke at the bonfire on Thursday night, spectators got "fired up" while cheering and listening to the band.

At the pep rally on Friday, the Homecoming court and the football team were presented to the student body. The gym roared with the cheer "Go Bruins, beat Oakton!" as classes competed to be the loudest. Upon their victory, the rowdy seniors broke into a senior chant immediately followed by a Bruin chant in which everyone joined.

At the game on Friday night, the stands were packed with enthusiastic fans. Although our team lost 16-7, spirit remained high. The marching band captivated the audience with an excellent precision halftime show. Halftime festivities continued with the procession of the floats and the Homecoming court as an illuminated aerial message displayed 'Margot Caldwell 1980 Homecoming Queen--Congrats,SGA--Go Bruins, beat Oakton!' The junior float representing Bruin Liberty won first prize. Enthusiasm and "Bruin Pride were evident everywhere during Homecoming week.



After hours of hard work and planning, the juniors won first place for their float portraying Bruin liberty.



Proudly sporting school colors, the Pep Club adds cheers and spirit to th Homecoming game.

During Homecoming's closing event, Neil Bickers and Shelly McCollum reflect on the week's festivities.

and Fun

Despite damp and cloudy weather, Fall Festival activities were enjoyed by many students, faculty, and parents. Booths featuring homemade crafts, baked goodies, and challenging games crowded hallways. Balloons, Pep Club pompoms, and "Bruin Pops" showed a new surge of school spirit. Saturday night the Homecoming Dance, featuring the band Flight 009, brought hundreds of couples to the cafeteria to enjoy the finale of Homecoming Week. The week of Homecoming, October 14-18, provided many, diverse ways for students to enjoy themselves and show their pride to be together.

Weekends

Hungry ducks give a noisy greeting to Beth Landry and Lisa Nagy at Burke Lake Park.

For the average student, spending Saturday night at home with a geometry book was not considered the highpoint following a tiring week of schoolwork. As school nights limited most to academic responsibilities, weekends provided a much needed time to take advantage of the local facilities for fun and recreation. As members of a diverse student population, we were scattered among a wide variety of activities. From parties to parks, we enjoyed the time we had, making ourselves known at every mall and fast food restaurant in the area. Though we often returned to school even more exhausted than when we had left it, our weekends out with friends provided a well earned escape from the daily routine.

Chaos

Where is A205? I don't have a schedule! When do we get our lockers? Can I get my schedule changed? Questions! Questions! Questions! Counselors and subschool secretaries were burdened with the problems and questions of students crowded around the subschool offices. Due to the late issue of lockers, we all carried heavy, unwieldly stacks of textbooks through the halls. While some confused students looked for classrooms, others reminisced of summer's activities. New faces of transfer students and seventh graders appeared. As time progressed, our questions were answered and problems of the new year were solved. By Thursday, September 4, our first school-wide pep rally began, and we knew the year had gotten into full swing.

As our experiences widened, most of us dedicated ourselves to a special interest which we found personally rewarding. For many students, the old stand-bys of coin and stamp collecting just couldn't provide the needed excitement. Many found that they were more suited to the offbeat, and hobbies offered a limitless variety of activities to choose from. Participants gladly put up with many a raised eyebrow and questioning glance to pursue their hobbies, which often required large amounts of time, patience, and skill. During the previous year, a group of students turned an avid interest in medieval culture into the Medieval Re-creation Society, giving them the opportunity to learn through role playing medieval characters. Senior Becky Thompson grass skiied for five years, winning the United States Grass Ski Association's American Cup, making her the nation's best women's grass skier. Anything Goes Prep...Punk...Sophisticate...Western...Designer...All-American. Each of these looks revealed itself in the fashion scene. For the preppie person, oxford cloth shirts, Dickie's and Cheenos, skinny ties, plaid wool skirts, blazers, monogrammed wool sweaters, and docksiders were popular. Anything imaginable or outrageous was worn by punk rockers, whose dress had a touch of fantasy. For the sophisticated look, girls wore straight skirts with slits, sweater dresses, blazers, and then completed the look with pumps or ankle strap sandals; guys wore dressy three piece suits with or without ties. Cowboy hats, boots, jeans, and vests all rode in with the Western trend. Designer fashions such as Calvin Klein, Gloria Vanderbilt, Jordache, and Bon Jour were stylish, and many people paid a little more for the label. The most common look was the "all-American" look which included Levi's, concert T-shirts, Nike's, letterman jackets, and surf shirts. The various looks were as individual as the people wearing them, and it was obvious that almost anything went.

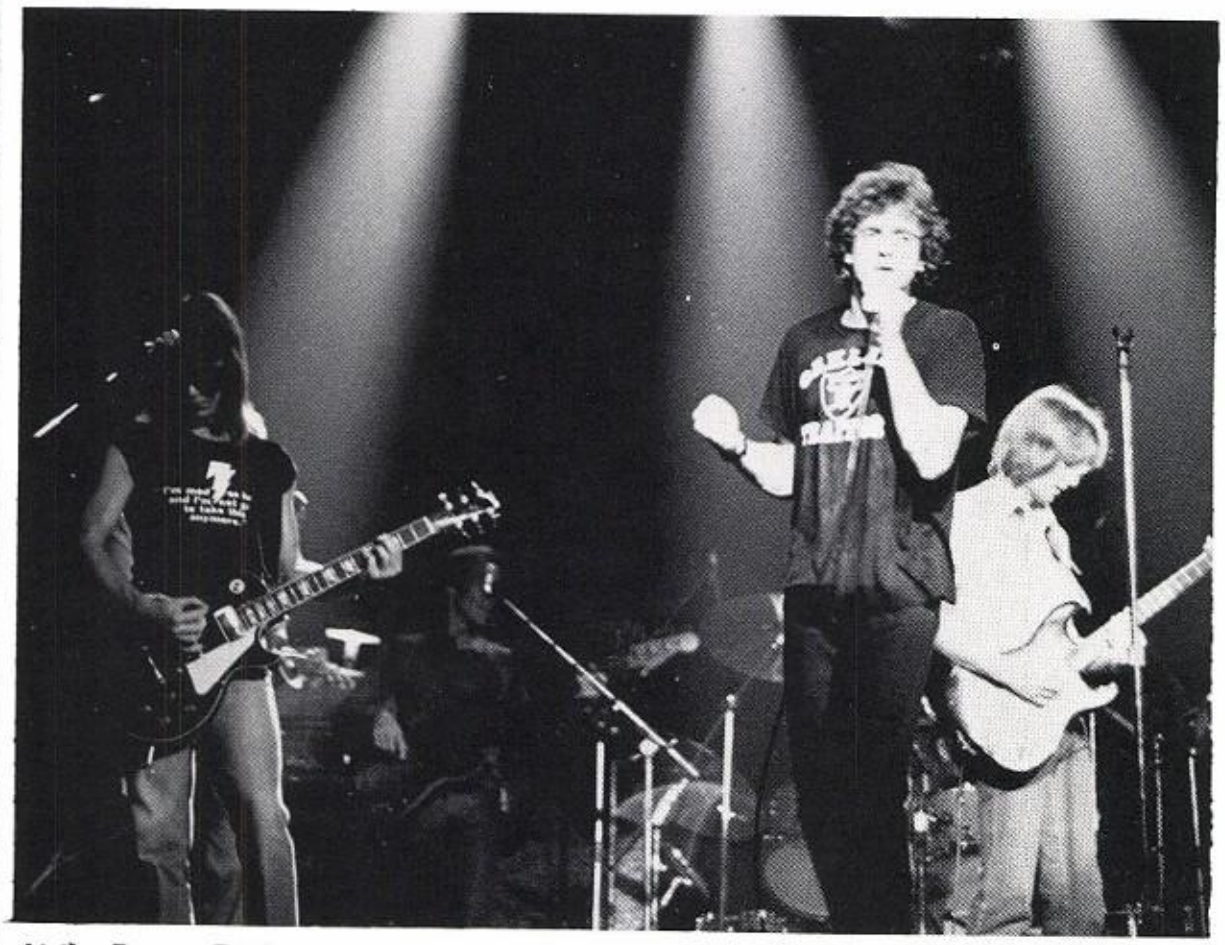
Dim All The Lights



At the Bayou, Eddie Money seeks a smaller audience for a more intimate performance atmosphere.

Out of the darkness glowed thousands of tiny lights. The roaring was intense, echoing from the highest beams to the people far below. The night was alive with music and the people responded, shouting and clapping until their voices were hoarse and their hands were sore. They were participating in an event, allowing their spirits to be carried wherever the music willed. They were attending a concert. The Washington area concert season catered to listeners of every taste, from local new wave bands playing to small groups of frenzied dancers in Georgetown clubs, to big name artists performing for 18,000 wild fans at Maryland's Capital Centre. Among this year's highlights were Bruce Springsteen, The Cars, Journey, and Rush, while on the local scene groups like The Ritz and The Insect Surfers made their way into the music scene. No matter what the type of music, for those attending a concert the excitement remained intact, filled with the memories of a stage that became alive as the lights began to dim.

While many students used their spare time to participate in clubs and sports, others kept busy with a part-time job. Springfield Mall, with its many department stores, clothing stores, and specialty shops provided many employment opportunities. Even more jobs were made available due to the large number of shopping centers in the area. While the majority of student employees only worked to get a weekly paycheck, others were willing to volunteer. Though they didn't get paid, they did receive other benefits. Volunteer workers used the training, experience, and skill development learned on the job to prepare for future occupations. The election year gave students an opportunity to distribute campaign literature, stuff envelopes, and take polls. No matter what reason students chose to become part of the working world, most felt that the benefits of having a job made up for a missed football game or club meeting.

For most of us, school was not only a place to learn, but a place to interact socially as well. While in the same environment we were able to discover our similarities, differences, likes, and dislikes. Chance usually played a big role in the making friends. We rode the same bus, shared the same lunch shift, and we both hated Geometry! Throughout the year we learned together, played together, laughed together, and sometimes cried together. We explored new places, new interests, and new feelings. We helped each other solve the problems that every teenager faced; parents, dating, and that hard to answer question, "What will I become?" When one of us was happy, both of us were. The opposite was also true. In time, a bond grew and with that a mutual respect seen only in the closest of friendships.

1980 was a year with numerous ups and downs, which were clearly illustrated through the Presidential election. Two major candidates emerged after the winter primaries - Republican ex-Governor Ronald Reagan of California; and Democratic incumbent President Jimmy Carter of Georgia. Soon after, the former Republican candidate Representative John Anderson of Illinois announced his intentions of running as the Independent candidate on the "unity campaign."

Gentle pushing and prodding turned into shoving as namecalling and mudslinging were daily events. Political action committees contributed heavily to the campaigns, and new Christian conservative groups were brought to the limelight. Two debates sponsored by the League of Women Voters were held: The first, between Ronald Reagan and John Anderson on September 21 in Baltimore, and the second between Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter. Polls were a big factor, predicting a very close race - too close to call until election night - when an apparent Conservative landslide was underway. With Reagan capturing 489 electoral votes and Carter getting 49, Ronald Wilson Reagan was elected the 40th President of the United States.

by Republican challenger Stan Parris. An Independent challenger, Deborah Frantz, figured prominently in the close 8th District race. Students were able to get involved, as the congressional candidate's campaign offices were right in the nearby vicinity. It was also convenient because many seniors had election projects, and part of the requirements were to volunteer time to a candidate's campaign in order to get valuable experience.

...Get set...GO! And they were off in a spirit of enthusiasm on Class Night. Sponsered by the SGA on January 14, members from grades seven through twelve met in the gym to compete in a wide variety of odd games. Fun and games included the Apple Slobber, Orange Relay, Balloon Stomp, Four-legged Race, Bat Spin and Rope Jump, and Pudding Relay. Skill, expertise, and a steady hand were found helpful, especially in the Pudding Relay. Teachers were at the scene, as they participated in the new Teachers Egg Toss, with winners Mr. Frank Damico and Mr. Will Misner representing the Class of '81. Tug of War was a big hit with all, but the competitive spirit was greatest as the juniors and seniors battled it out, and the juniors gained an upset. With an unusually large cheering crowd of about 600, the Class of '82 went on to a surprise victory, with the Class of '81 capturing second, and the Class of '84 third. Participants and observers joined in the energy and fun of the evening, and once again showed a united spirit.

As Mrs. Nancy Moore's biology class headed for the National Zoo, the doubt in anyone's mind about no field trips erased. In the past teachers were allowed to ask students to donate money to help pay for the trip. This year the only time money can be collected was for club trips or activties. Although the school Board of Directors made this rule, classes did not distress, for on October 21 Mrs. Cindy Neal took her home economics class of twenty to Landmark shopping center. The Mu Alph Theta went to the National Bureau of Standards in Gaithersburg, Maryland. While studying careers, Mrs. Eane's ninth grade English class went to the Washington Post Building and the National Geographic Building in Washington, D.C. on November 26. 'Tis The Season

Holiday cheer burst upon everyone as brightly lit decorations appeared throughout area malls and homes. Students had little free time as they completed papers and tests for school and prepared for holiday festivities. Frantic moments were spent at the malls, fighting tremendous crowds while searching for the perfect presents for loved ones. Students from the Music Department practiced faithfully for their big winter shows. Girls asked their favorite guys to the Snowball Dance held on December 13. Couples danced on snow amidst falling stars and snowflakes as Sound Tech provided the tunes. Keyettes distributed their annual Santa-grams for those who wished to send friends festive messages on December 19. Students from the French Honor Society and others enjoyed themselves as they carolled at area homes with enthusiasm and good cheer. Winter vacation came one day early as an unexpected ice storm cancelled school on December 23, thwarting last minute holiday plans. Smiles, best wishes, and holiday cheer filled the school as everyone united in best holiday form and spirits.

UNIFICATION

Led Zeppelin tee-shirts, cowboy hats and bandanas, purple and gold, shades and shorts, and a cleaner cafeteria were seen throughout the school February second through sixth as the SGA sponsored a schoolwide Bruin Spirit Week. "Bruin Pride" was the theme of the week as the school worked to unite the students as one. As SGA members encouraged students to clean up their trays and trash, the cafeteria became a much better place for students to eat lunch. Rush, Lynyrd Skynyrd, and the Grateful Dead were just a few of the groups displayd proudly on students' chests. Gunshots rang throughout the halls as a gang of SGA gangsterettes held up students dressed for Dallas Day. After being dragged to the SGA office, they were given candy for showing their spirit. The royal colors of purple and gold brightly perked up the school as students wore everything from purple and gold ribbons to purple and gold fingernail polish. The SGA members conducted a survey to find the classes with the highest percentage of people dressed in purple and gold and presented the classes with Carvel ice cream cakes that said, "Way to go Bruins!" As buses arrived for school, everyone had their eyes on the beach bums laying back in their lounge chairs catching rays in front of the school. A strong aroma of Coppertone suntan lotion and coconuts filled the air. Of course, if you didn't get into the beach mood enough with the shades, towels, tube tops, and suntan lotion, maybe the sand in the halls helped put you in the mood. During the week, the subschools decorated the areas as they participated in the contest sponsored by the SGA and first place was awarded to the class of '86. As the week filled with Active Duty came to a close, students sensed more unification in the school.

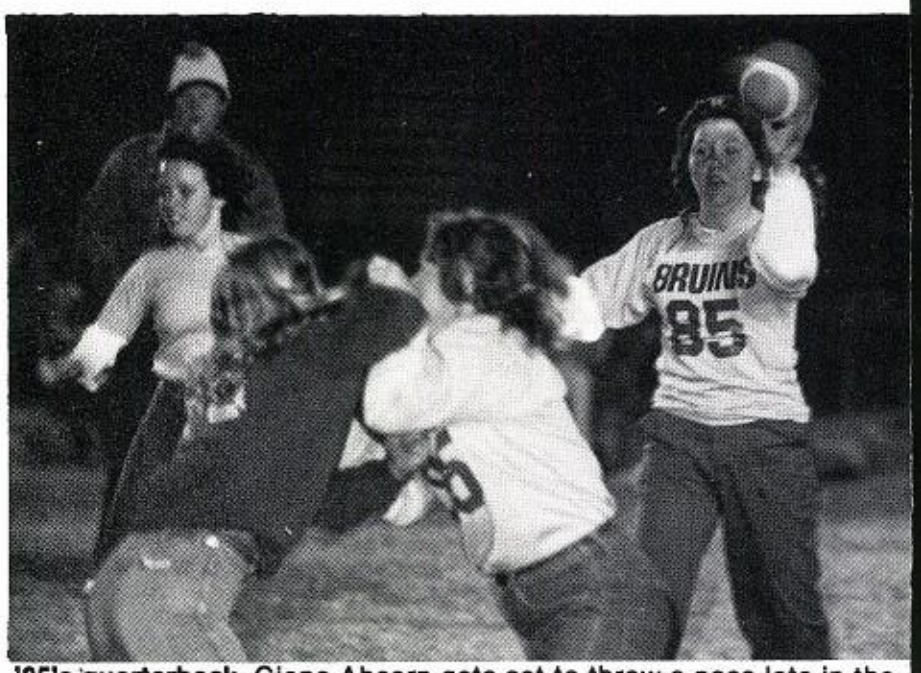
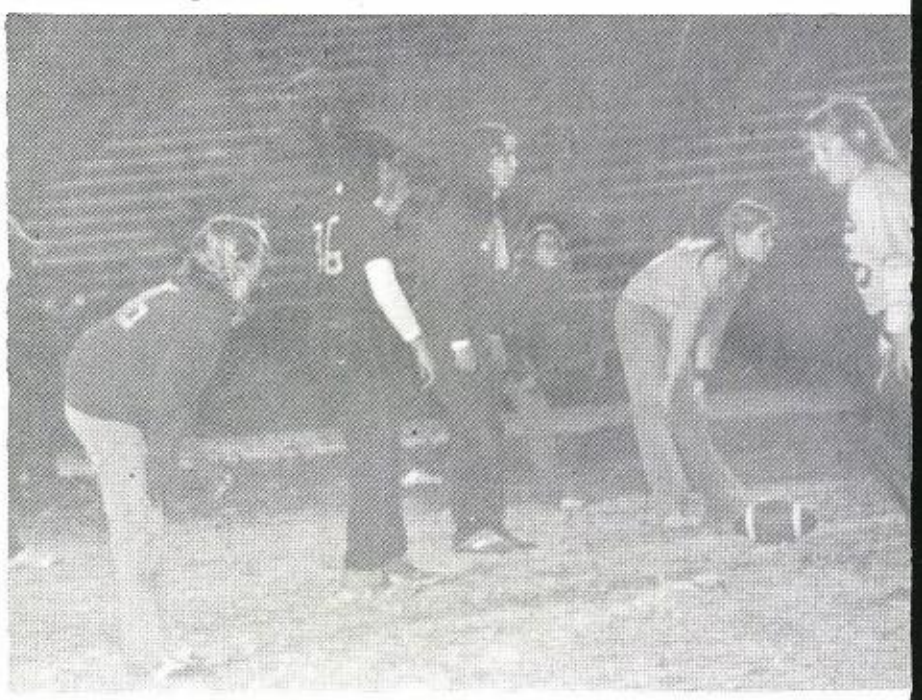
Grudge Matches

The sophomore offense prepares to execute a running play.



'85's quarterback Giana Ahearn gets set to throw a pass late in the intermediate game.



The seventh grade defense waits for the eighth grade offense to line up so they can get in the blitz formation.

Mary Beth Stupke and Martie Bevan help teammate Kristie McGovern make the reception.

The intermediate drill team performs during halftime of the seventh-eighth grade game.

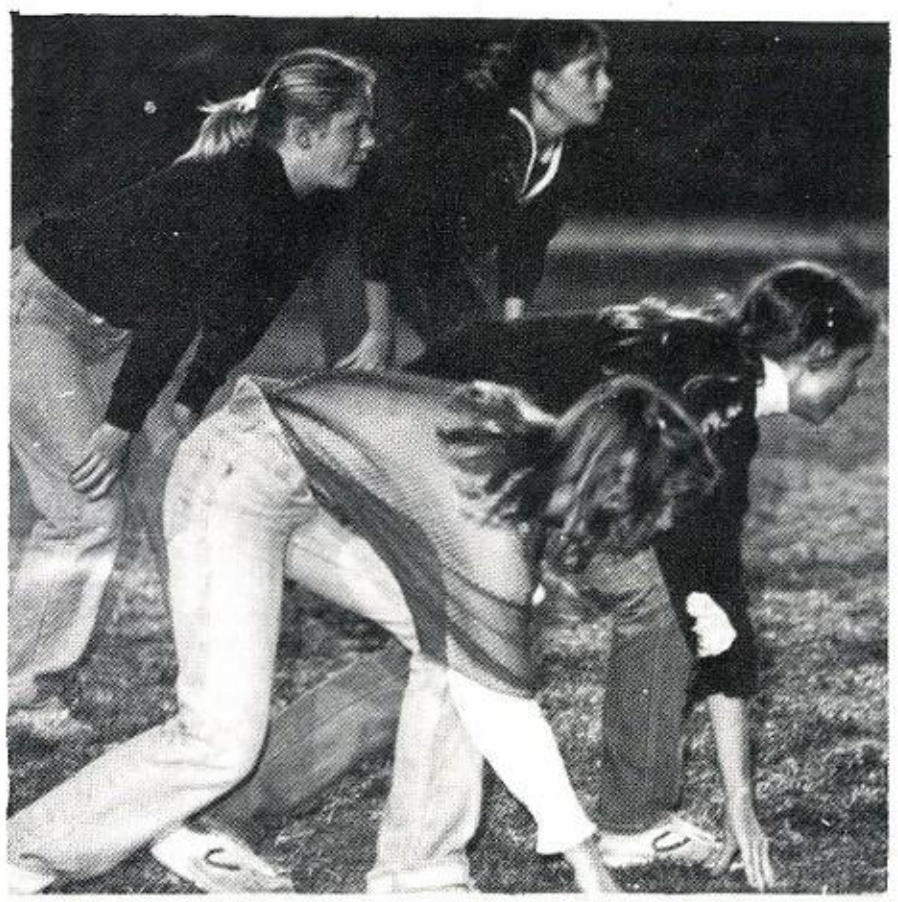
November 10 marked a new addition to the annual Powderpuff Football scene. That night, the intermediates played each other for the first time ever. The Class of '86 scored a touchdown and kicked the extra point. Within the next few minutes, the Class of '85 scored and ran the conversion. The Class of '86 came back and scored before the halftime clock ran out, but missed the extra point. The Class of '85 tied the score 14-14, where it stayed that way until the conclusion of the game.

The freshman-sophomore game was a contrast to the preceding intermediate game. The battle ended in a 0-0 tie, it being called a very defensive game. Class of '83's safety, Tammy Palmer, had three interceptions on the night.

The junior-senior game turned out to be an excellent one for the juniors. On their second possession of the game, quarterback Rhonda Florence threw a 15 yard pass to flanker Paige George who scored in the end zone. The extra point was blocked by the senior defense. The score stayed 6-0 throughout the rest of the game, as the Class of '82 joyfully triumphed over the Class of '81.

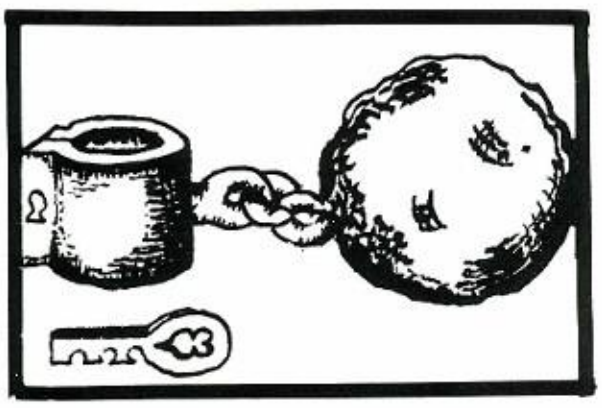
The eighth grade "cheerleaders" valiantly construct a pyramid to cheer their team on.



Freshmen "powderpuffers" line up in offensive formation against the sophomore defense.

Let My People Go

As the United States and Iran sought an agreement for the release of the 52 Americans, the hostage situation dragged on. Conditions for the freeing of the hostages were to pledge noninterference in Iranian affairs, to unfreeze $13 billion in Iranian assets, to cancel all United States claims against Iran, and to return the late Shah's wealth to Tehran.
Although it was believed the Iranians would try to influence the United States' election, the hostages spent their one year anniversary in Iran on election day. Iran's war with Iraq, it was thought, should have speeded up the return of the hostages; however, all 52 Americans were still held captive as the new year began. Videotaped messages were sent to the hostages' families in late December.



Italy Shakes Its Bootie

Italy's worst earthquake in 65 years occurred on November 23, leaving more than 3,000 dead, 2,000 missing, 8,000 injured, and 3,100 homeless. The quake struck some major cities but was concentrated mainly in the rural villages on the ankle of the Italian boot.
Rescue operations began slowly because Italy was unprepared for a disaster of this magnitude. There were no plans and few resources for the rescue teams in the mountain hamlets. Soldiers, firemen, medical supplies, and heavy equipment had to be brought from military bases hundreds of miles north. International help came swiftly. Large quantities of food, clothing, and medical supplies were brought; however, delivery to isolated villages was slow. Many deaths could have been prevented if rescue operations had gotten to the hard-to-reach areas sooner.

John's Gone

Former Beatle John Lennon was shot and killed on December 8 in the lobby of the Dakota, his apartment building in New York. His assailant, Mark David Chapman, called Lennon's name and shot him four times, then stood calmly until police came and arrested him. The police rushed Lennon to the hospital where he died minutes later.
The impact of Lennon's death was overwhelming. Fans were in shock to hear that their idol, who had changed music forever with the Beatles sound, was dead. Hundreds of mourners gathered outside the Dakota the day after he died. Thousands gathered for vigils to pray for his soul. Radio stations played his music all day and had moments of silence in his honor. John was more than an idol—he was a trendsetter, a peacemaker, and a person whom teenagers respected. Although he died, his legend and his accomplishments live forever.

Gun Control Advocate Shot

Dr. Michael Halberstam, a noted cardiologist and author, died in Sibley Memorial Hospital on December 5 after being shot five times by an intruder in his home in Washington. Halberstam immediately went to his car and began driving to the hospital. En route, he saw the burglar and struck him with the car, then resuming his course, hit a tree. A driver took him to the hospital, where he died shortly after arrival. Ironically, Dr. Halberstam was an advocate of gun control and had recently declared in a speech that he did not want to be the next victim of a shooting. He showed great strength in his last moments in trying to apprehend Bernard C. Welch, the burglar.
Welch was overtaken by police shortly after the incident. Police discovered that he was a professional thief with an extensive record, who had eluded the law in at least seven states in the previous six years. He had escaped from jail six years earlier and was linked to many robberies in the Northern Virginia area where he had resided for five years. He stole the finest silver, expensive jewelry, furs, and genuine antiques from wealthy people's homes. His home was a spacious ranch in an expensive area, and his neighbors thought he was an investor.
Police found Welch's vast amount of loot in the basement of his home. People whose homes had been robbed stood in long lines waiting to identify their belongings. Tight security was used in allowing the people to see the goods, and it was months before the evidence was returned to the owners.

Labor Pains

Workers' strikes in Poland continued into the new year as Solidarity, the national federation of Poland's new independent unions and ten million workers, demanded political liberalization. In September, Stanislaw Kania replaced Edward Gierek as the Polish party boss. Because this action implied that the Soviets were gaining too much power in Poland, Western European nations were uneasy. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization in December issued a warning to the Soviets that if they intervened any further in Poland, NATO would take action because the detente would be broken. NATO, wary of the Soviets in Afghanistan, wanted to prevent any invasion in Poland.

Living conditions in Poland during the strikes were deplorable. Food, gas, and other supplies were scarce and high priced. Still, the workers, led by Lech Walesa, continued to protest and to challenge the Communist system.

The Poles acted very bravely in standing up for their cause against the Soviet power. Although they feared Soviet intervention, which could cause an international crisis of great dimensions, they persisted for their rights.

Towering Inferno

The second worst hotel fire in the United States history occurred at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas on November 21. Eighty-four people were killed, mainly from smoke inhalation, and 700 others were injured. The public was enraged by the hotel's failure to heed the urgings of fire officials to install sprinkler systems and smoke alarms. The fire brought a greater awareness of the dangers involved in the more than 12,000 hotel and motel fires in the United States each year.

HONORABLE DISCHARGE

It was like a dream come true! It took eleven long years of hard work and determination, but after being "the underclassmen" for so long, we were ready to step into our roles as Seniors. The last year raced by as we prepared for life in the real world, and we soon completed the twelve year enlistment that was required of each of us. Although many of us faced an even greater challenge in the years ahead, we were all happy to receive our honorable discharge from Secondary School.

Picasso ?

Though it may have taken Picasso several months to complete one painting, members of the Class of '81 finished their masterpiece in nearly six hours. Approximately thirty bleary eyed volunteers assembled early in the morning on August 28 to carry on the annual Senior tradition. Though it may have appeared as a one ring circus to curious onlookers, it was really the LEGAL painting of the pressbox. The more daring painters took it upon themselves to climb the ladders and to lean over the top while others did their part by painting around the bottom of the pressbox and the concession stand. Using paint supplied by the school, the Seniors sparked off their year with a new coat of paint, a golden 81, and a good feeling for the new year.

Tête - a - tête

After years of hard work the students of the Class of '81 reached the coveted status of seniors. However, all was not rosy at the top. To smooth the way for them, the administration came up with a Senior Advisory Program. Each student was assigned to a teacher that he could go to for information or assistance. No formal time was allotted for the program. Rather, each student dropped in to have a person-to-person talk with his advisor and to pick up necessary information. With this needed cooperation between teachers and students many problems were settled, and the seniors had more opportunities to enjoy their final year of high school.

Together as 81

When asked, "Where did all the Seniors go?", the answer was easy-to the gym! Why? Well, it was time for the big event. Seniors were going to have their Senior Class picture taken. On September 24, during break, Seniors left the usual last minute cramming and putting finishing touches on their homework to make their way down to the gym. As they walked in, teachers lined the students up in the shape of a giant 81. After everyone was in place, photographers focused their cameras and snapped the picture. Although it was difficult to distinguish individual students in the photo, Seniors were proud to be a part of the giant 81.

Shutter-bugged

Flashes of light occasionally illuminated the darkened room. On the floor wires snaked in all directions and lay in tangled coils. Voices could be heard saying, "That's it...A little to the left now...Tilt your head just a bit." To any casual observer the health rooms during the month of September must have seemed chaotic. But to the Senior Class members who were having their pictures taken everything seemed orderly and exciting. True there were some delays in the photographers' schedules, but seniors took advantage of this time by talking and relaxing. For many seniors the memory of sitting stiffly on a stool and clutching a slipping drape or crackling tuxedo marked the beginning of events that moved them to graduation.

With the resignation of Mrs. Pam Wentworth in late September, the Senior Class was unable to participate in any future activities. Because of a conflict in values between the class and Mrs. Wentworth, the Class of '81 changed sponsors for the first time in three years. Prior to Homecoming, there was excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages at the flower-making parties. After being given sufficient warning, the class failed to resolve the problem, and therefore Mrs. Wentworth did not want to be further associated with the class. Several students then immediately set out to find a new sponsor. After being approached, Mr. Damico and Mr. Misner decided to team up and take on this position. They felt they could benefit the class better by sharing the responsibilities, thus enabling both the class and sponsors to do more.

Fringe benefits?

Becoming a Senior did not bring any great changes. All the privileges of the Senior class slowly dwindled into virtual non-existence. The OISH system, which was established several years previous, was abandoned because of abuse on the part of Seniors in past years. Although there was some discussion about reinstating a modified program, the change never became effective. The Senior Cafe was still set aside for seniors. However, most Seniors were scheduled to have "D" lunch, which resulted in overcrowding the stage. This left other lunch shifts open for anyone to use the area designated for Seniors. Most Seniors were disappointed that there weren't more fringe benefits to add to their Senior year.

Last Wills

For many of us, our Senior year marked the end of the beginning. To symbolize this ending, several Seniors left behind the following wills:

I, David Lehman, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will to a worthy Senior, all of my tests in Trig for future reference and a copy of my perfect papers to "aid" the student in AC II. The remainder of my belongings and wealth shall go to my pet parakeet "Herbert." If Herbert bites it before I do, I wish for my wealth to go to a charitable cause such as the Strohs Brewing Company.

I, Tom Barrett, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will all my albums to Mr. Martin, my school books to those who cast them upon me, a lock of my hair to the winner of a lottery, my collection of stolen passes to a good forger, and my wrestling shoes to anyone dumb enough to take them.

I, Debby Hunter, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will an optimistic outlook on life to Bill, wishes for the best Junior year to Melon, strawberry daiquiries for everyone, cold nights for all "cuddlers," and a will to survive for those we leave behind.

I, Renee Brown, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will my Florida drivers' license with removeable picture to all minors and to my friends, Cupid with the itchy bow finger. I've given him some target practice, so GOOD LUCK!

We, Chris Metress and Brannon Smith, being of sound minds and even more sound bodies do hereby will our forementioned bodies to the Amazon Women Scientific Society, a Bible to Dave Monroe, our nasty black book on cheerleaders to Kay Mikula, and finally, yesterday's homerun for tomorrow's ballgame to Coach Mike Wells.

Grave Decisions

s there life after high school? Several Seniors had their doubts, so they left behind the following wills:

, Kathy Rafferty, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will the Playgirl calendar in our locker (a collector's item) to all of you who aren't lucky enough to have friends who work at Drug Fair.

, Don Samuels, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will my brother to all the girls in the school. May they live happily ever after.

I, Shawn Johnson, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will my white cowboy hat worn in "Annie Get Your Gun" to be placed with a rifle above the theatre for all to see, and to my brother Quin, I will the possession that saw more action than any battle in WW II, my car.

I, Cindy Perkins, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will to Louis Fancher an 8X10 autographed glossy of my brother and a bronzed tennis shoe worn during a winning race.

I, Shawn Thorton, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will my Spanish workbook to Maria Cupp so she will have one and to Mike Graham, my weight set. And to all future teachers of my brother, I leave my patience.

I, JoAnne Rossi, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will Q107 to Mark Luther, overtime to future yearbook staff members, and my position as Legal Consultant for the FGSS to anyone worthy of it.

I, Eileen McBriarty, being of sound mind and working on a sound body, do hereby will my purse and all the girl problems he deserves to Billy "Gigolo" Fleming and my Rocky Horror Album to the '82 Lair staff so they can get kinky during late deadlines.

I, David B. Monroe, being of sound mind and body (?), do hereby will my basketball jersey to Coach Wells, my tennis shoe collection to Chris Metress, and all of my good "stuff" to my buddy Brian Hanchey.

I, Sean Patrick McCaffrey, being of the soundest mind and body, do hereby will to my confused 11th grade English teacher, Mr. Axelrod, a Texas A&M bumper sticker, and to all the students of tomorrow, good luck and if you pray real hard, when you die, you might get lucky and go to Texas.

Like it or not

As the senior class members approached their high school graduation, they expected to face new problems and to take on more responsiblities. At that time, many seniors also turned eighteen, and they were regarded as adults in the eyes of the government. The consequences of turning eighteen were felt much more by males than by females. Laws were passed requiring men to register for the draft when they reached the age of eighteen. Reactions to these laws varied among the seniors. Some took the matter in stride, feeling that registration was only a formality. However, other seniors feared that registration would lead to a peace-time draft. No matter how individuals felt on the subject, registration was evidence of the responsibilities seniors would have to face in the future.

First Step

At first it was just a piece of mail, but after discovering its contents, an early excitement about graduation was sparked. The buzzing sounds of "Did you get your announcements order form yesterday?" and "What are you going to get?", could be heard around ordering time. Seniors were given the opportunity to buy announcements, name cards, memory books, and senior keys, which would keep a lasting memory of their last year at Lake Braddock. On November 18 and 19 in the basketball concession stand, individual orders were placed as seniors made their first preparations for graduation.

Rocky road

Dreams of ivy covered walls, sororities, fraternities, and college life invaded the thoughts of most seniors in their final year. But dreaming of college life and actually taking part in college life were two different things. The prospective applicant was faced with a seemingly endless amount of paperwork to complete before he or she could even think of attending college. Upon being confronted with one or two paragraphs to write per application, most seniors felt helpless. Paragraphs were meant for English class, not for college applications. So what did most seniors do? They procrastinated. They completed the application part by part always puting off the dreaded paragraphs. It was only with the help of parents and counselors that applications were finally mailed. For many seniors their applications were the first signs of the rocky road to a college education.

Hear Ye

If Paul Revere had had a bulletin board as good as the Class of '81's, he wouldn't have had to ride around yelling all night. Fortunately, seniors had better communication. They utilized the bulletin board, on the staircase between SS 5 and SS 6 to relay information to the upper-classmen. Each month, the board was decorated primarily by Andrea Wilbur, while other members of the class added to it by posting their own announcements of upcoming meetings and activities. In an easily accessible spot, the board provided a vital line of communication to approximately 800 seniors, making them a more well-informed and active class.

The Bar

While "having a Coke and a smile," the students were "beautiful people" when they purchased a snack from "the ultimate bar," the Senior Snack Bar. Every day at 2:30, "all hands loved M & M's" as well as other delicious confections offered by the Class of '81. The money earned was saved in order to pay for the Senior Prom, helping to relieve the problem of a "tough price to pay for a 'tender' evening." Even though the band and athletic departments installed soda machines early in the year, the upperclassmen's franchise continued its popularity by providing a variety of concessions. Even with this competition, "Any way you sliced it," the students liked having the bar. Besides..."nobody could do it like the Seniors could!"

Frostbite

The mountain glistened as the sun shone on the crystal snow. The air was cold, but there was a warmth felt by all as the skiiers raced down the slopes or rested by a roaring fire. Although the trip was not school sponsored, approximately seventy seniors and twenty juniors travelled to Sugarbush, Vermont for four days of fine skiing during the semester break. Organized by Cindy Perkins and Ann Yanoshik, the group left Friday evening, January 23. Upon arriving at Sugarbush, the students checked into the Alpen Inn and then hit the slopes. Novices and experts alike took this opportunity to perfect their techniques and the exhausted but satisfied crowd returned home Wednesday morning after a long twelve hour bus ride. Ann Yanoshik commented, "It was lots of hard work, but it was worth it in the end."

Once Upon a Time ...

...There were a lot of students who took school very seriously and got good grades. But, as their senior year rolled around, they became involved in other activities. Some had part time jobs, others were involved in sports, and some were just dedicated to having fun. School was at the bottom of their list of priorities. They banded together to form the FGSS (Former Good Students Society). FGSS had no meetings, nor sponsor, and held no activities. The fifty members were chosen at the recommendation of the officers. The only requirement was a pledge to live by the motto: Homework Comes Last.

T.G.I.F.

Six o'clock in the morning the alarm clock went off. Senior cautiously opened one eye and peered around the room. It was still dark and cold. How much longer to go? Eight and a half hours or 510 minutes or 30,600 seconds were left in the school day. Senior struggled out of bed and groaned as his feet hit the cold floor. He stumbled into the bathroom to take a shower, dressed, and then went to get breakfast. Finally, after almost missing the bus, Senior made it to school. First period was a real eye opener with a four page test. After that first ordeal, second and third periods passed painlessly enough. Fourth period was next; half of the day was over. Two and a half hours of school were left. The countdown began: 45 minutes, 15 minutes, five, four, three, two, one! The glorious sound of a bell could be heard ringing in the distance. Senior raised his eyes towards heaven--alook of pleasure and relief spread over his face,TGIF!

The media center provides a quiet place for Keith Hale and Mark Griffin to do research.

Classy Threads

Even when "held hostage", the Class of '81 was "dressed to a T." In December, the height of Bruin fashion was reached when the senior T-shirts came in. For the cost of $7.50, the upperclassmen were able to wear the garb which stated "I get released from Lake Braddock jail on June 1981" and then listed the names of most of the senior class. Later in the month, the thought of graduation was rekindled when the class members were fited for caps and gowns. Unlike the previous year's seniors who bought their robes, the officers decided to rent the outfits. With the clothing that the seniors were outfitted in, the Class of '81 was able to complete the year, "Dressed to Graduate."

En Pointe

As we were a melting pot of talent, our school could boast of many creative people. One such person was senior Tina Clark. Tina had been dancing since the age of twelve and achieved much success in her career. During the summers of '77 and '78, she attended the School of American Ballet in New York. When she was 16, she attended the American Ballet Theater School and then became a soloist for the Festival Ballet of R.I. Among many other honors, she spent her senior year in the released-time program of the Washington Ballet School and performed with the Washington Ballet Company in The Nutcracker. In the future, Tina plans to join a ballet company and make dancing her career. According to Tina, "Ballet is sort of like an addiction. Once you start intensely, you can't stop."

Down in the slumps

Everyone knew it was coming, teachers as well as students. But there was nothing to be done! Shortly after Christmas vacation, the inevitable occurred. Most seniors, if not all, were well into the strange phenomenon known as "Senior Slump." Once the first semester grades had been sent into the colleges of their choice, seniors took a break and completed only what was absolutely necessary. No amount of prodding on the part of teachers seemed to have any effect on the students. Once the college acceptance letter arrived, there was no turning back; high school no longer mattered.

After Hours

What did seniors do after school and on weekends? Going to parties was the most popular pastime. However, students participated in a variety of more formal activities, including functions for school clubs, sports, and part-time employment. Besides looking good on college applications, extensive participation in extra-curricular activities was a good way to meet new people and even to do some service for others. Athletic teams required a great deal of time and dedication, but it was very rewarding to the individual when he received school-wide recognition. Part-time jobs provided the necessary funds for gasoline, clothes, entertainment, and beverages. Extra-curricular activities varied as each student had his or her own interests.

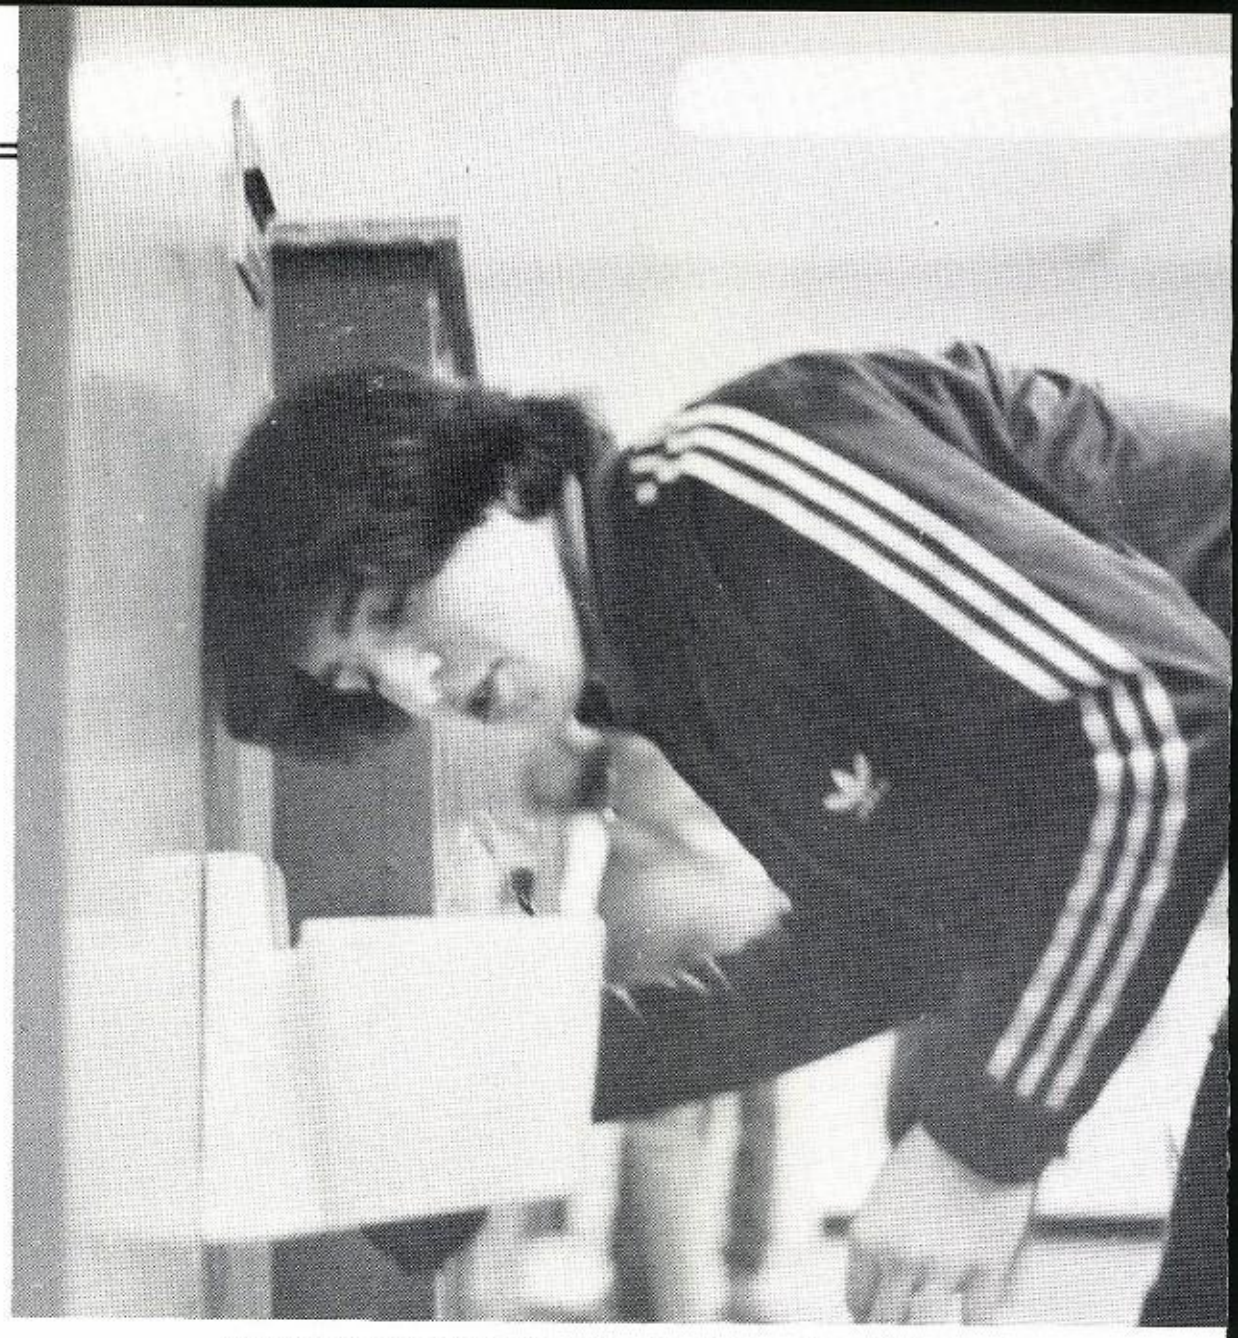
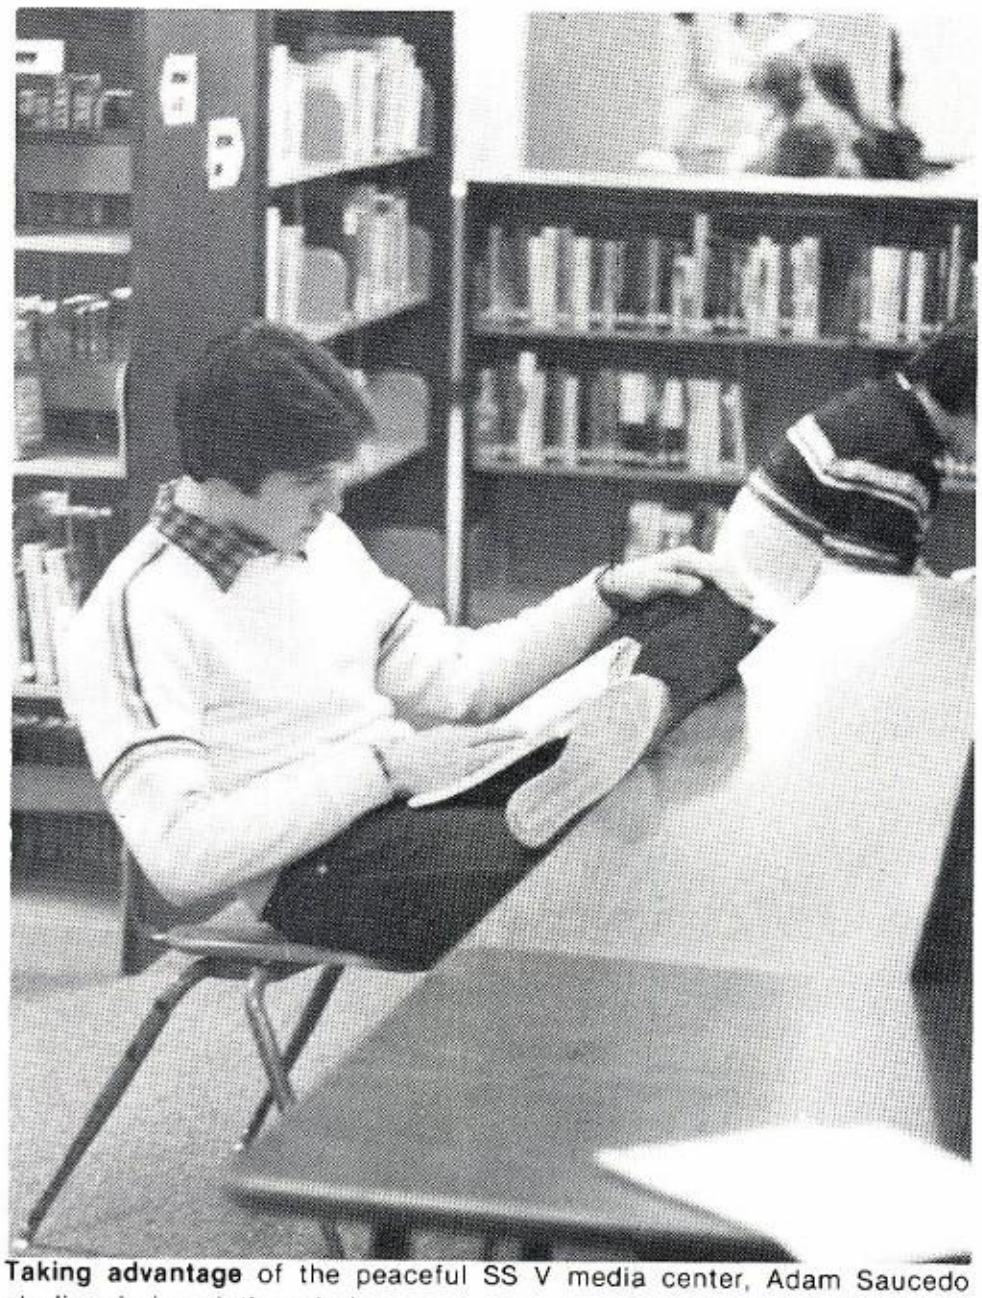
Taking time to study, Karl Fuchs escapes in the media center.

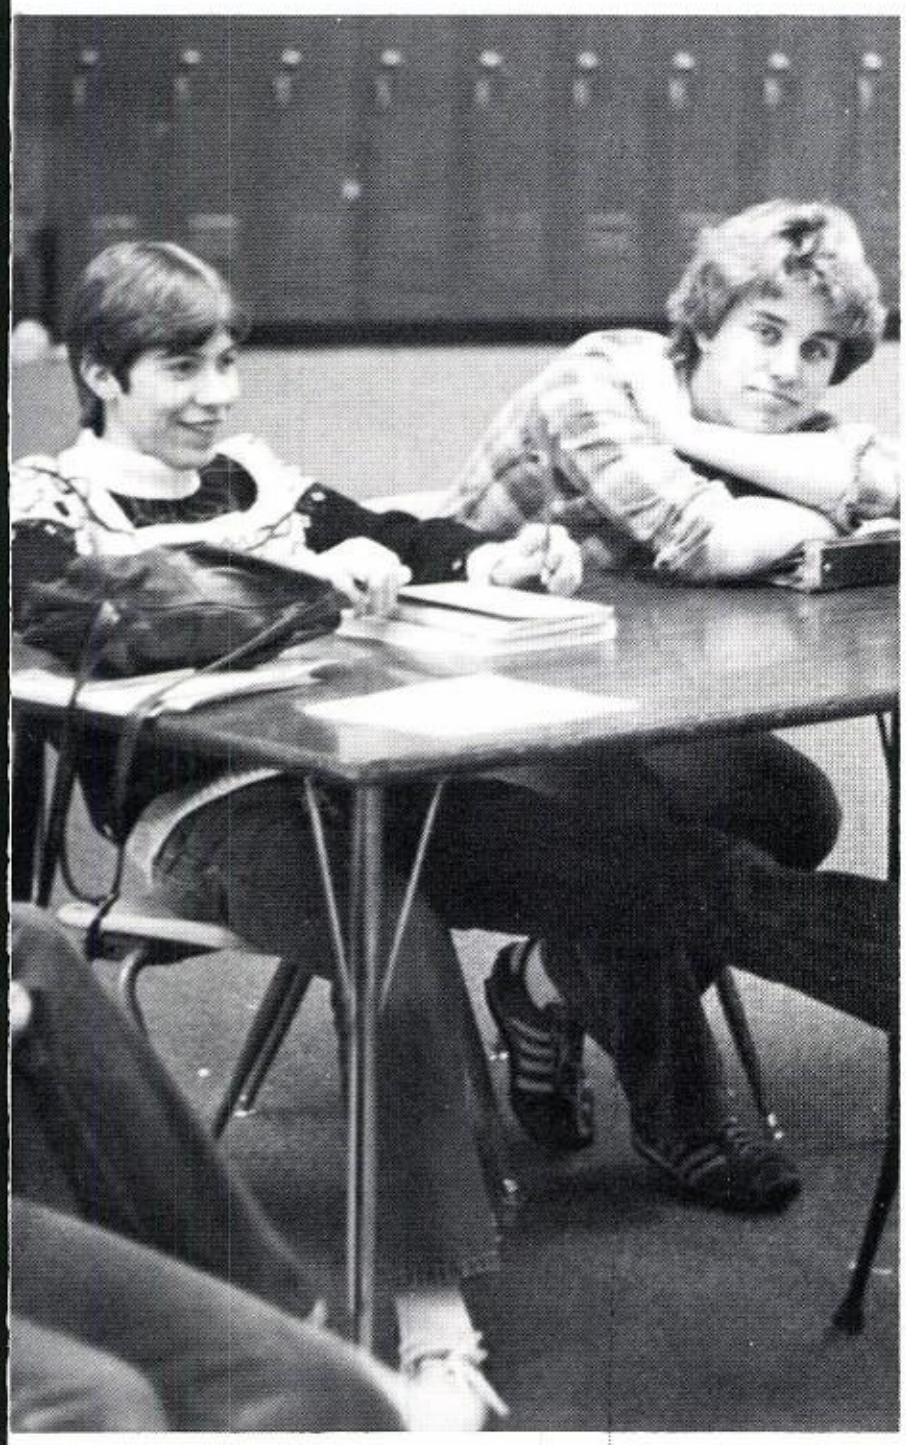


In need if some refreshment, Mario Velez gets a drink of water.

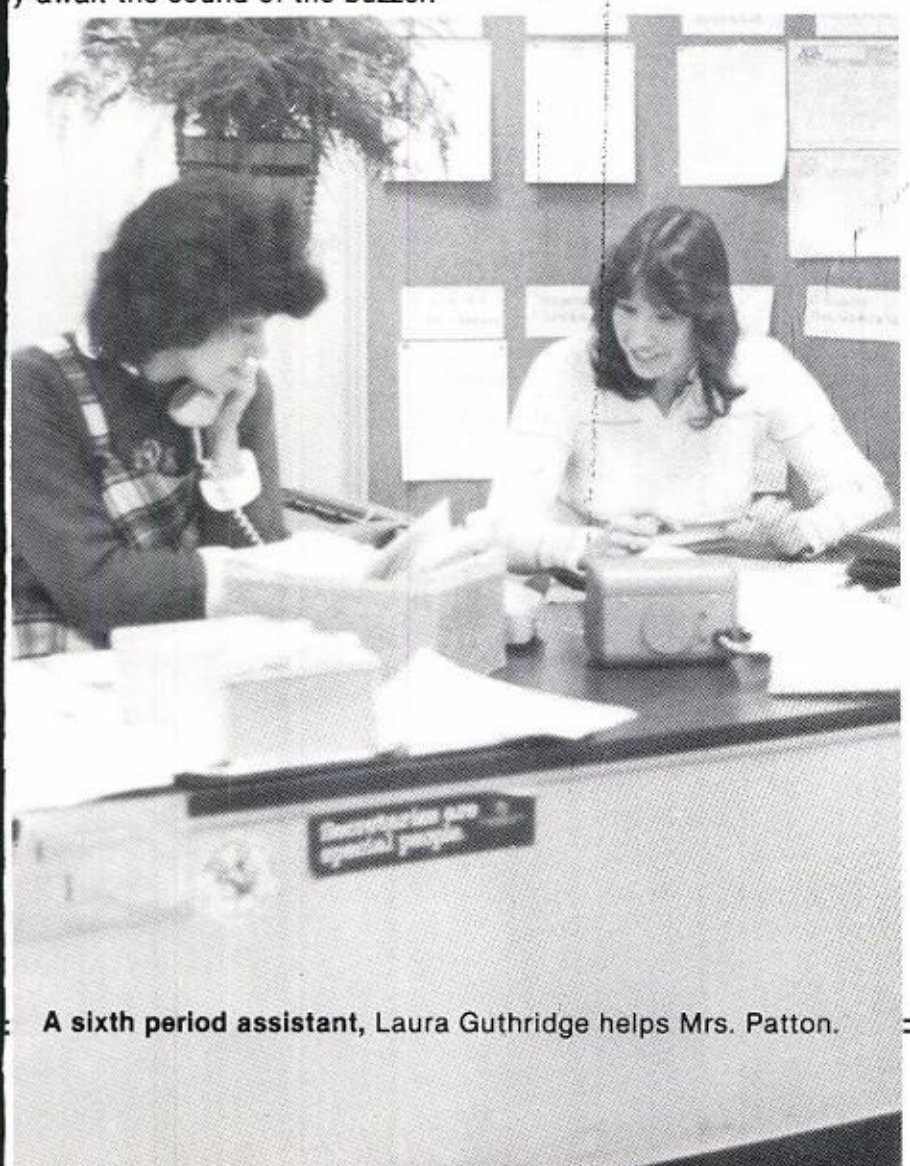


Taking advantage of the peaceful SS V media center, Adam Saucedo studies during sixth period.

Leaning over the rail, Mary Beth Watson good-bye to a friend.



With 2:30 approaching soon, Tony DiPalma and Chris Rowe anxiously await the sound of the buzzer.



A sixth period assistant, Laura Guthridge helps Mrs. Patton.

Fated

What does the future hold in store for you? Several seniors were asked to predict what they and their friends would be doing in the year 2000, and decided that fate would play the following roles in their lives:

Mike Cullerton will be assassinated for trying to become the emperor of the U.S.

Steve Weedman will be convicted of the killing of Mike Cullerton, given a suspended sentence, and an appointment to the Supreme Court.

Shelly McCollum, Yvonne Parsons, and Koko Rahn will be go-go girls at Jim's Bar & Grill.

Jim Lull will be proprietor of Jim's Bar & Grill.

Kayleen Fitzgerald will become the second Irish Catholic President running on a platform similar to that of Kennedy's.

Brendan Sullivan will become a product test manager for Izod Lacoste.

Renee Brown will win the Nobel Peace Prize for finding a cure for the common cold.

Ken Frager will become vice-president in charge of testing for Ron Bacardi, Inc.

Ed Vanderhoeven will be an alcohol saturated bum residing on the third park bench of the left side of the main path in Central Park, New York, N.Y.

Eileen McBriarty will uncover major scandal in President Dave Monroe's administration and become the second woman president.

Tina Clark will be married to Mikhail Baryshnikov.

Rick Tiene still won't worry about anything.

Laura Grunawalt will be riding the Black Stallion on the sandy shores of Bora Bora.

Mary Beth Watson's husband will become the first 8 star admiral of the Navy, thus reinstating the old saying, "Behind every great man, there is a great woman."

INFANTRY

The student body, like the citizens of the U.S., has pulled together this past year. Unity and spirit were stressed repeatedly in an effort to put a great school and nation back on its feet. It was only fitting, since the country and our school had so much in common, for the classes were patterned after the infantry of the army. Like the infantry, classes, represented the largest portion of the student body. The infantry, like classes, stressed unity, spirit, and togetherness. It was only fitting that classes be represented as a very unified sector. Infantry more than fulfilled such a requisite. It was nice to see two great powers (L.B. and U.S.) unify and show the world how powerful they really were.

October 16 and 17 were the last times the Class of '82 had to take the SRA tests. From 8:15 to 11:00 a.m. we sat uncomfortably in the cafeteria or little theater filling in the small circles on our testing sheets with our number two pencils. After the testing was over,the teachers passed out brochures and order forms for the class rings. For the next week, the main topic of conversation was,"which ring are you getting?" It was very tough to make a decision on which color of stone and which cut to order. Scott Diddel was a little unhappy with the selection and cost of the rings, saying that his brother's class of the previous two years had a much better selection and cost them less than the present one hundred dollar average. The majority of us were quite satisfied with the selection and were looking forward to the ring breakfast in early May.

What was there for a junior to do on a school night when homework had been finished and T.V. offered nothing but reruns? Why, go to a flower making party, of course! "Even though there were lots of people who came to the flower making parties to eat munchies and play pool rather than making flowers, the parties were still a complete success," said Liz Burns. Robin Renwick, class president, kept the flower makers going with the fluffing of flowers while others took a break. At the end of each party, we were always proud that we had filled another two or three garbage bags with tissue flowers. On weekends and after school we used the flowers to carefully construct the float of a Bruin representing the Statue of Liberty, that won first place and the twenty five dollar prize in the float contest.

Weekend Rage

Becoming a Junior was almost like being promoted from a lieutenant colonel to a full colonel. Hard work and new responsibilities came our way and right along beside them came all the good times. Being a Junior meant having to look ahead and start to think about the future- which college to go to, SAT's, and trying to keep a job and your grades up to par at the same time. Life was frustrating at times, but the weekends made it a little easier to cope. We always wanted to go out, whether it was to a party, a movie, or just driving around, which we did seldom because of the high cost of gas. "All in all, our junior year started out as a total blast," commented Christy White.

Real?

On October 29 Mrs. Palay's and Mr. Sutherland's A.C. 1 classes went on a field trip...but they never left the school. Following the county's new policy which stated teachers could not collect money from students for field trips or movies, the teachers came up with the idea of an in-school field trip. They divided their block classes into twelve groups. The groups received slides of various parts of colonial Williamsburg, researched them and taped a speech for their presentation. On the day of the field trip, the students took time to taste colonial delicacies such as pies, cakes, cookies and breads which were made by some of the students. After eating, the groups went around and viewed the other presentations. Kevin Burtnett said,"It was very interesting and a great learning experience!"

Rings of Life

"Stronger by circles I grow, weaker by cycles I die. Letting the symmetry flow, up from the roots to the sky. Fed by the fires of the earth, sweet osmosis come quench my thirst. Just one more deep drink for me, one more ring of life around this tree.

I'm moving, improving my view, claiming my right to the sun. Adding on is nothing new, when it all adds up to one. Two, three, four more points in time, these all become well spaced lines. Curving a pattern through me, one more ring of life around this tree.

Ring around the roses,
Pocketful of poses
Ashes, ashes, we all fall down."

Young Chefs

As Juniors, we were allowed to undergo an extensive course in culinary cuisine. Learning to cook crepes, soups, and breads served as preparation for the gourmet feast. Students of gourmet foods classes worked diligently on their menu. Planning the entire meal gave students first hand experience in preparing their own formal four course dinner. After writing menus and planning meals, each group did the shopping for the tantalizing dinner. Learning to cook was supplemented with lessons ranging from proper table setting to buying china. After completing all these steps, the young chefs,along with a distinguished faculty member, sat down and enjoyed their meal as it was served to them by other class members.

New Man

At the beginning of November the junior class was told that Janette Caldwell, class treasurer, would be moving to Portland, Oregon after the Thanksgiving holiday. To fill the position we had a special election. After listening to speeches, reading posters, and deciding whom to vote for, we cast our ballots during lunch. The first election results eliminated Audrey Short from the race and caused a run-off between Paula Cullerton and Jay Garant. After the ballots had been counted we had a new treasurer for the remainder of the school year, Jay Garant.

Hemlock

Imagine having Lake Braddock as your base school, but never going there for classes. This is how it was for Richard Brodeur, John Kahlil, Eric Langin, Sammy Nickles, John Romagna, Russel Scott, David Shawver, and Mike Smith. They caught the bus at Woodson and went to Hemlock Job Site in Clifton everyday to do masonry, bricklaying, and construction. Of course their day wasn't just filled with hard labor, they had to take basic English and math classes. The group had classes outside under the trees when the weather permitted and in trailers when it didn't. The students were building seven dorms and one dining hall for Boy Scout and Girl Scout camps. Upon graduating, they received a diploma for advanced bricklaying which would serve as a great help to get good construction jobs.

"... so everytime you go driving, remember your IPDE strategy for driving." " Wow! that was really interesting! Identify, Predict, Decide, Execute,I didn't know driving was so complicated." These were the words of our sophomores taking driver's ed. Driver's education was a nine week course, replacing P.E., that was offered to sophomores approaching the age of 16. Following classroom driver's ed, a behind-the-wheel course was given to complete the process to get a license. Learning to drive was just one more milestone on the road to responsibility and independence.

On The Same Level

You want to know where the 10th grade office is? Well, it's in SS IV. Aren't ninth and tenth grades together? No. The subschools were divided, with SS III for ninth graders, and SS IV for tenth graders. The separation was made to promote class unity. Did it work? Sure it did. All students liked being together with their class instead of being segregated from their friends, due to differences in last names. Gary Richardson said,"I like it better like this. In seventh and eighth grade SS I did some things SS II didn't do, and vice versa. This way, the whole class does the same thing. It's a lot more unified."

83's Paw Print

How did the sophomores keep informed on class events and decisions? They created a class newsletter. The sophomore newsletter, called "83's Paw Print", was started to keep sophomores up on class events. Students contributed articles, poems, and other fun things. The newsletter held a contest to find the "case of spirits". A student from Mrs. Strokes' sixth period class said the contest was "pretty fun". "I'm pleased with the results", Mrs. Stokes said. " With the students participating, it makes the newsletter more special."

Student Bulletin

Sophomores really made an effort to get more unity and class spirit. Like the intermediates, sophomores had a class council. This council was made up of representatives from each English class. The students discussed future plans, talked about problems, and promoted class spirit. Sophomores also had a bulletin board that kept the students informed, and tied the class together. "We're really proud of our accomplishments," Mrs. Joan Strokes said, "We really made an effort to unify the class."

Tests, Tests, Tests

They weren't something to study for, and they didn't go on report cards. They did, however, have a lot to do with shaping futures. That's why sophomores couldn't help being worried about DAT's and SRA's. DAT's, or Differential Aptitude Tests, were tests to measure students' aptitude in their areas of interest. They were given over a two day period, October 28 and 29. Two weeks later SRA's were given to sophomores. these tests were given to measure the students' ability in reading comprehension, science, and math. Both tests were nerve-wracking, but the results were well worth it. Sophomores had the opportunity to measure themselves against national and state scores to see how they compared with other students in their grade.

A Better Place

Five bullet wounds ended the life of a great songwriter and performer. John Lennon, formerly of the Beatles, was gunned down in front of his apartment on December 8. It was a shock to many people in Lake Braddock. The halls were sprinkled with a variety of solemn faces and teary eyes of people reflecting what John Lennon meant to them. John Lennon would be missed by many; his messages in his songs were a great inspiration. In appreciation of his memory, John Campbell, a junior, wrote a poem about John Lennon. Everyone felt a great emptiness due to this tragic and unnecessary loss, but somehow, John Lennon would always be with us...

His lyrical protest shaped the minds of the young Searching for the answers in the songs that he sung
The man who loved the peace,
Shot down in his tracks,
Remember the music,
Because he'll never be back.
I hope you've found a better place.

J.R. for President?

In this election year, many students were concerned about the major candidates. When asked what they thought of Anderson, Carter, or Reagan for President, sophomores gave the following replies: "I hated them all," said Eddie Richardson. "I wanted J.R. for President." "I was for Reagan," Steve Saunders replied. "I was glad he won." Other apathetic and uninformed replies ranged from "I don't care," to "How should I know?" Many sophomores, however, were keeping track of the Presidential race. Sophomores may not have been old enough to vote, but they were very tuned in to the political scene.

The Last Year

Whew! It's all over! I don't have to take P.E. anymore! Sophomores let out a sigh of relief as the year came to a close. Physical Education was no longer a required course after tenth grade. The course included health, Driver's Ed., and a variety of sports. If a student wished to take P.E. as an elective, he could. Many students enjoyed taking P.E., but for most Sophomores, this year marked the end of phys ed.

Bigger & Better

Besides just being able "to hang with the big guys", freshmen found they were granted many more privileges and opportunities than before. The smoking lounge was just one of the new and strange territories they could start exploring. They could now type in the business department,"sprechen Deutsch" in the foreign language department, and take other courses before banned to them as intermediates. By composing complimentary resumes of their impeccable characters, they were able to try out for the Key Club, Keyettes, Tri-Hi-Y, and other service clubs. Now graduated from the stereotyped "sevie-land", they have opened many doors toward enriching their high school years.

Going for the Gold

According to the Class of '84, the Bruins hardly boycotted the Summer Olympics. In corporating the Homecoming theme "Bruin Pride", two Oakton dummies played their parts well lying dead on the second and third levels of the olympic stage. Barney Bruin, of course, "went for the gold" as he stood victoriously on the first platform of the '84 float.

Although involvement with the float was a problem, it wasn't due to a lack of flower-making parties, according to president Sandy Timmeny. Legally out for a weekend or two, the freshmen took a cue from the upperclassmen and did more partying than flower-making. Taking advantage of this situation, the class officiers decided to charge for the refreshments at one of these parties. Ironically, the freshmen made up for the lack of flowers by adding a little "gold" to their class treasury.

The Rat Race

Place your bets, folks! Choose your colors, choose your mouse! Easy to win; where would you go if you were a mouse?

To escape the rain on a soggy Saturday afternoon, the Class of '84 moved their Fall Follies booth indoors. Dedicated gamblers bet on which colored hole one of the three mice would scamper into for a bite of cheese. A good turn-out, plenty of class participation, and a $38 profit made the afternoon a success. Unfortunately, before the gambling fever cooled off, the three mice pooped out, and were sold for seventy-five cents apiece.

And they're off!

Vetoed

Swamped with Homecoming details and worried about the last minute Fall Follies entry, president Sandy Timmeny gazed through a stack of paperwork at a room full of bored and apathetic freshmen council members. This seemed to be the basic caliber of past council meetings that prompted the reforms made in late November. Previous members tended to be disinterested representatives, hastily chosen by the various World Studies teachers. In order to increase class involvement and production, the class officers decided to wipe the slate clean and rebuild the council by holding an election. By doing this, they hoped to attract enthusiastic and out-going council members who would put their time and effort into structuring a "mini student government". "In contrast to the SGA," class sponsor, Mrs. Jackie Deckel, explained, "which is largely 'activity oriented', the freshmen council will air student voices, tackle curricular problems, and continually strive for improvement."

The Wanderer

In a Concorde jet, it might have taken Dave Halsey only an hour to cross the great landscapes of Canada. However, the twenty year old freelance writer finally fulfilled some of his own personal dreams and aspirations by taking the three years needed to cross it on foot. Throughout the 4,700 mile trek, he lived with and learned from prospectors, hunters, trappers, and various members from eight major Indian tribes, which he encountered along the way.

Through the Keedick Agency, Mr. Halsey has traveled the U.S. and Canada as a guest speaker, and in November, 1980, he visted Virginia to give his computerized audio-visual presentation to our freshmen class. To compensate for the $24,000 debt compiled from the expedition, he did charge the class a $100 fee for the assembly. SSIII principal, Bill Watts, picked up half the bill for the class, anxious for them to experience this inspiring young man and his own personal sense of motivation.

'84 Info

In a quiet little corner of SS III there was a box that gave freshmen a chance to drop off their problems, or maybe even to realize a journalistic talent. It was the "Contribution Box" for every freshman wishing to lend a hand in putting together the "'84 Informer". Some contributors wrote letters to Dear Abby, some dedicated songs to someone special, or even related their favorite jokes or riddles. Only those activities and sports events concerning freshmen were approved by editor John Petrillo. Only freshmen were featured in the monthly "Guess Who". These feature articles consisted of interviews and various personal facts from two mystery persons. By not centering it around "Jack Jock" and "Jill Cheerleader", the newsletter turned out to be another significant step toward unifying the Class of '84.

Chris

Chris Choate came to Lake Braddock in 1978, motivated and inspired to overcome his handicap and graduate with his peers. Stricken with rheumatoid arthritis, he was confined to a small motorized car for his transportation. In Chris, the Class of '84 found a working member, dedicated to getting involved. As a freshmen, he served on the student council. Appointed by SS III principal, Mr. Bill Watts, he played the role of "middleman for student affairs", sensitive to student problems and complaints. With Chris' tremendous sense of school pride, Mr. Watts felt "he is setting an inspiring example for other students who don't even make half the contribution that he does".

Active Eighth

They came to serve their class. Elected from their English classes, the eighth grade student council was formed. Presided over by Keenan Goldsby with vice-presidents Elaine Sharron and Melissa McNulty, secretary Deena Santivicca, and treasurer Anne Marie Rediken, the council, with it's thirty-eight members, organized Fall Follies, Fall Festival and bonfire activities. There were also ice cream parties and much more. The council met every Friday to organize and unite the eighth grade class.

Herc & Jerc Works

Upon discovering the need for some sort of rule enforcement program, the eighth grade faculty instituted the Herc and Jerc system. According to this system, tickets were given out to those doing good. Five good tickets could be traded in for a Herc certificate, whereas three bad, or Jerc tickets resulted in a parent conference. Opinions on the system varied from extreme dislike to overwhelming praise. Student Elaine Charon said."It's a great system," but a fellow student, Julie Brown commented, "It's stupid." Mr. Mike Magathan summed up the basic faculty feeling by saying, "It's worked pretty well. The students understand it, and...it gives us a framework to work with."

Trio

Sponsoring the eighth grade class proved to be a challenge for Miss Mimi Jahoda, Miss Sandra Murray, and Mr. Dan Troia. The three worked together and with the student council to formulate activities for the class. When asked how she felt being a sponsor, Miss Jahoda said enthusiastically,"I've sponsored before and this one is very special to me for many reasons. The '85 officers are good to work with, and all the kids are enthusiastic and they participate." Miss Murray, who was serving as a sponsor for her first year said,"It was incredibly time consuming, but I enjoyed it." Mr. Troia simply stated,"Good group, without a doubt the most spirited."

The Pitch

All that was required to win a mug in the eighth grade fall festival booth was a keen eye, a steady hand, and a smooth follow through. Located in the main office hall , the booth consisted of rows of Lake Braddock mugs into which dimes were thrown from a certain distance. If the thrower was lucky enough to land a dime in one of the mugs they got to keep the mug. The money raised from the booth was put into the class treasury.

Ear Work

An expression of extreme concentration crossed over every student's face in the open classroom. Every ear in the room strained to hear and identify the music coming from the tape player in the middle of the room. Then someone remembered the name of the song and won that famous game,"Name that Tune". Put on by the S.S.II math teachers, this was a favorite game on days preceeding long holidays when students couldn't concentrate on school work. The songs were mostly from the top 40, but occasionally teachers would stump the students with an oldie-but-goodie. The game provided a relaxing day for students and teachers alike.

Paws?

By publishing their own newsletter, the Class of '85 kept well informed. The newsletter, titled Bear Pause, contained articles on student life, items of interest to eighth graders and their parents, and an extensive calendar detailing upcoming activities and events. In order to make the paper appear less formal, special graphics were employed, including a background design depicting paw prints. Distributed in class, the newsletter was an attempt to better communications between the faculty, the students, and the parents.

'85 Jive

Urged on by the mist-covered floor and the pounding rhythms of the music, the Class of '85 caught dance fever. The class went all out to provide a great atmosphere for dancing on November 14, by furnishing smoke, a psychadelic light show, and lots of enjoyable music. Students bumped, grinded, pogoed, and boogied for three straight hours at a mere cost of two dollars. To cure that unquenchable thirst one got while dancing, there was a refreshment stand where soft drinks were sold for a half dollar. The tunes were provided by a live D.J. who played a well mixed blend of Rock, Disco, and mellow pop. As an added attraction for those too tired to tango, cartoons were shown on the walls.

Spirits

'Twas the season to be jolly, as the Class of '85 assembled in the little theatre on December 18th. They attended a free concert given by the Intermediate Concert Orchestra, the Intermediate Swing Singers, and the Swing Singers. To get people ready for the holiday break, the three groups played many traditional Christmas songs as well as more modern ones. Also featured in the show was a preview excerpt of the drama department's production of "Cheaper by the Dozen". The assembly itself helped to instill that special Christmas feeling in the hearts of all students involved.

Adorned with souvenirs, the showcase brightened SS II.

Worldly

Providing a pleasant contrast to the formality of subschool II was the subschool showcase. Throughout the year, the showcase was the home of many fine displays. One, in particular, was the display featuring articles from other countries. The articles consisted of games and ornaments, booklets, post cards, clothing and currency from practically all parts of the world. There were dolls from South America, games from Europe, and clothing from the far east. Mrs. Mary Lipsey designed the display using items brought in by students. Since many of the items were very colorful, the display also served to brighten the subschool during the dark winter months.

Forethought

Ending eighth grade was like the end of a transitional period for students. Many students found themselves thinking ahead to becoming freshmen. The following eighth graders offered these comments:

Mike Rhee-"I'm really looking forward to getting more involved."
Sharon Pattison-"I'll like the privileges and the greater respect.''
Dawn Lewis-"I'm worried about my grades in the tougher courses."
Michelle Martin-"I'm really looking forward to being in the Pep Club. It will be a lot of fun.'' Frankie Munoz-"It's one year closer to graduating".

During Mrs. Williams' GT English class, Dana Williams puts the finishing touches on a grammar exercise.

For many students, their first day at a new school can be terrifying. Luckily for rising seventh graders, the Class of '86 sponsors and subschool principals organized an orientation on August 27 to make the adjustment to such a large school easier. Counselors and other administrators introduced themselves, while demonstrations in gymnastics, drama, music, and cheerleading provided entertainment. Following a Steve Martin-style cheer led by Miss Joan Hitchcock, everyone was taken on a tour of the school using a sample schedule. Orientation turned out to be a fun way for the new students to get acquainted with their new school.

Did you ever wonder who was behind making the bonfire dummy, organizing the Homecoming float-making, or informing everyone on what was going on? Behind these and other miracles, you always found the Class Council.

Elected from their English classes, the eighteen council members acted as a liaison between sponsors, Jerry Newberry, Pat Arthur, and Bev Fleming, and class members by reporting announcements directly to their classes. They met once a week during break to discuss class projects, like the activities of Homecoming week.

The Class Council was a new concept of government for the intermediates, designed to take the responsibility of running the class from the adults' shoulders and to let the students run their own show. Bev Fleming asserted,"We hope we're training future SGA leaders." From the council's success during the hectic week of Homecoming and throughout the year, it looks like they have.

Extra! Extra!

"Welcome to '86. . .Involvement is the Key. . .Herc and Jerk. .Homecoming: The Lake Braddock Way. . ."--the Bear Tracks covered it all! Sent home once a month, this innovative newsletter did everything from answering questions concerning cheating to giving helpful hints about keeping up with homework assignments and making the honor roll. Emphasizing that an active, involved student was a successful student, the Bear Tracks also encouraged parents to get involved by volunteering to work in their subschool offices or supervising student activities, such as the Homecoming float and intermediate dances.

Bustin' Loose!

Faster than a speeding linebacker, more powerful than a defensive tackle, able to leap cornerbacks in a single bound--Look! Breaking out of the pack, it's Mary Beth Stupka! Rushing for two touchdowns against a tough eighth grade squad, Mary Beth was clearly the MVP of the intermediate Powderpuff game. While she led her class to a 14-14 draw, bony knees and hairy legs were flashed at frozen spectators by suspiciously deep-voiced cheerleaders. Their imaginative cheers set the scene for the Powderpuff court whose prime requirement, it was announced, was that the chosen intermediates "resembled our mascot in every way!"

What's red and green and covered with cougars? The intermediate float, of course. The Classes of '85 and '86 set out to show what class spirit was all about. Different students worked each day making flowers and building the carousel float, making it a real joint effort. Laura Stephens, a seventh grader, commented,"The intermediates put a lot of energy into the float. It showed that we could make a contribution, too."

Divine Inspiration

Laughter from inside the Little Theater filled the halls, but the high spirits of those attending the Fall Follies didn't seem to have any effect on a very disappointed angel sitting just outside the theater's doors. "We were awful," Michelle Fleming moaned, her halo drooping. "Nothing went right." Apparently, the judges disagreed, because the Class of '86 took home the second place prize money, fifteen dollars, which they put toward a cast party at Pizza Hut. Their skit, "Sevies Strike Back," was a satire on Mr. John Alwood's "divine inspiration" for our school song. How did Michelle feel when she heard the news? "Amazed! I didn't think it would ever happen."

Up, Up, and Away

Rain drove the Fall Festival and its soaked participants inside, but the seventh grade booth was designed to make sure spirits weren't dampened, too. The fifty cent helium balloons sold by the Class of '86 added a dash of color to the crowded, October 18th event. Any profits the class might have rung up were wiped out by the high cost of renting the balloon-blowing equipment; however, it didn't seem to matter to the twenty-four hard-working students and their dedicated sponsors who sold them.

A Minute's Worth

To most seventh graders, there seemed to be few extracurricular activities available. However, the students who were involved in activities such as student government and drill team felt very strongly that their time and efforts were well spent.

Mark Brazeal, class president: I thought I would be really pressured, but I'm not. I think it was worth it, because I enjoy getting involved. I haven't had to give up much.

Lynn Calvert, class historian and drill team: I've had to give up part of my class time and sometimes I had conflicts with games or practices, but we always worked it out. It was fun meeting new people, and it was a good experience since I plan to run for other offices in the future.

Promises,

"If I am elected, I promise to. ."--the candidates' speeches droned on. The November Election Assembly was under way, filling the Little Theater with seventh graders. The Class of '86 had a decision to make: who would lead their Class Council in making important decisions about class events? Two days later their choice, Mark Brazeal, was announced.

For his first few weeks in office, Mark met with the other newly elected officers every second and fourth Wednesday to discuss ideas for class activities. Lynn Calvert, historian, was given top priority. She was responsible for putting together a Class of '86 scrapbook that, once filled with six years of memories, would be presented to the seventh grade class, the Class of '92, when the Class of '86 graduated.

Spirited and enthusiastic Subschool II members, outfitted in purple and gold, sing the Bruin Fight Song at the first faculty meeting.

In the special faculty lunchroom, Mr. Friend, Mr. Puffenberger, Mr. Bly, and Mr. McFadyen find a quiet atmosphere to discuss important matters.

VIP

Most students didn't realize the importance that the faculty played in our school, but without the administrators, teachers, and the cafeteria and custodial staffs, Lake Braddock would have just been another building. Over the years, as the student body grew in size and spirit, the faculty kept up the pace. They bonded as a unified body to show support for the school and their students. Sporting events provided an excellent chance for the faculty to show up in full force, cheering the teams. Pep rallies found them leading cheers, often outfitted in purple and gold garb. When dances, trips, and other activities needed chaperones, the faculty was always ready to lend a hand. Sponsoring a club or class provided their biggest challenge because it required a great deal of time and effort. All this in addition to teaching and administrating jobs. They were valuable, vital, interested, intelligent, influential, patient, and priceless personnel. In fact as the student body soon realized, the faculty members were the VIP's of our school.

BRUCE SPRINGSTEEN FOREVER!

Lori,

Hi, Ulsgaman? You couldn't possibly know how glad I am I got to know you. You are one of the sweetest prettiest people I know and you've come to be one of my best friends. You were there when I needed you. Thanks. Sometimes I get the feeling we were sisters. We almost always had the same problems at the same times. I hope life treats you good. Do not forget the Bruce Springsteen concert. Good luck always!

I love you to death,

Diana

John Alwood-Principal

Students received the surprise of their life at the homecoming pep rally as a new, talented group of players came strutting into the gym. Dancing to the tune of "Bridge Over the River Kwai", the newly-formed "Carson players" provided an excellent bit of comic relief for the students. The whole gym was soon buzzing with the questions, "What are they doing?" and "Who is that?" as perplexed students watched the six bare-bellied men with faces painted on their stomachs and mammoth 4-foot top hats covering their heads. Soon, all present were screaming for the masked men to take the hats off. A wave of surprise swept the audience as, from under the hats emerged Mr. Alwood, Mr. Carson, Mr. Hensley, Mr. Klaren, Mr. Barr, and Mr. Damico. No-one ever thought a principal could be so spirited! Many times throughout the year Mr. Alwood and other administrators surprised the students with their antics to promote spirit and unity, as they proved that they too were real people.

Sparked by a new burst of enthusiasm, the faculty was urged to go and cheer on the Bruins at home football games. Signs appeared in the mail room of the subschools encouraging the staff to go out and be supportive. To help accommodate the teachers, a special cheering section was designated, especially for them, throughout the season. All of this was done to promote interest, spirit, and unity among the staff members. The cheering section, strategically located under the press box, gave teachers a bird's eye view of all the action on the field. At every game, the section was full of fun-loving faculty members cheering the team on and the football season turned out to be a spirit booster for the faculty.

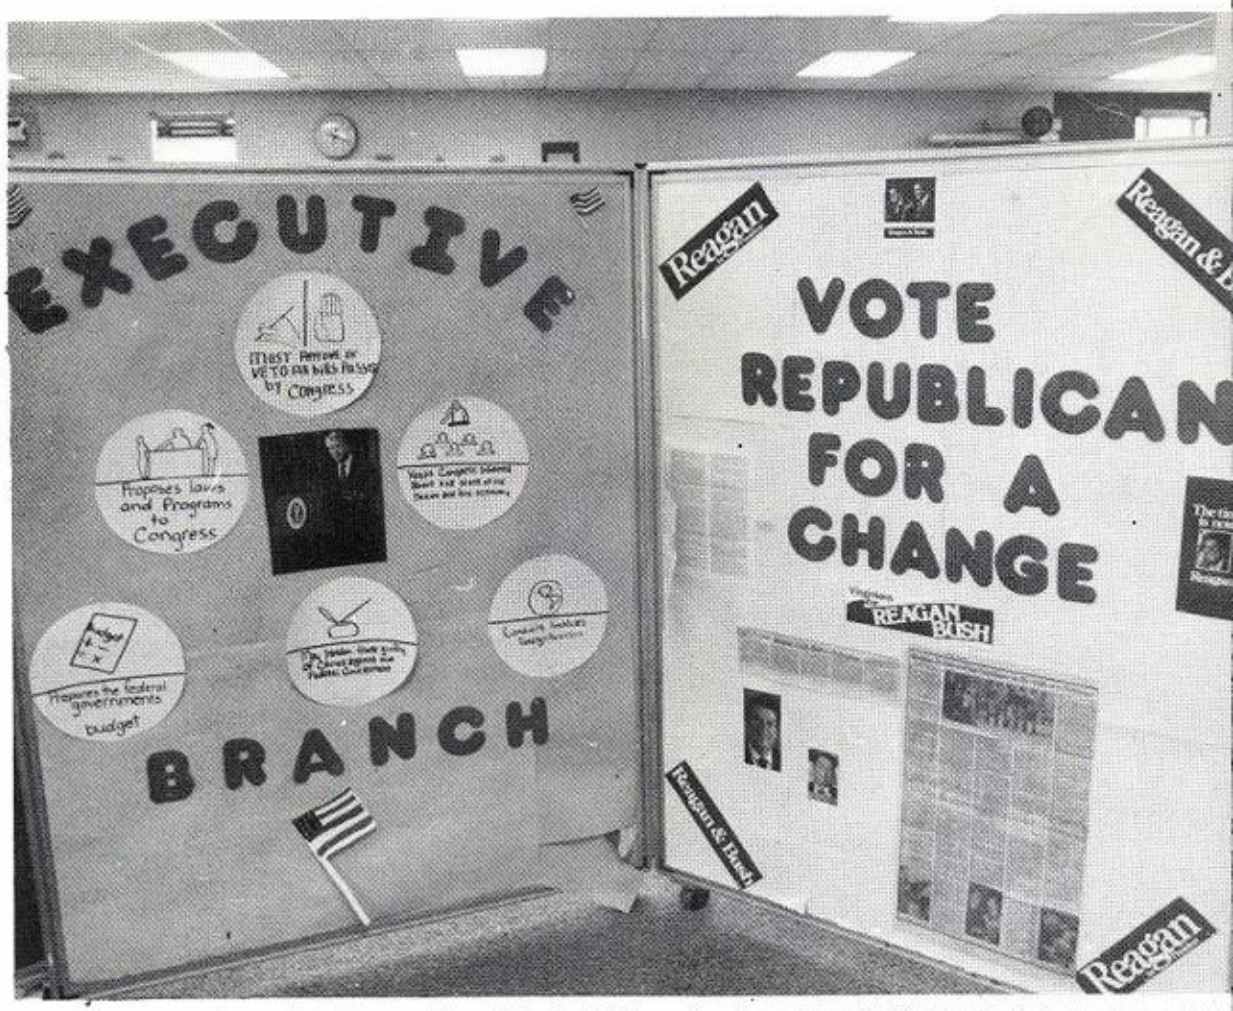
Being a part of the unpredictable and all exciting Fall Follies was great fun for teachers as well as students. With a skit entitled "L. B. is Number One," faculty members from SSI and II helped to show that pride was alive and booming in our school. As a chorus of teachers sang to the tune "One," with a new version of words to fit with the homecoming theme, the stunning teachers danced in a chorus line sequence. At the end of the show, the teachers had accumulated the highest number of points, but gave their first place title to the Pep Club, so they could use the $25 prize money for their club. The faculty showed spirit and sportsmanship in the Fall Follies and they did a sensational job.

As a member of the chorus line of teachers in the fall follies Nancy Bard performs a song and dance routine.

Over the years, one of a teacher's greatest resources had been current events. Curriculum for government teachers and EMS teachers this year was no different. Both found that the election year provided an opportunity for long range projects. Government classes were required to bring in four current event writeups a week. These articles were later compiled into an informative scrapbook covering the entire political campaign. SS I and SS II bulletin boards, showcases, and classrooms sported signs of the upcoming election. EMS classes focused on the election as a whole, tying it in with a classroom election unit. Teachers felt the election provided an excellent chance for a free extra-curricular learning experience and took advantage of it to enhance learning possibilities.



In the midst of an election unit, a SS II divider displays the EMS students' choice of the presidential candidates.

In an effort to keep education free for everyone, the county enforced a rule that limited the teaching methods of the faculty. The rule stated that teachers could not make students pay to watch a movie or go on a field trip. As a result, teachers were unable to use these methods as educational tools. The annual trip to Williamsburg for A.C. I students had to be discontinued because $13.00 was required from each student to cover travelling costs. Field trips could only be taken using county funds which were severely limited, giving teachers only 30¢ to spend on each student. Mrs. Ingeborg Boggess, a German teacher, had to cancel a trip for German III students to the German Embassy. She related,"I think the kids should be able to have fun whether they pay or not." Although concern was expressed in the school newspaper, no definite action was taken against the ruling. Teachers were unhappy, for students missed out on opportunities to learn about things that could not be found in textbooks.

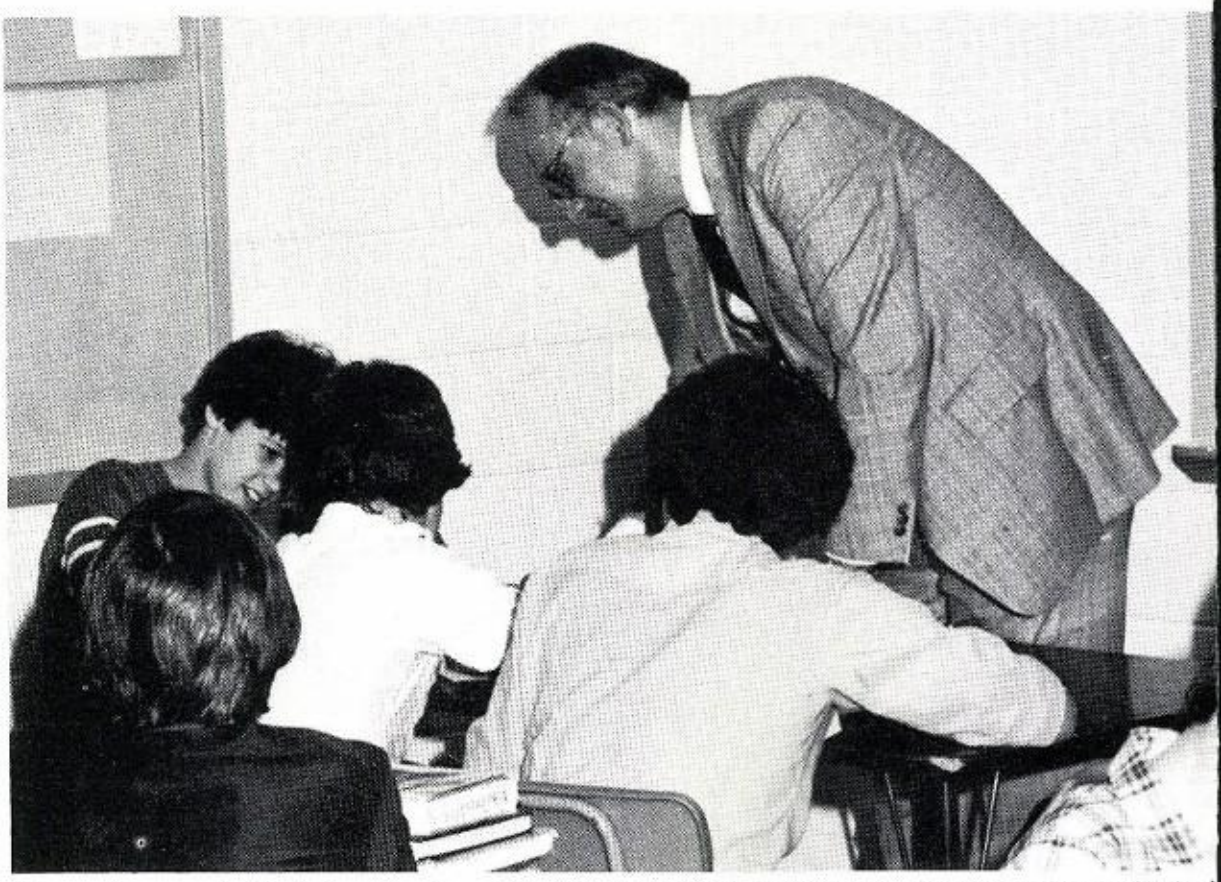
SUBSTITUTION

At least once during their twelve years of schooling, most students wondered whether or not administrators really knew what it was like to be a part of a class. In an effort to have administrators become better acquainted with class life, Fairfax County School Superintendent, Dr. Linton Deck, required each administrator to act as a substitute for at least one day during the year. Administrators could pick any class in which to substitute. Most picked either their college major or a course which they had previously taught. Some, however, were not picky and chose classes which they felt would be interesting and enjoyable. Those covered by this directive included Mr. Alwood, Mr. Puffenberger, Mr. Wade, and the six subschool principals. When they finished their day of substitution, administrators felt the program was a success because it gave them a greater perspective about how a class was run.



Becoming a substitute for the day, Principal John Alwood assists eighth grade students i Mrs. Bauer's sixth period math class.

Mrs. Fritz's sixth period chemistry class keeps up with the testing policy as Audrey Short takes a chapter test on an odd day.

In response to the growing number of student complaints concerning the number of tests and assignments due on the same day, a new policy was set up by the administration and individual teaching sections. The new policy, started in October, required all major tests and assignments for English and social studies classes to be scheduled on even days, while science, math, and foreign language tests and assignments were to be scheduled on odd days. Student response to the policy was enthusiastic. Christy Dugan, a freshman in SS III stated,"It helps a lot because it evens out the amount of studying I do in one night." Most of the teachers under the policy made their best effort to stick to the agreement, however, at the beginning of the second quarter, the test policy was changed, so that it was only effective the last week of each quarter. The reason for this change was that teachers would be ready to give their students a test, but would be forced to delay the test until after the weekend in order to meet their odd or even day. Although it had its ups and downs, this new attempt by the administrative staff to lessen the work load of students proved to be a good idea.

Although computers couldn't do everything, journalism students and teachers soon found that a computer could make production a much different process. With the aide of the $20,000 computer, students were able to put together their own pages, which came out much clearer. With terminals located in both the Bear Facts office and in the Yearbook Office, the computer catered to both classes. The Bear Facts staff produced an excellent quality paper because their pages were being produced more efficiently. Yearbook staff members, while finding that the computer made production faster, had some trouble adjusting to the different format of making a paste-up book. However, in the end, they too produced a book which was superior in quality to previous years. Yearbook sponsor, Mrs. Barbara Dent, was pleased with the computer because it made the yearbook more student oriented and almost totally student produced. When the issues of The Bear Facts and The Lair came out both staffs agreed it was worth the fund-raising and learning because they were all proud of the finished products.

As Christmas time rolled around there was a great deal of activity going on in the art department. Teachers and students alike were getting ready for their Christmas bazaar, which was to be held December 19. Students brought in original artwork to sell. Examples of work submitted by the art teachers added an extra flair to the bazaar. Proceeds from the sales went toward buying a special press for the art department to print etchings. Since the press cost about $1000, additional money-making ventures were taken on later in the year, including selling special stationary designed by the art department and printed by the journalism students. A selection of items for sale at the bazaar included drawings, paintings, ornaments, pottery and other odds and ends. Everyone who helped to raise funds was satisfied because the bazaar was so successful, and the art department looked forward to the day they could start using the etching press.

DOUBLING UP

Paying for two lunches is an everyday occurance for Rob[illegible] who feels that one is just not enough.

While eating lunch in the cafeteria, it was not uncommon to see someone buying two lunches in order to get more food. The only problem with wanting more food was that it cost twice as much as the regular lunch, $1.40 plus 10¢ deposit, and most people didn't want to pay the high price. So the county decided to do something about it. They designed a new type of lunch for Fairfax County Schools, to be offered along with the regular sized lunches. The meal included a larger main dish, and was just 30¢ more. For example, one got two pieces of pizza, as well as the regular portions of side dishes, all for $1.00. The new lunch program was introduced to all Fairfax County Schools in February, after it had been tested by two schools earlier in the year. Cafeteria workers were delighted that a larger lunch was being offered to the students, and all hoped that the new, bigger lunch would satisfy those hungry students.

Students exited the building at the end of each day, hardly giving a thought to the mess they had left behind. Papers cluttering the floors, chairs and classrooms disarranged, and a generally messy atmosphere set the stage for the jobs of the custodians. After all students were clear of the building the bulk of the custodians' jobs started. Halls had to be swept, bathrooms cleaned, and subschools straightened up. The carpeted areas were vacuumed and chairs were stacked. Custodians were responsible for the clean-up after evening activities as well. The daytime shift was responsible for cleaning up the cafeteria. These were only a few of the jobs the custodians did so that when students returned to school each day they always entered a clean environment and a pleasant atmosphere.

COMBAT ZONE

With the strongest student support ever shown, our athletic teams demonstrated both effort and determination while striving to do their best in the Combat Zone! Battling other schools, our teams came out victorious; whether it was shown by the season records or by personal satisfaction. Staying after school each day, our athletes sacrificed their time to represent our school the best they could. Fans appreciated our dedicated athletes, as they displayed courage and sportsmanship while competing in the Combat Zone.

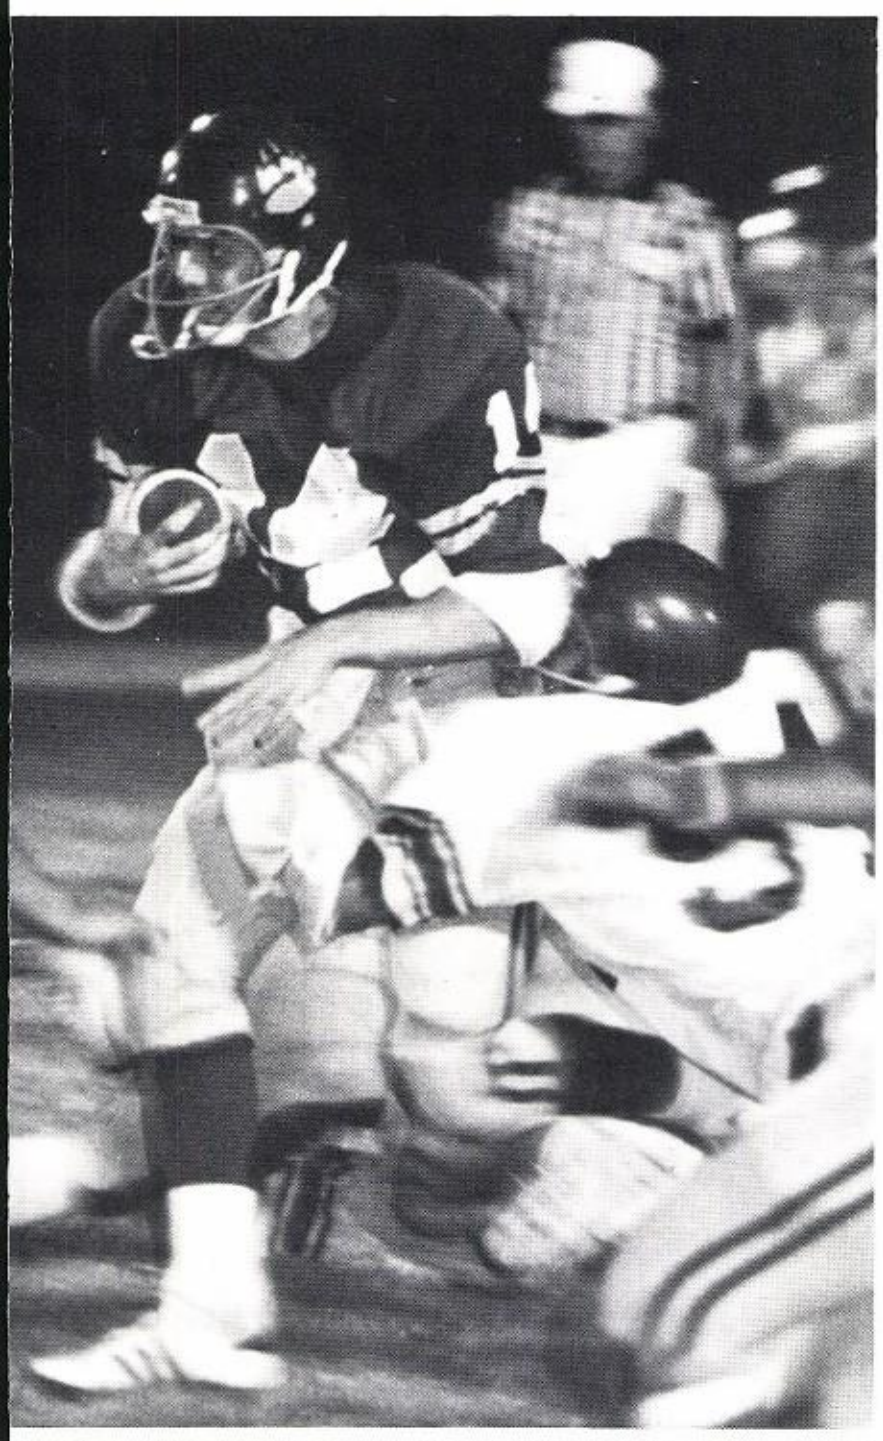
CONDITIONING FOR SUCCESS

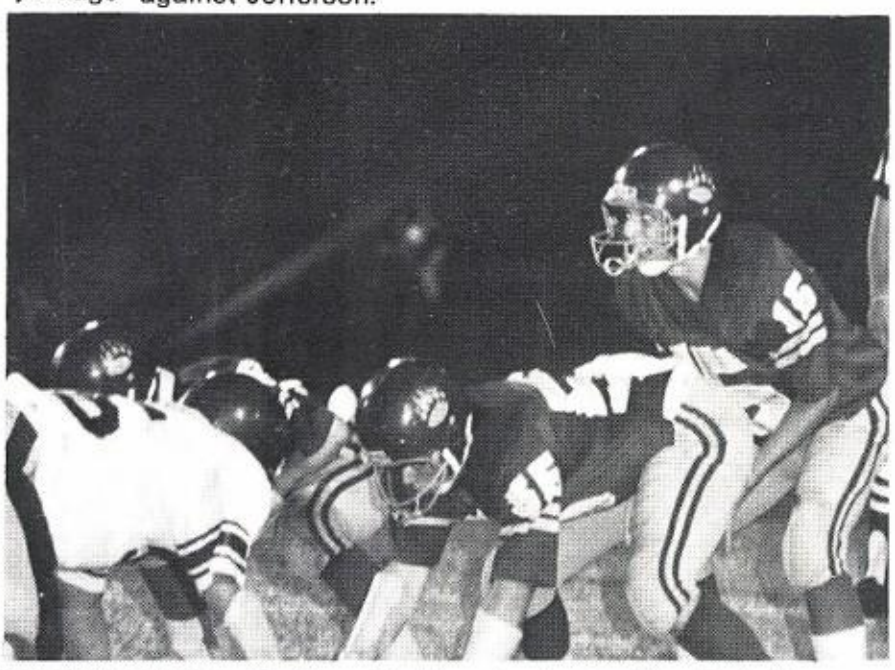
With a strong nucleus of returning players to build from, the varsity football team began practice in early August. Players and coaches alike prepared for what they hoped to be a very rewarding season.

In the middle of August the team traveled to Juniata College in Pennsylvania, where they practiced three times daily and devoted all their free time to running and weightlifting. When the team returned from camp, they began the dreaded two-a-day practices and anxiously awaited the season opener against Jefferson.



During the Homecoming game, Mike Sullenburger breaks a tackle and picks up the first down.

Tom Fowler keeps the ball and sweeps around the end for big yardage against Jefferson.



Quarterback Tom Fowler calls the signals as the Bruins' offense lines up against Oakton.

HIGH HOPES

Dedication and hard work paid off for the Varsity football team. Although they may have been smaller or slower, they were never out-classed. Finishing the season with a 5-4-1 record, the team finished third in the tough Northern District behind two of the areas top ranked teams. Only losing one of their first five games, the outlook for a possible district championship appeared promising. However, a stunning loss to Chantilly and two hard fought defeats led to a third place finish. There were several bright spots during the season, including a come-from-behind victory over Robinson and the 23-6 victory over Groveton. Coach Stan Kemp and his staff were proud of the team's effort and dedication throughout the year.

Completing the season with a 4-4 record, the J.V. Football team displayed determination and unity throughout the season. Beginning practice in early August, the J.V. squad traveled to Pennsylvania with the Varsity players for a week of practice at Juniata College. The season opener against T.C. Williams produced the team's biggest offensive output of the season, crushing the Titans 17-6. The offense failed to score the next two games and their record dropped to 1-2. In the game against Chantilly the defense came up with their first shut-out and the Bruins raised their record to 2-2. In the following games against Robinson and Oakton the offense was again shut off and their record fell to 2-4.

After the Oakton defeat a spirited team meeting was held and the team responded with a 12-0 crushing of West Springfield the following week. The final game of the season the Bruins traveled to Woodson to play the undefeated Cavaliers. In the most exciting game of the year, the Bruins defeated Woodson to finish with a 4-4 record. Overcoming offensive struggles, the Bruin team concluded the season with two spectacular victories.

Lining up against Robinson, the Bruin offense prepares to gain yardage.

TIC TAC TOE

Instructed by first year head coach Steve Friend, the Freshman football team learned the necessity of leadership and unity. Due to the failure of scoring, the team lost its first and last games. Their victories appeared in the middle of the season with three wins in a row. Bryant Drapper and Harold Dunford were major assets to the offensive team while Bill Link and Thomas Nicholson led the defense. The skill of each individual built a strong base for future teams.

STICK IT TO 'EM

Finishing the season with a second place in the Northern District tournament, the girls Varsity Field Hockey team advanced to the semi-finals in Regionals and proved to themselves that hard work and dedication did pay off. Under the leadership of captain Liz Carr and coach Jane Grier, the girls pulled together to compile an exceptional record of 5-2. The drills and scrimages at practice helped to mold the team into a solid unit and produced an effective offense and defense. Spectacular individual performances were recognized at the Sports Banquet on November 26 with Sheri Nidiffer winning the Best Offensive Player, the Best Defensive Player going to Liz Carr, and Joyce Magill was named the MVP. As predicted from the start, the Field Hockey team produced a winning effort as a whole.

SWIFT SKIRTS

Strong performances from all team members throughout the season made for a successful J.V. Field Hockey team. All the dedication and effort demanded by Coach Mary Ellen Walters helped to unify the girls and enabled them to function as an effective unit. Both the defensive and offensive teams came out of "combat" extremely well with a 1-2-3 record. Proving themselves as a team with great potential, the girls had high hopes of adding their skills to the varsity level the following year.

At halftime, Coach Walters discusses some comeback strategy while Susan Campbell listens intently.

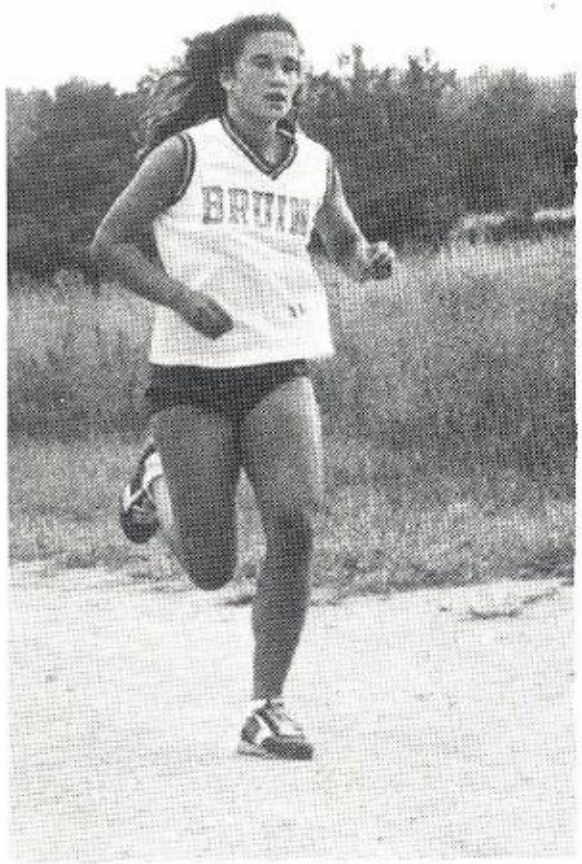
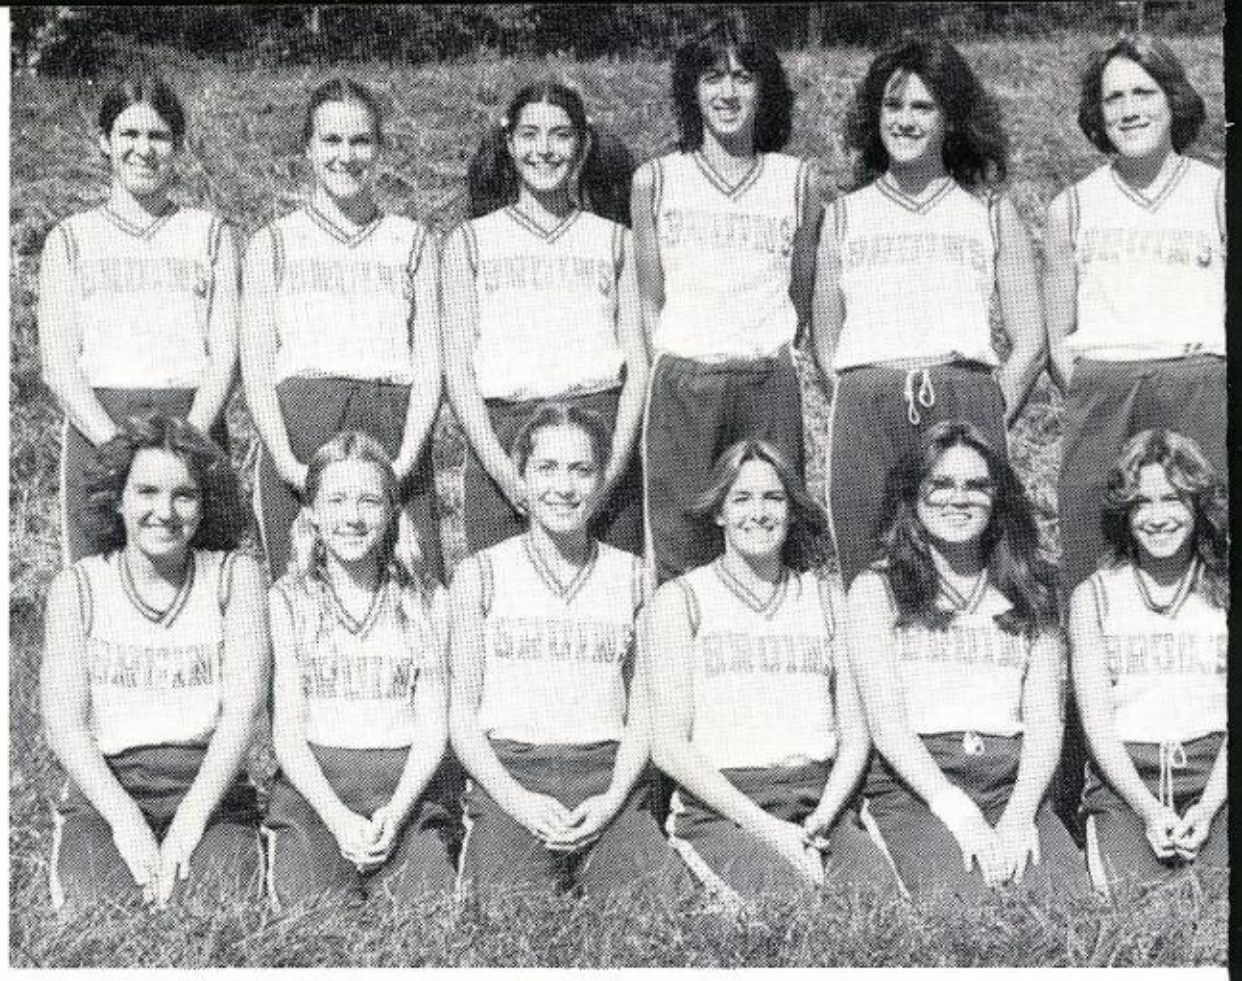
QUICK PACED

Despite a disappointing third place finish in the district, the Boys' Cross Country team had a rewarding and successful season. Paced by the running of Jim Lull, Bob Seale, and Mike Youmans, the team performed up to its high standards throughout the year. The season was highlighted by Jim Lull's first place finish in the Fairfax County meet, where the team placed a close second behind a strong Fort Hunt squad. Finishing seventh out of over twenty teams in the regional meet, the Harriers continued the Bruins' excellent name in long distance running.

Boys Cross Country



Taking a strong lead in the West Springfield meet is Sophmore Andrea Volpe.



GIRL'S CROSS COUNTRY

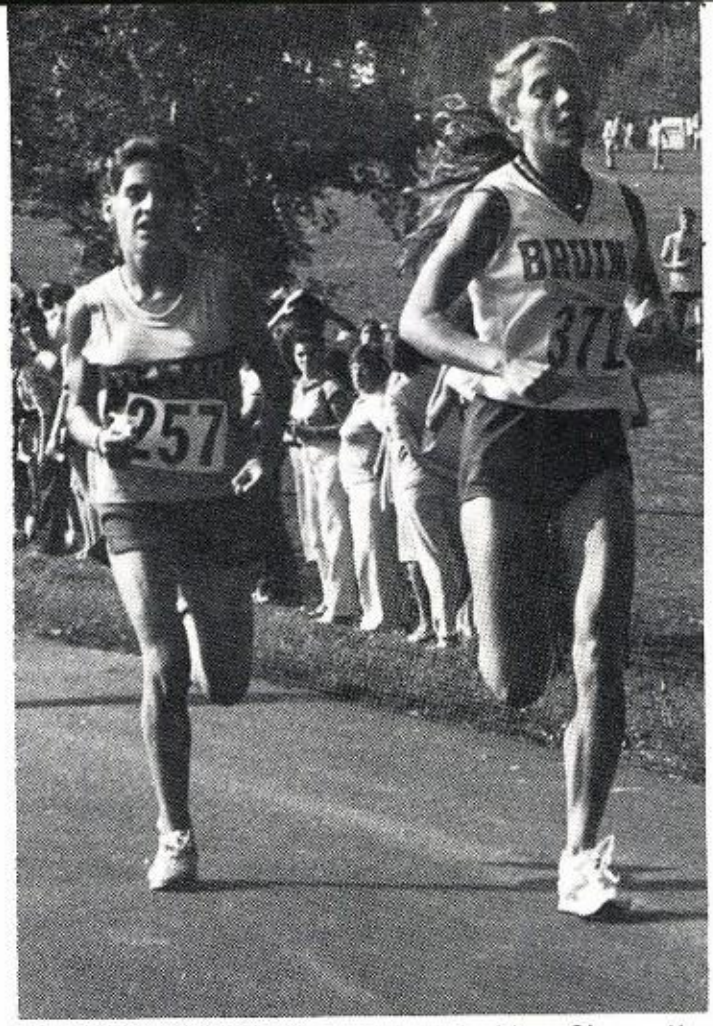
Nearing the halfway point of the three mile course, Jenny Welsh concentrates on beating her Titan and Cavalier opponents.

In the final regular season meet, Rodney Martin, Karen Donnelly and Kelly Buckman help the team stay undefeated,

FOOT NOTES

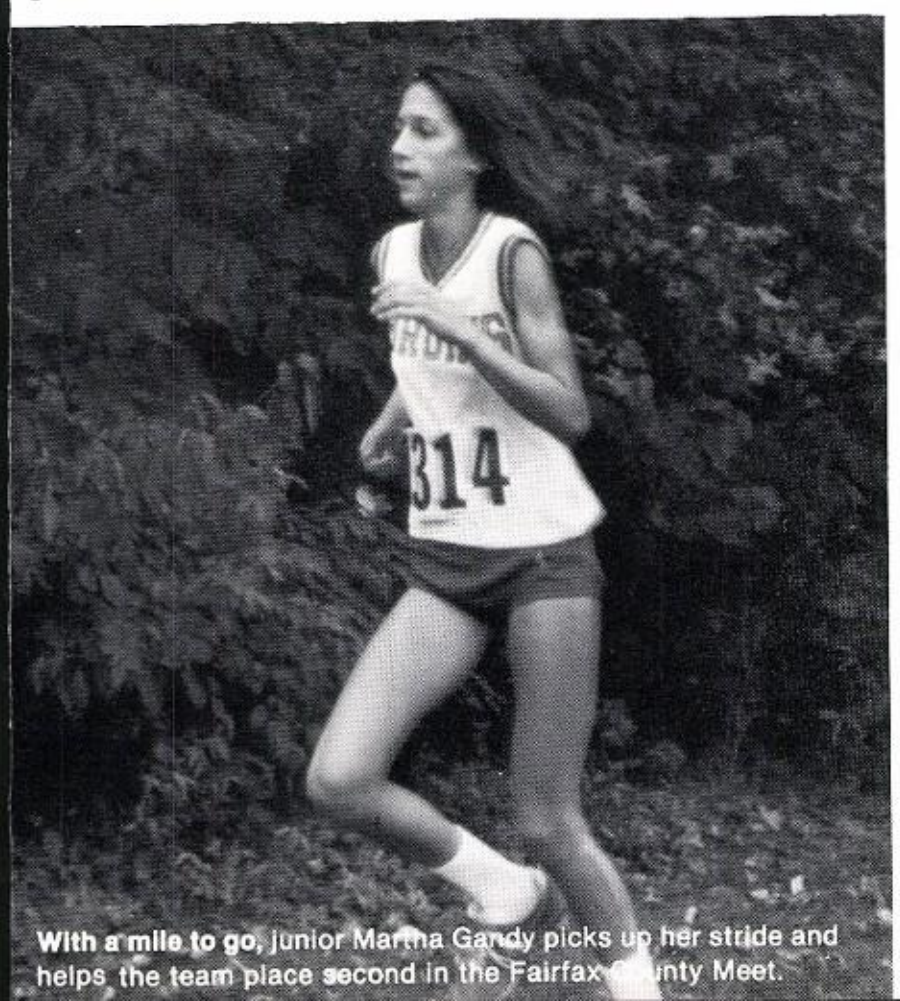
Echoes of footsteps could be heard as the Bruin cross country members left the starting line, but as the meet developed the sound of footsteps faded to a mere couple! The finish line was close and purple and gold could always be seen in front. Outstanding performances by Martha Gandy and Andrea Volpe helped the team stay undefeated in regular season meets. After getting revenge on their archrivals, the West Springfield Spartans, the girls proved that long hours, extensive practice, and just plain hard work payed off. Placing second in one of there first major meets, the Fairfax County Meet, gave the team motivation as they went on to close the season with a first place in districts, a second place in regionals and, finally, a second place in state, losing only to Fort Hunt. Volpe's fourth place finish in the state meet was one of the highlights of the season. The strong 20 member squad finished the season with one of the most impressive records in Bruin history.

unning through Burke Lake Park, Nancy Cummings keeps a strong pace in the egional meet.



Passing her Robinson opponent, Lisa Simonetta pushes on to finish ninth in Districts.

Running strong in the tri-meet against Woodson and T.C. Williams, senior Karen Donnelly races through South Run Park.



With a mile to go, junior Martha Gandy picks up her stride and helps the team place second in the Fairfax County Meet.

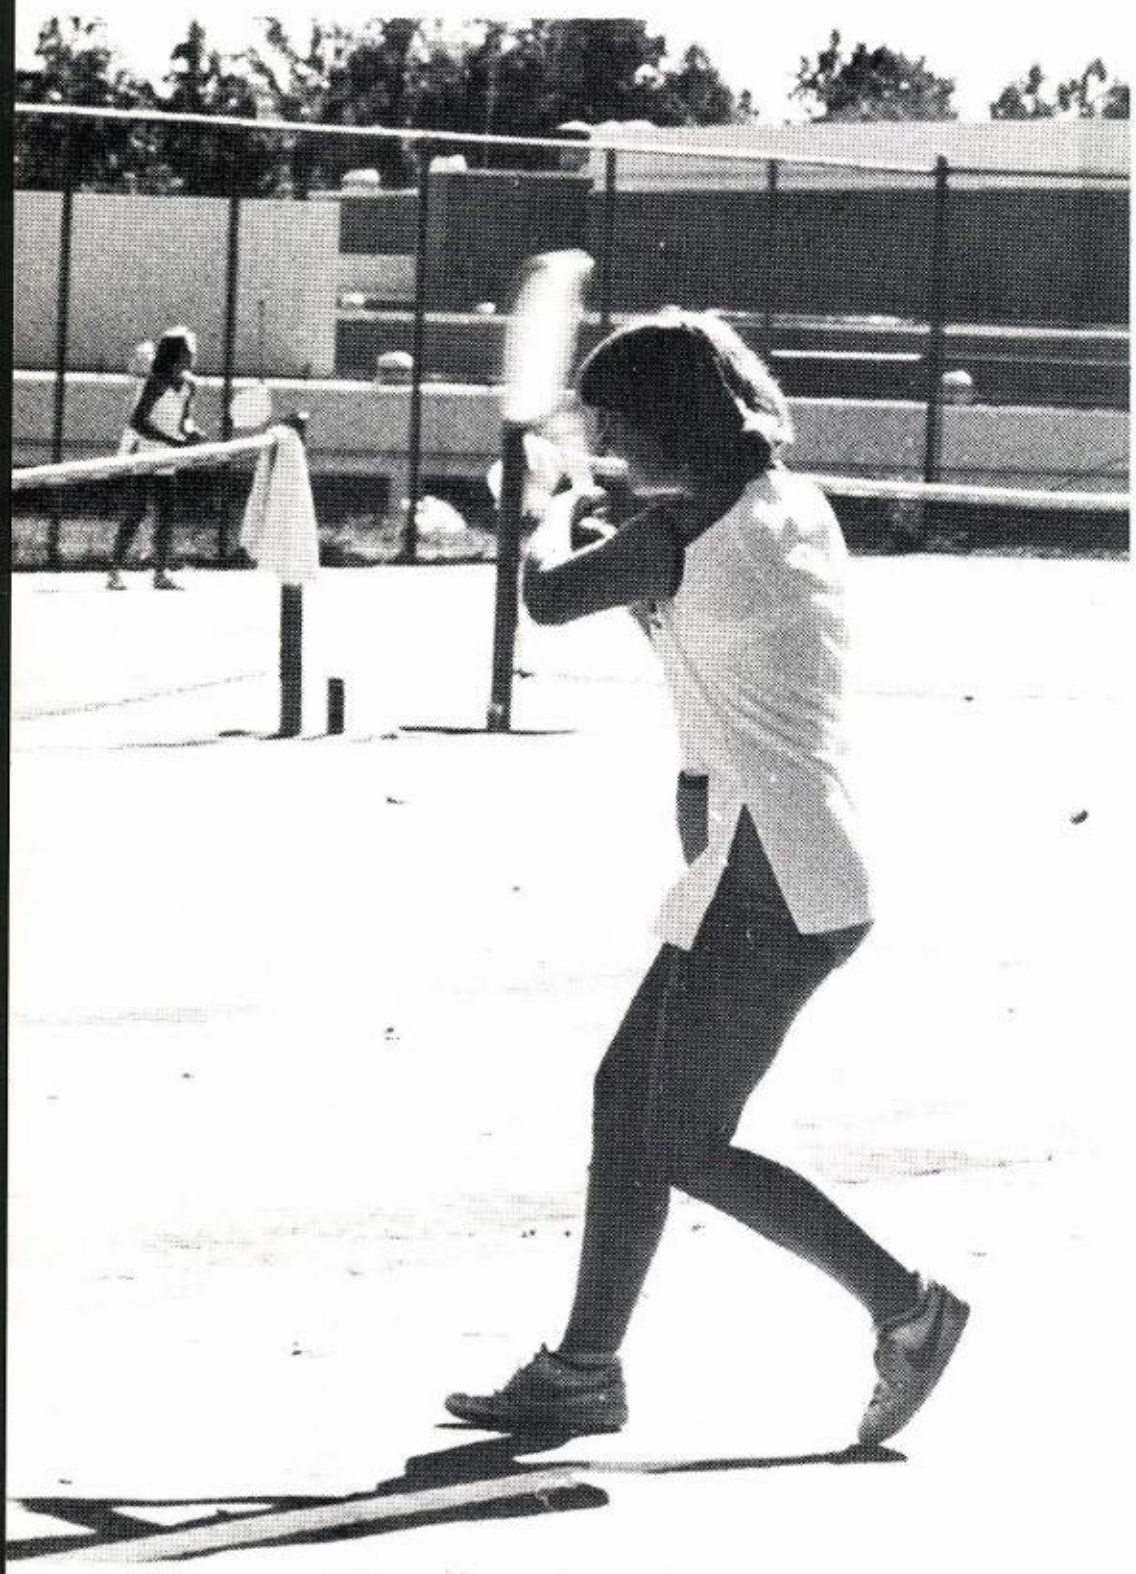
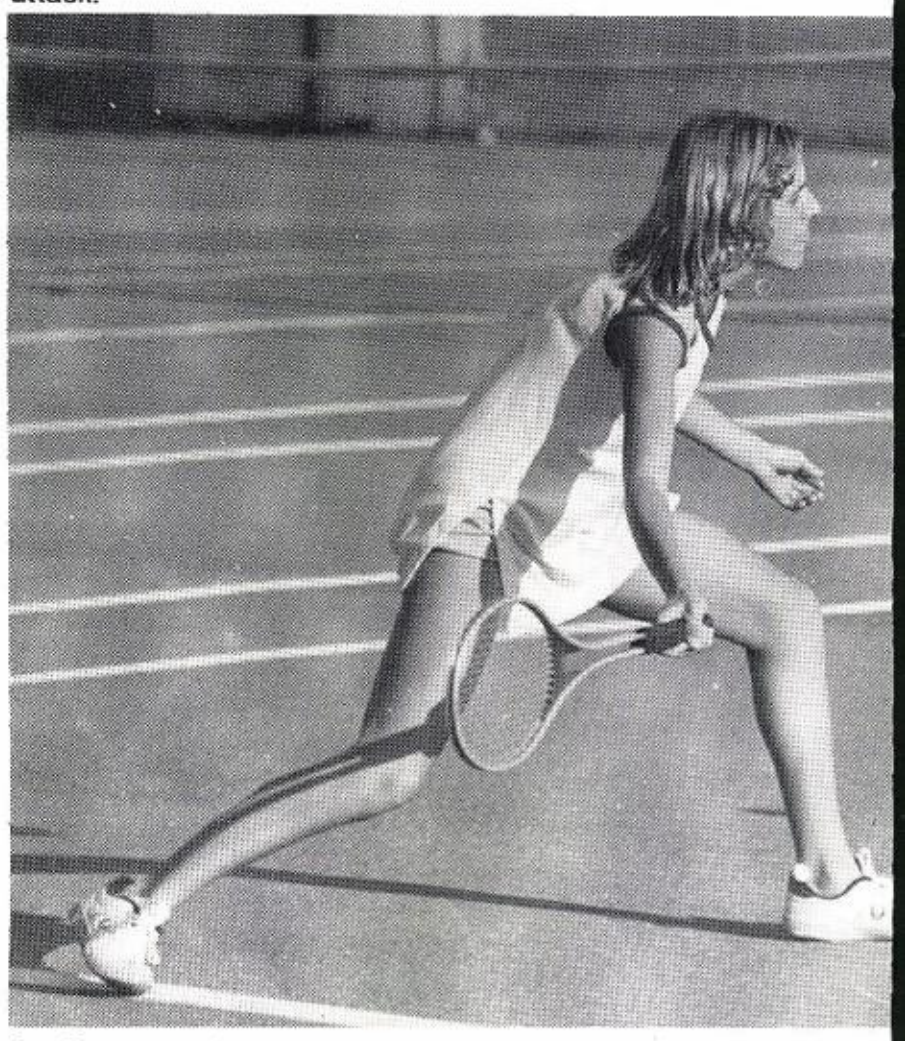
MAKING A RACKET

With half of the members of the team newcomers, the Girls' Tennis season started with new vigor and anticipation. Since Woodson and Oakton had been added to the Northern District, the team faced a tough schedule, including matches against the district champs, the Robinson Rams. However, the hard work at practice and various drills molded the team together and strengthened their depth. Coach Jean Worthington encouraged the girls to continue with their practice methods over the weekends and even organized a daughter-parent tennis tournament, which was won by Alyce Booth and her mother. As the season drew to a close, the girls had a good record of 5-7 to show for their efforts and demonstrarted strong ability in the district tournament. With the Sports Banquet marking the close of the fall season, teammates joined together for a final time as a team, all looking forward to the return of warmer weather so they could hit the courts.

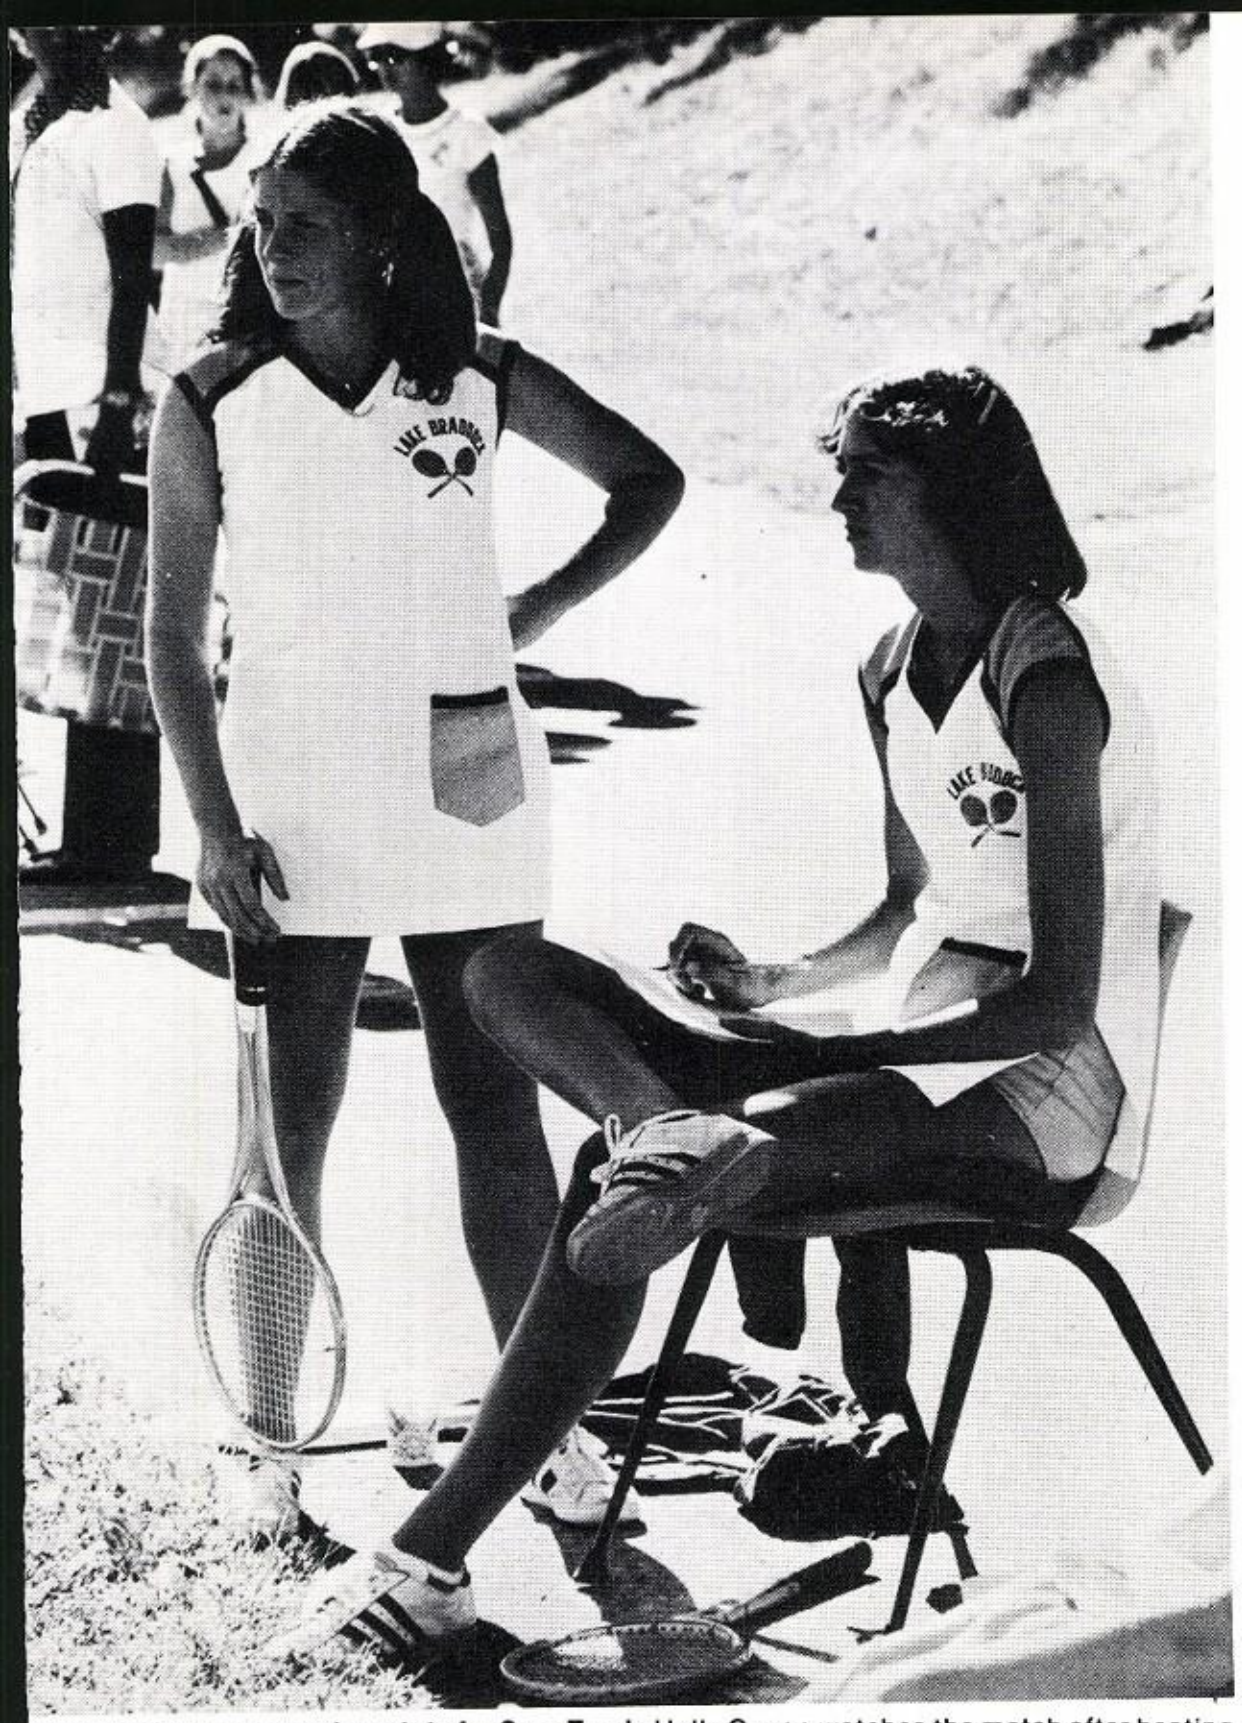


Sending a topspin backhand to her Chantilly opponent, Ellen Rafferty racks up another winner in her 10-2 effort.

With a good deep approach shot, Julie Russell moves up to the net to attack.



Bending to reach a low return, Lisa Clement prepares for a forehand crosscourt shot.



While Kathy Rafferty takes stats for Suzy Turek, Holly Guynn watches the match after beating her Spartan opponent.

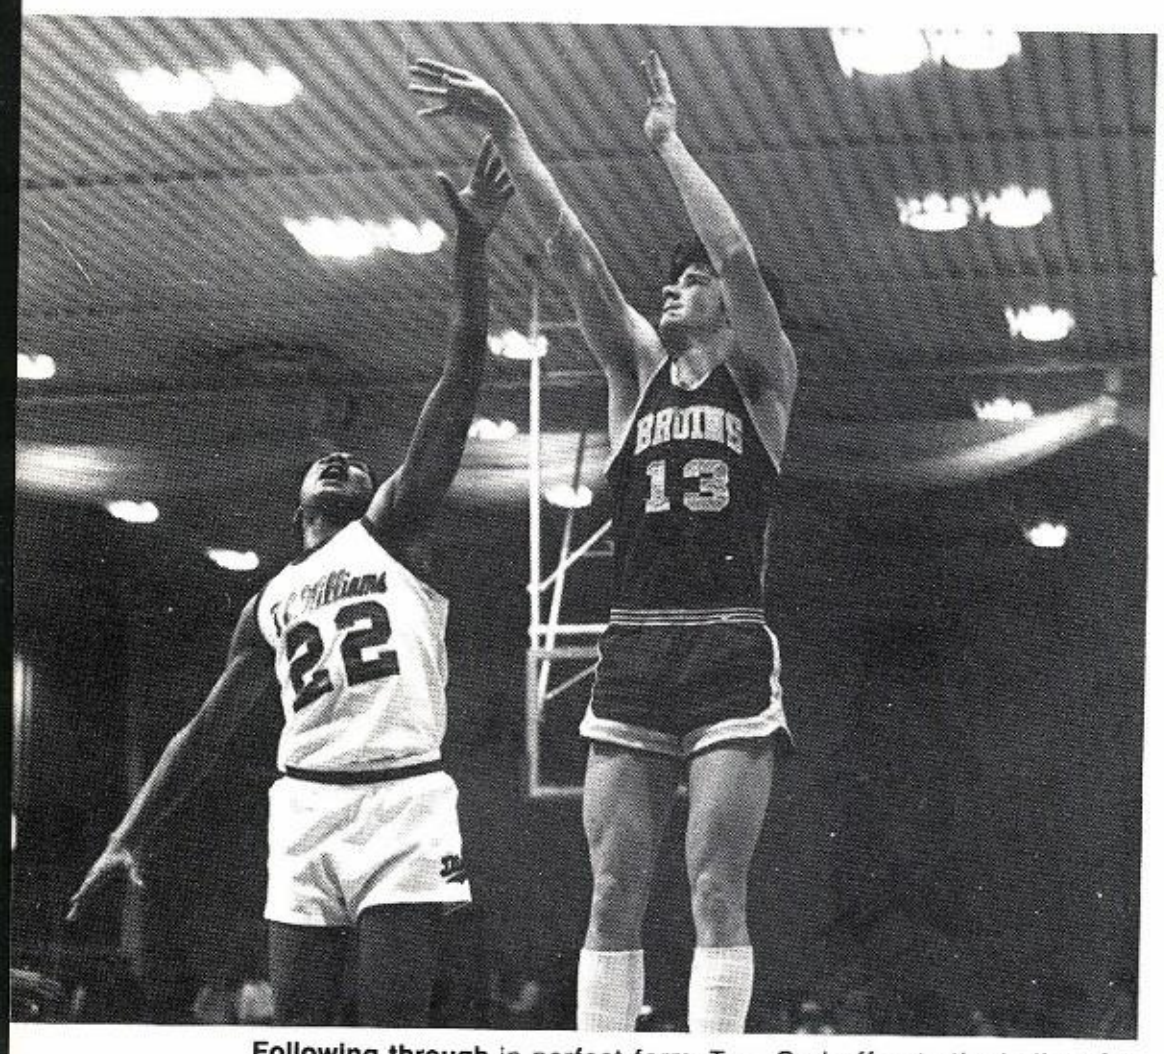
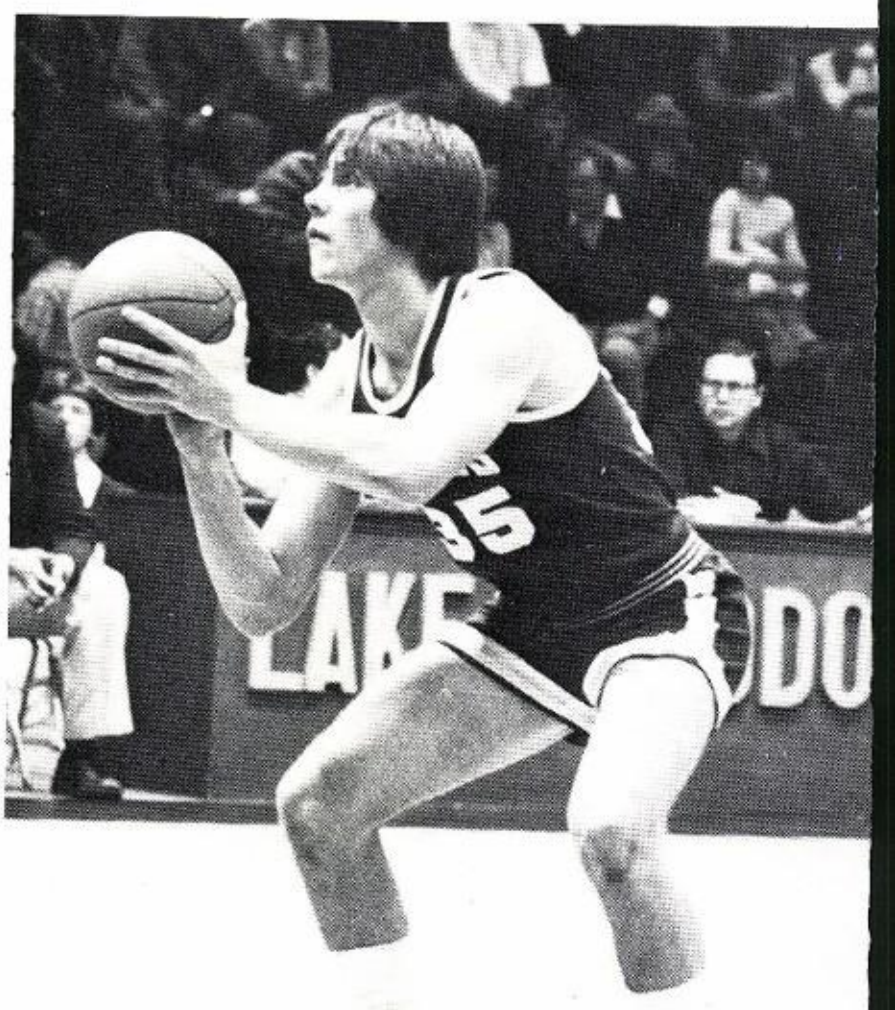
CLASS ACT

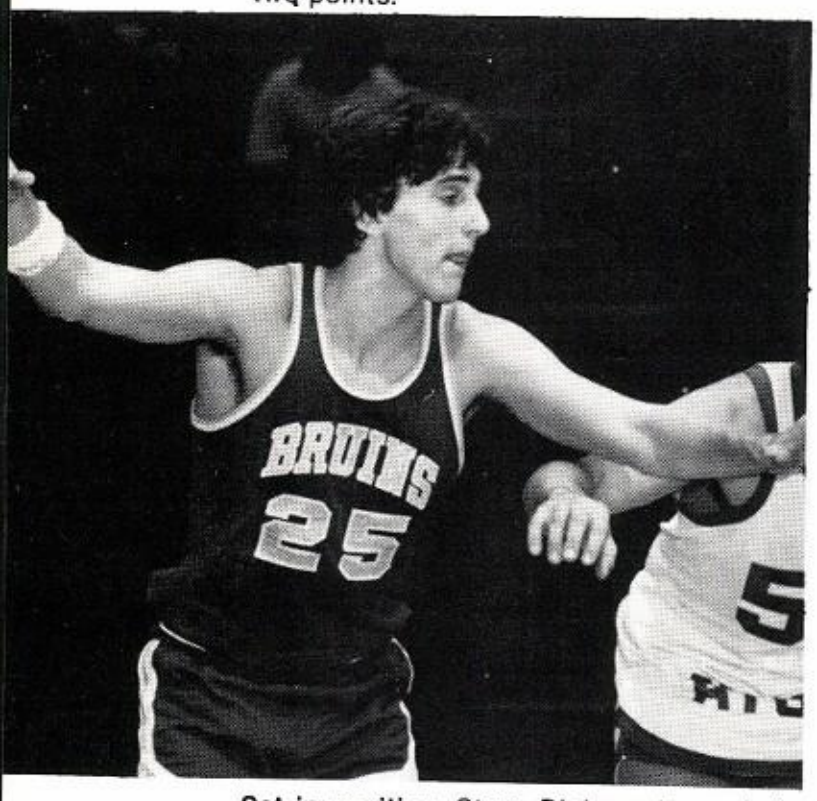
Strong teamwork and a tenacious defense were the marks of the Boys Varsity Basketball team. After losing third year center Scott Booth to a knee injury, things didn't appear bright for the Bruin cagers. Dropping three of the first four games by close margins, the Bruins didn't get on track until the fifth game when they upset th highly ranked Oakton Cougar Competing in the tough Norther District, the team held their own a they finished the season with winning record. Though the tea may have been outsized or ou muscled they were never outclas ed.



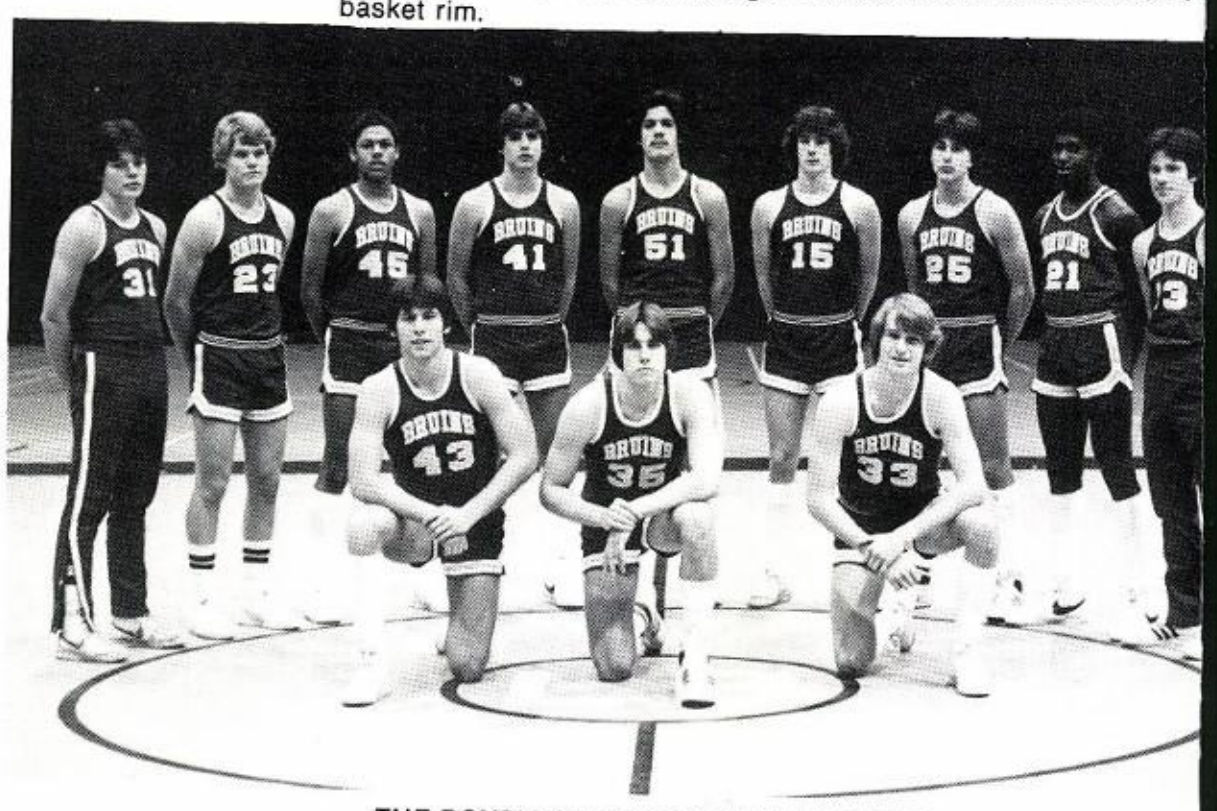
Following through in perfect form, Tom Ondroff puts the ball up for two points.



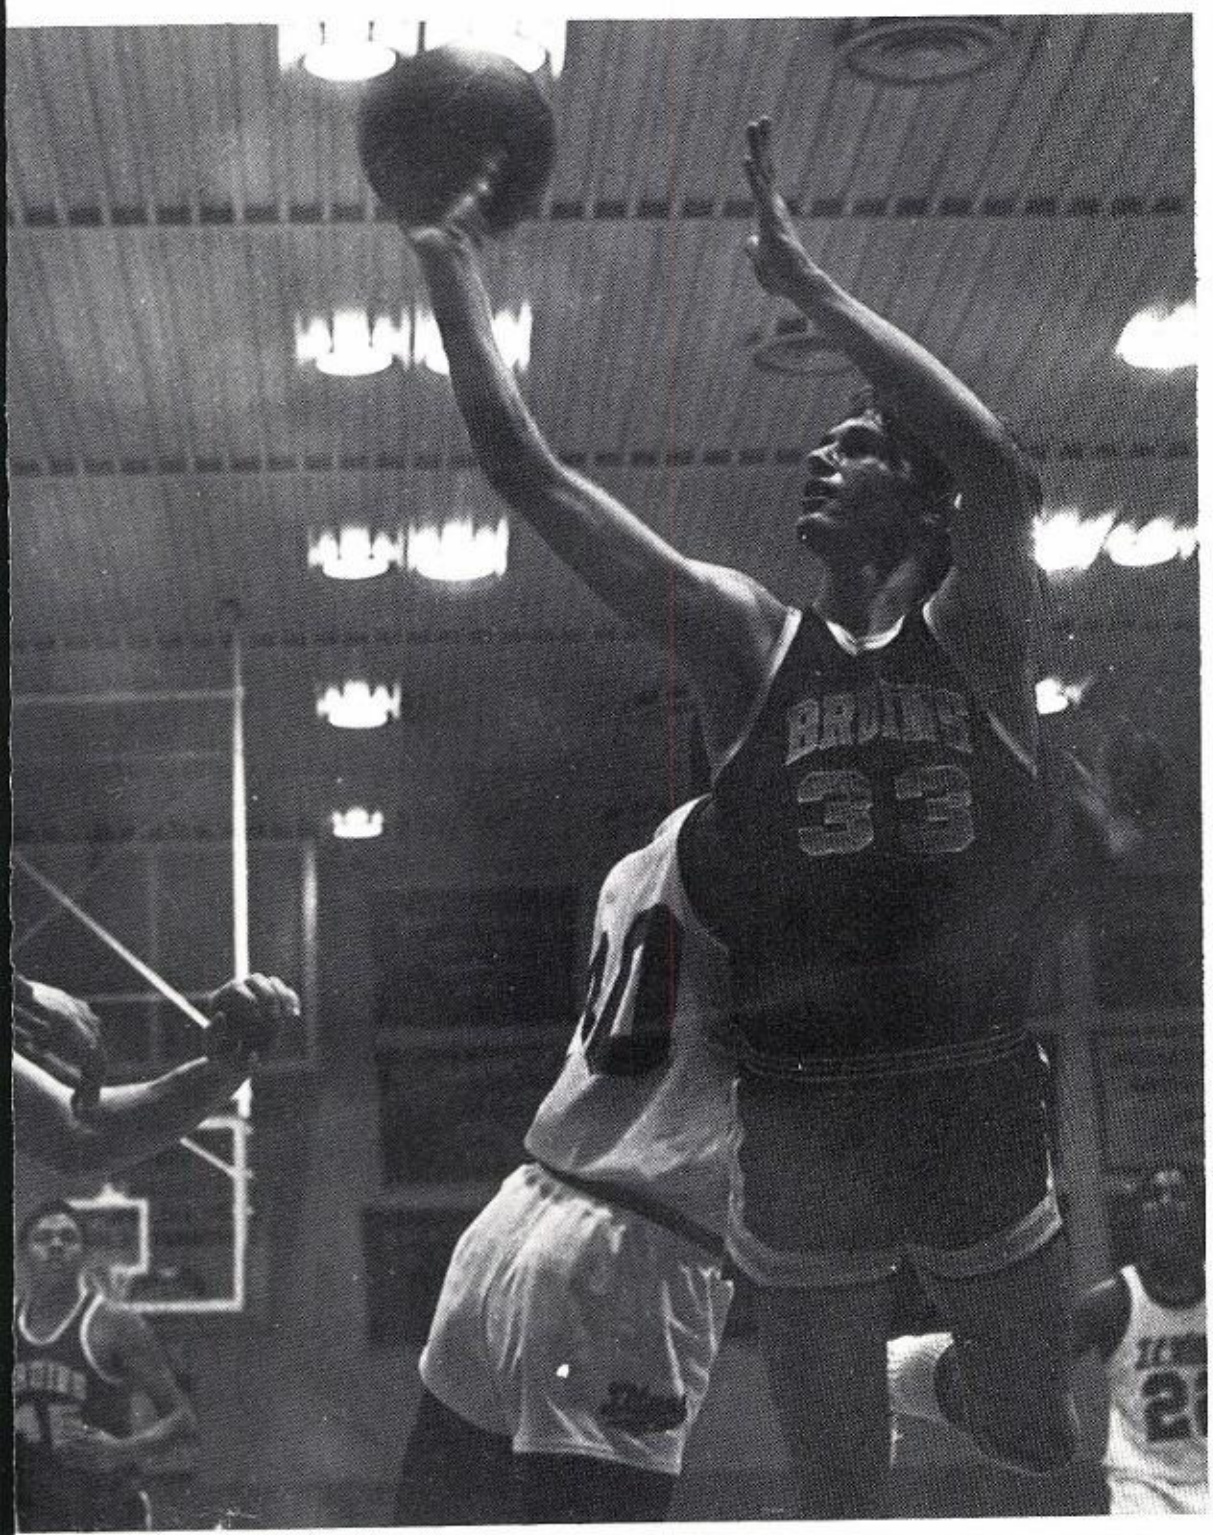
At the foul line, Mike Sullenberger centers his concentration on th basket rim.



Set in position, Steve Digby gets ready to rebound a teammate's foul shot.



THE BOYS' VARSITY BASKETBALL TEAM



After faking out his Titan opponent, Gerard Grundler pushes in a one-handed shot.

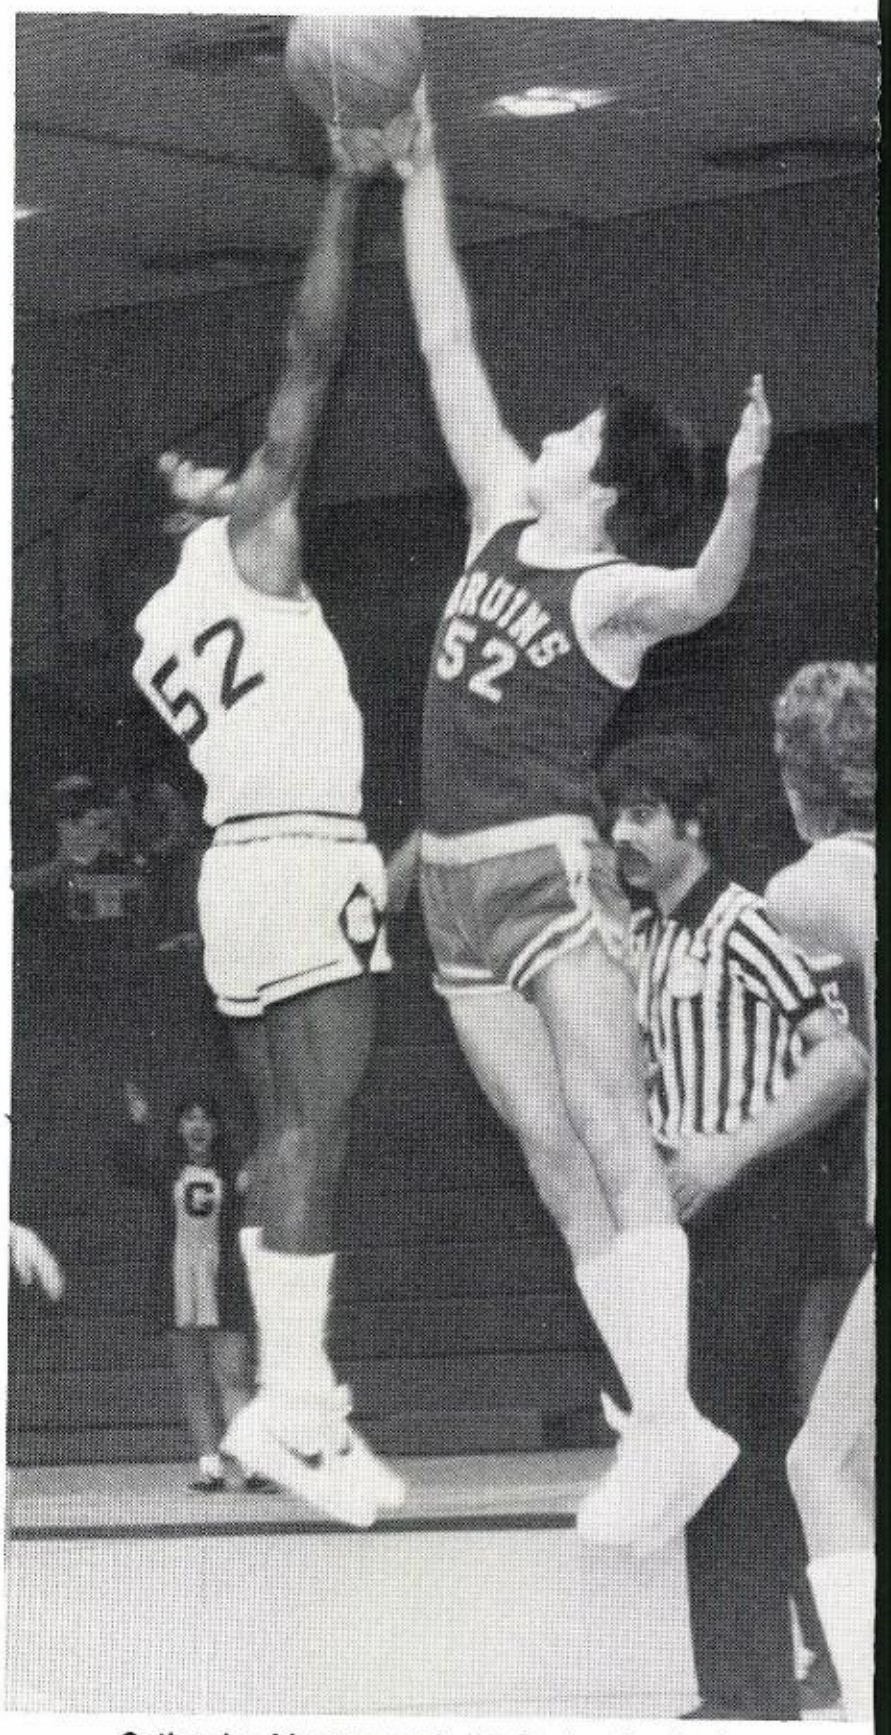
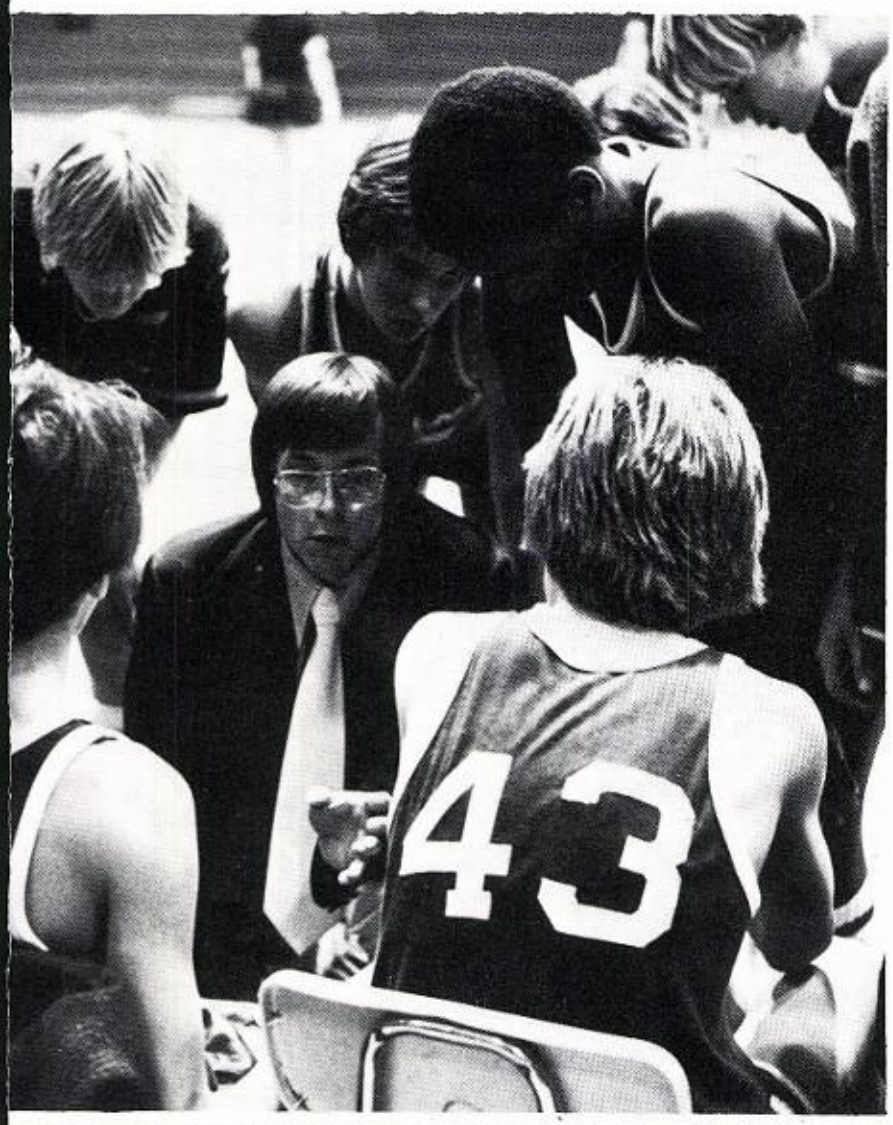
Concentrating on his shot, Rich Lee adds a point to the Bruin tally.



Outleaping his opponent, Jim Davis wins the tap.

SHARP SHOOTERS

After extensive try-outs, 18 of the 45 boys were chosen to play on the Freshmen Basketball team. During his first year as head coach, Greg Hogue was amazed that not one boy dropped out during the week of try-outs. This drive the team had was shown in team work on the field. "The boys want to play," stated Coach Hogue, "They are coachable!" With all the necessities of a good team, the boys showed what it took to be the best.



uring a time out, Coach Greg Hogue gives the team instructions.

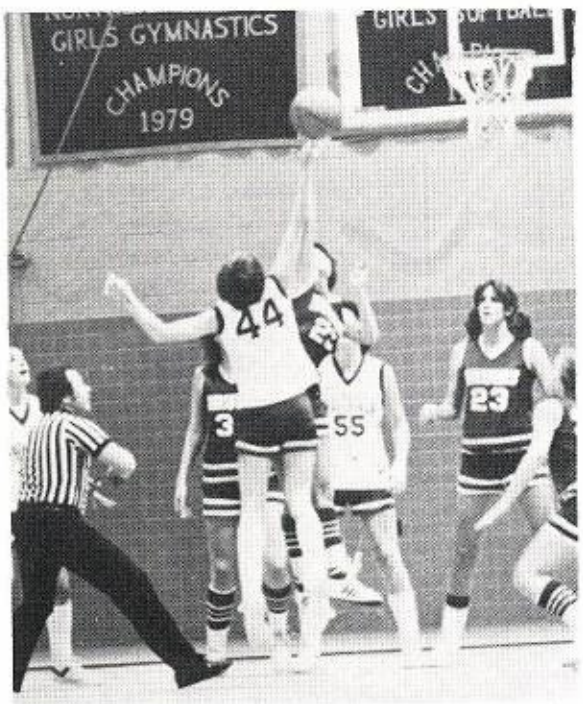
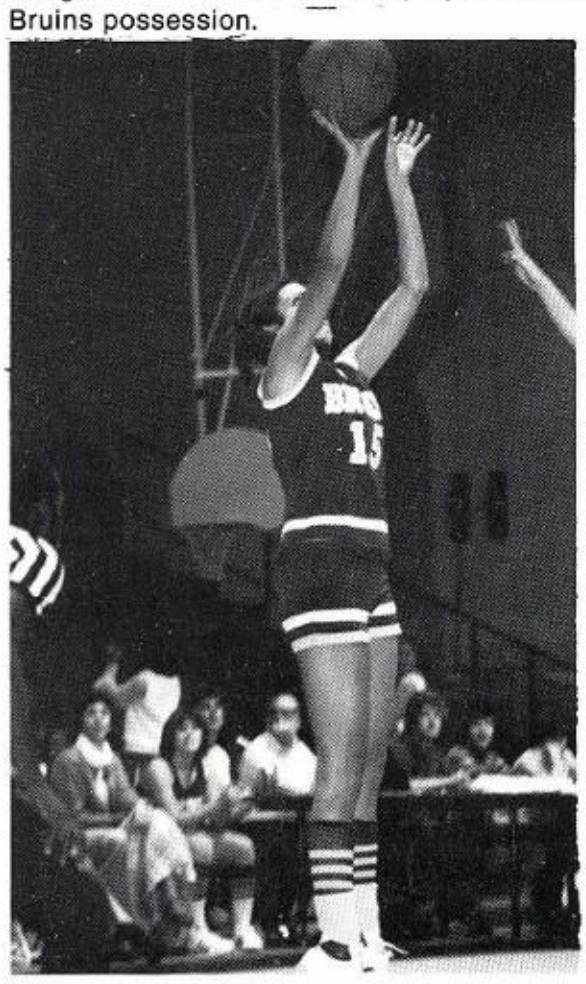
GAINING EXPERIENCE

Strenuous ten hour practices week played a major role in th building of the Girls' Varsity Basketball team. Julie Davis le the squad to an outstanding finis as one of the top teams in th district. Exceptional contribution on defense from Kim Heavey LeeAnn Girman and Margare Siriano stunned the opposing tean by keeping its score to a minimum "The girls were a great group t work with," stated Coach Gayl Doane, "I enjoyed instructin them!" She also stated that tean unity was a definite factor in th successful season.



Margaret Siriano wins the tap, giving the Bruins possession.



Releasing a jump shot, Kim Heavey adds two points to the Bruin total.

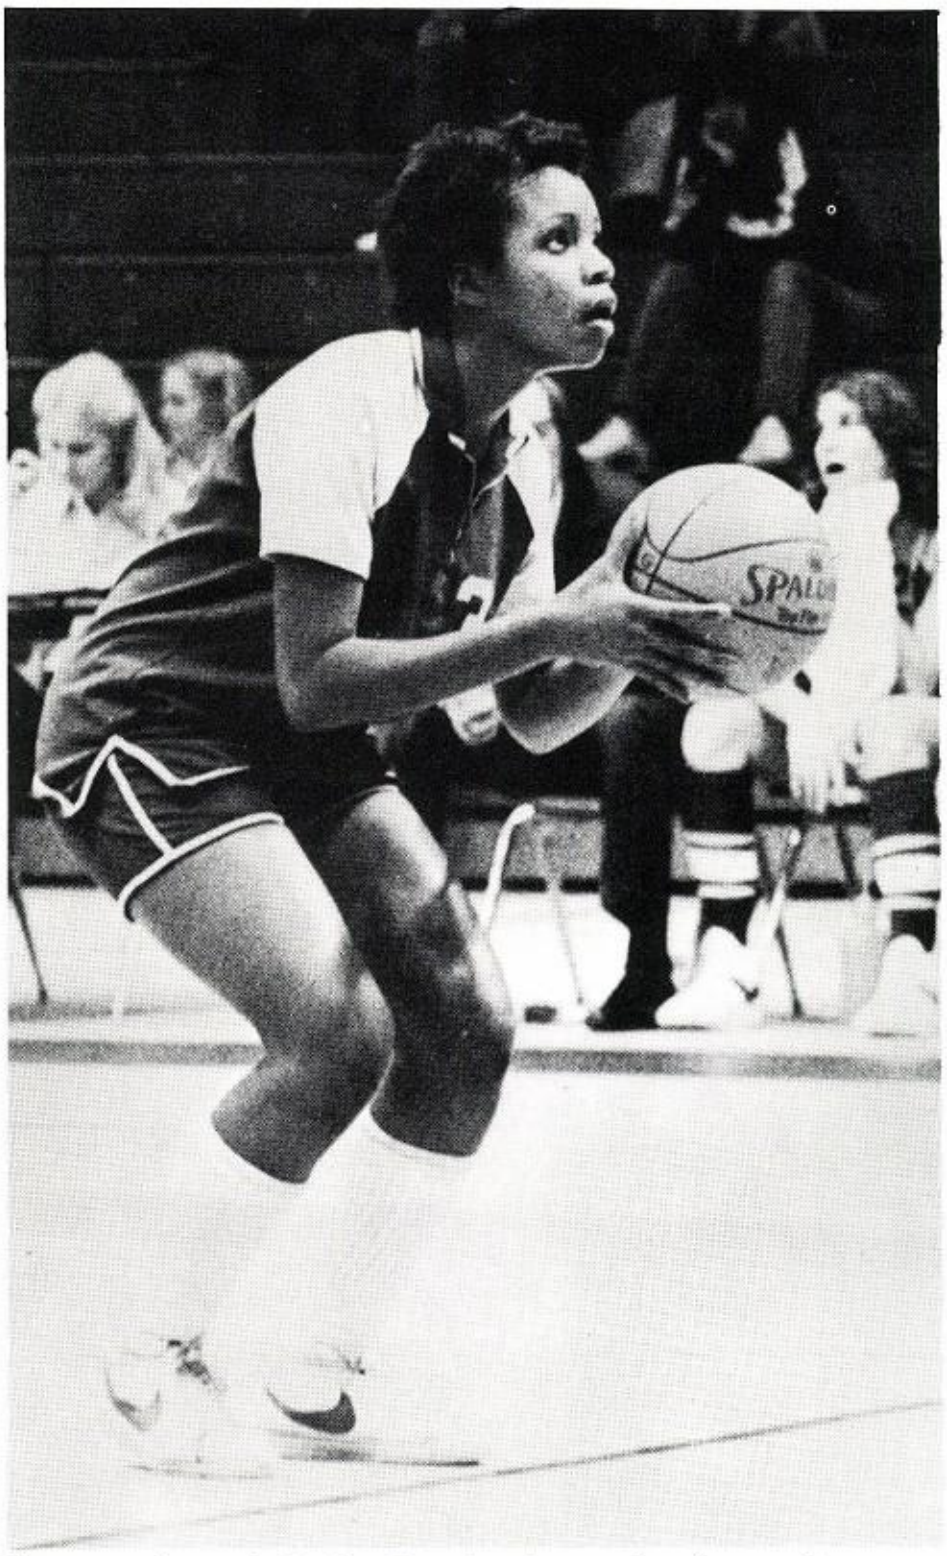
TALENTED

Led by captains Ester Jacobs and Cheryl Primoli, who were both returning players, the girls JV Basketball team displayed determination that proved to be rewarding. Long practices after school and on weekends kept the girls in shape during the strenuous season and helped them play more as a team, than as individuals. The excellent defense helped the victories to be overwhelming and losses only marginal. Coach Brian Sonnek remarked, "This is the most talented JV team ever in Lake Braddock!"



Concentrating on the basket, Ester Jacobs crouches down and prepares to shoot.

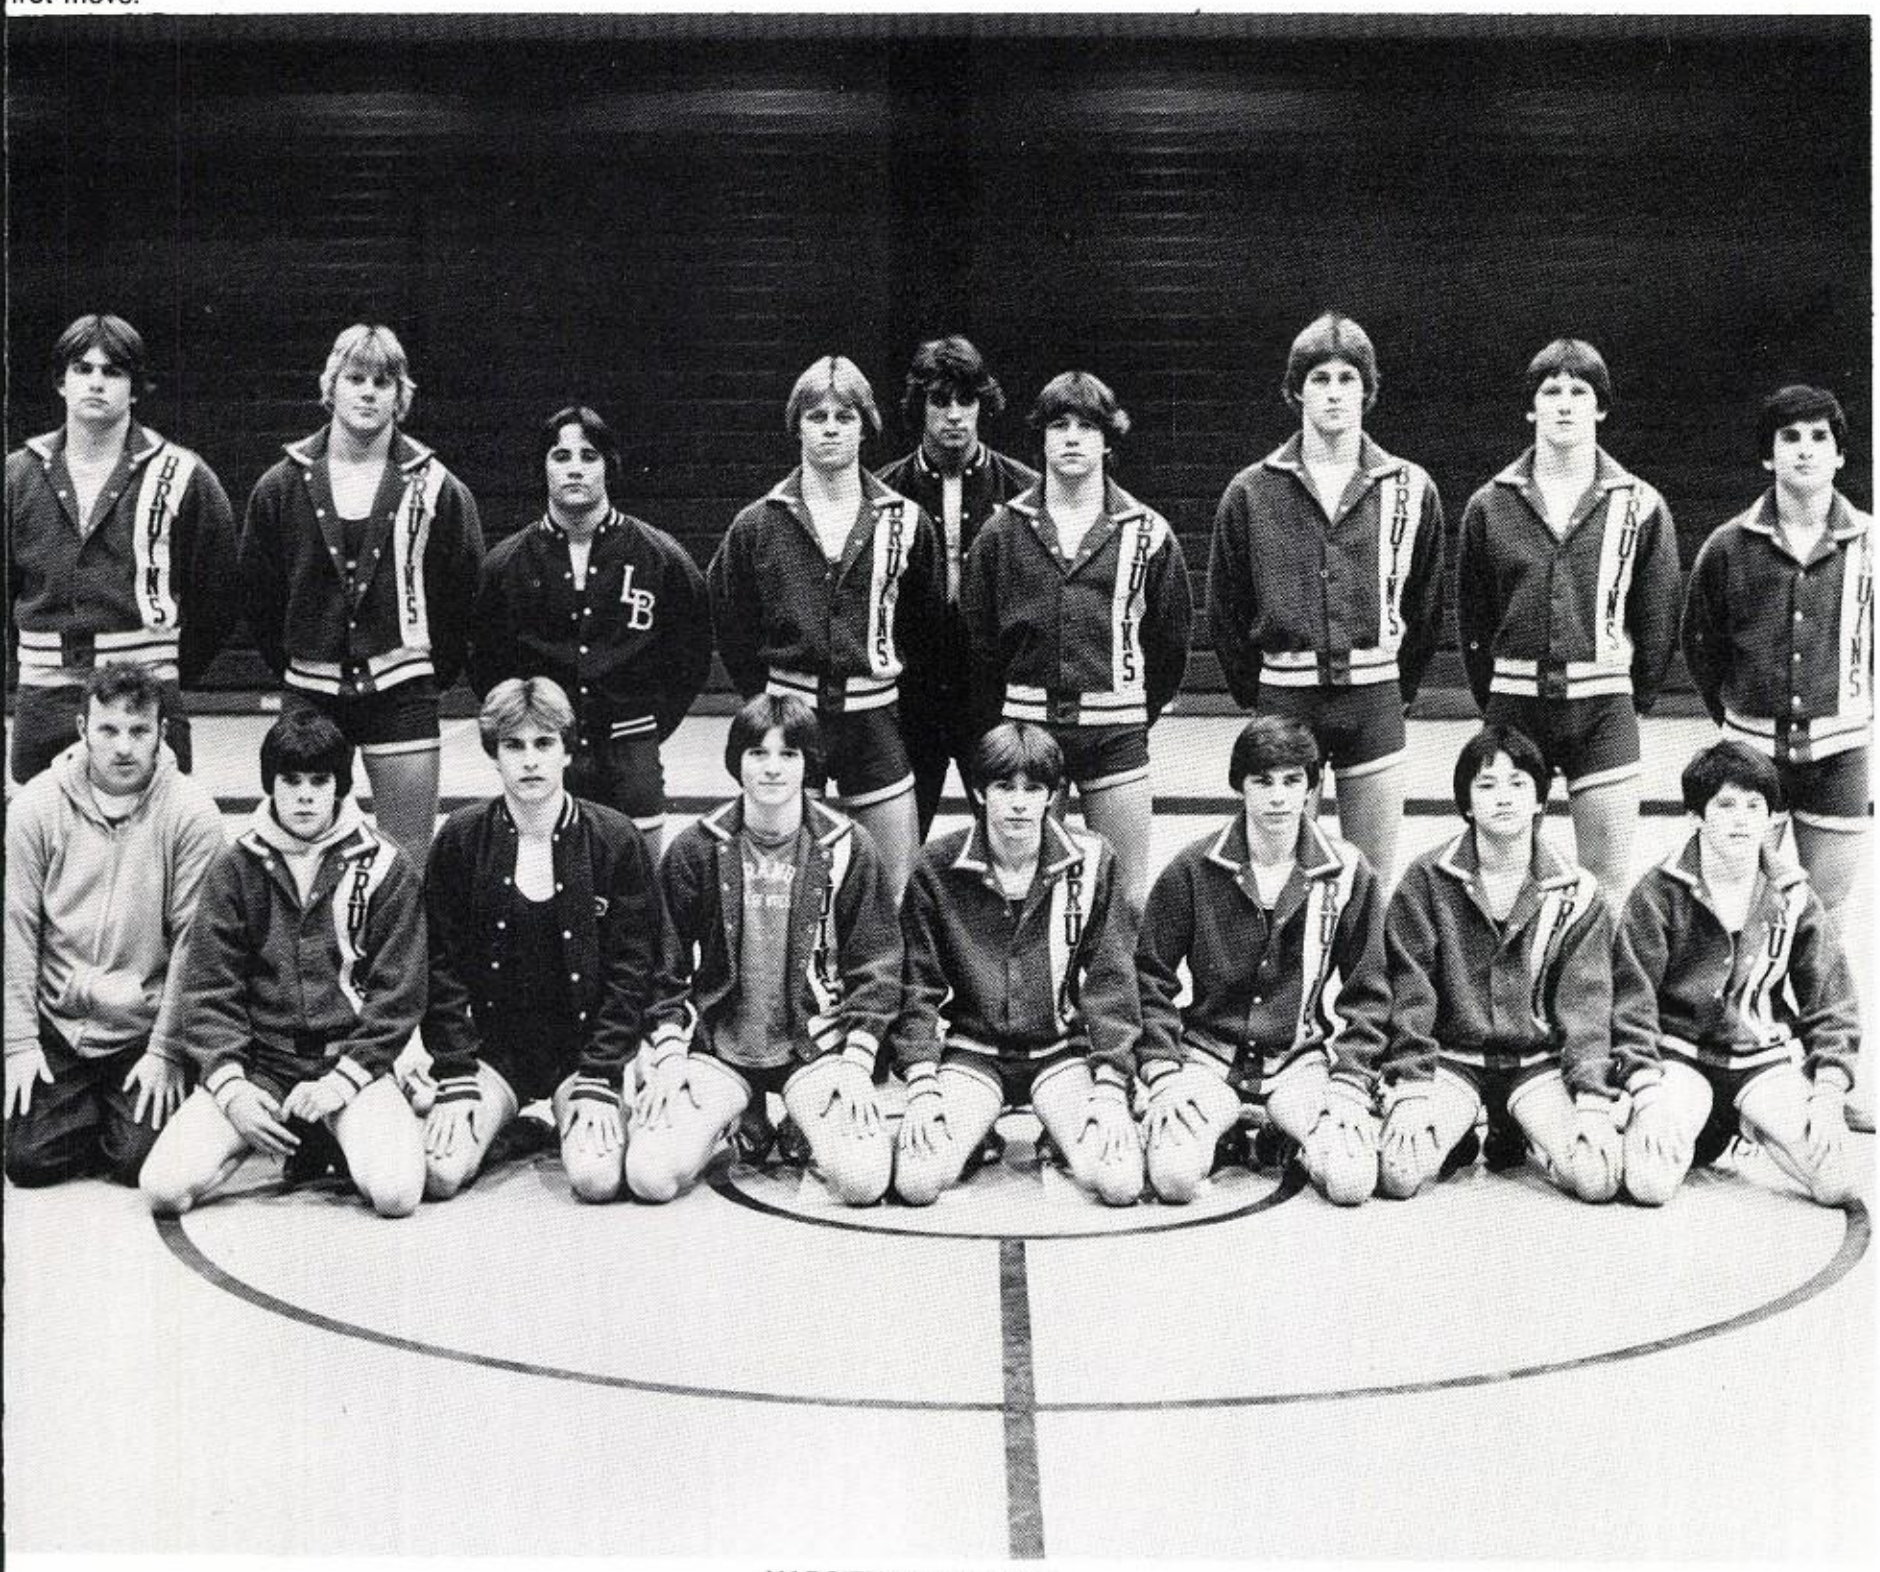
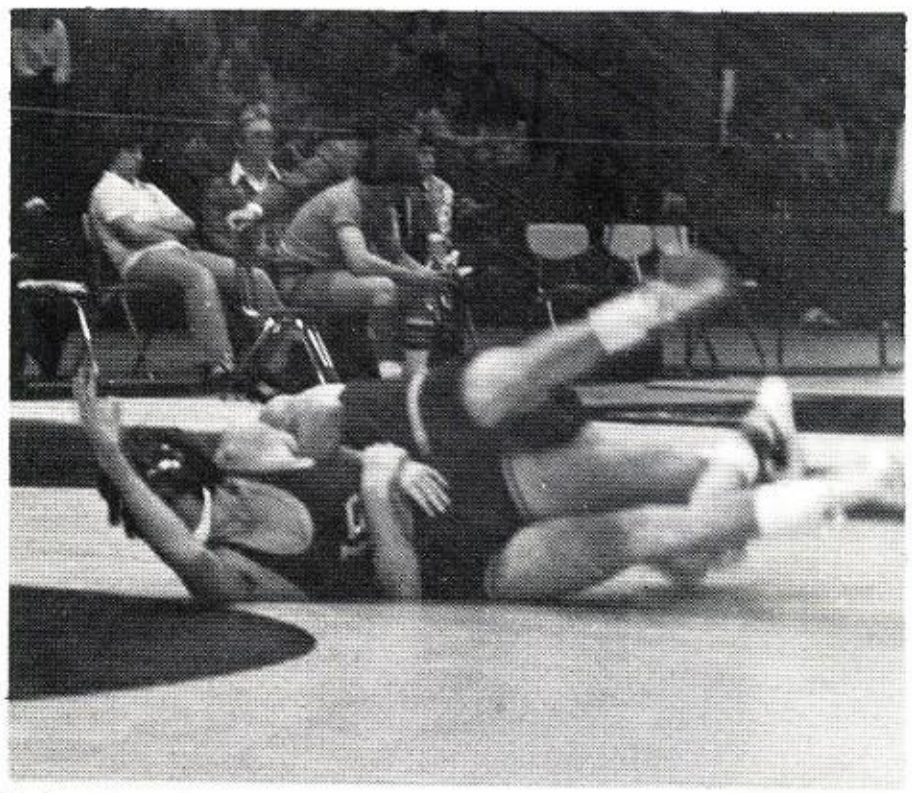
COACH: Steve Friend.

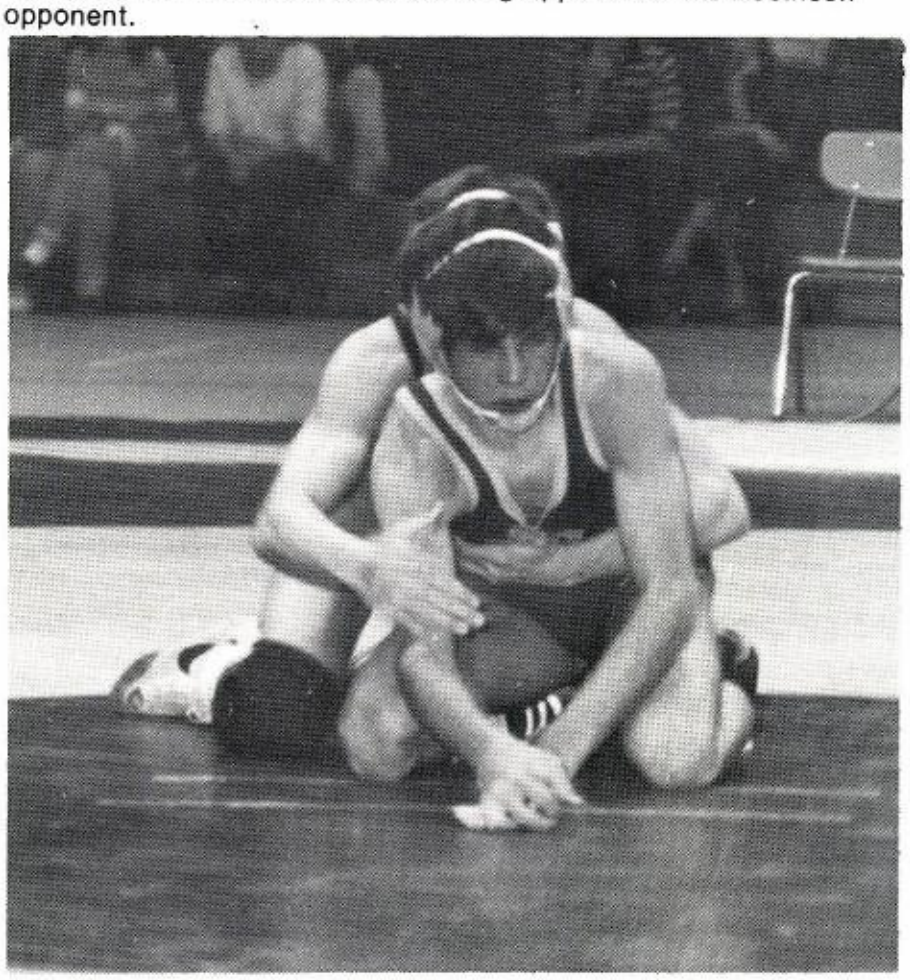


VARSITY WRESTLING

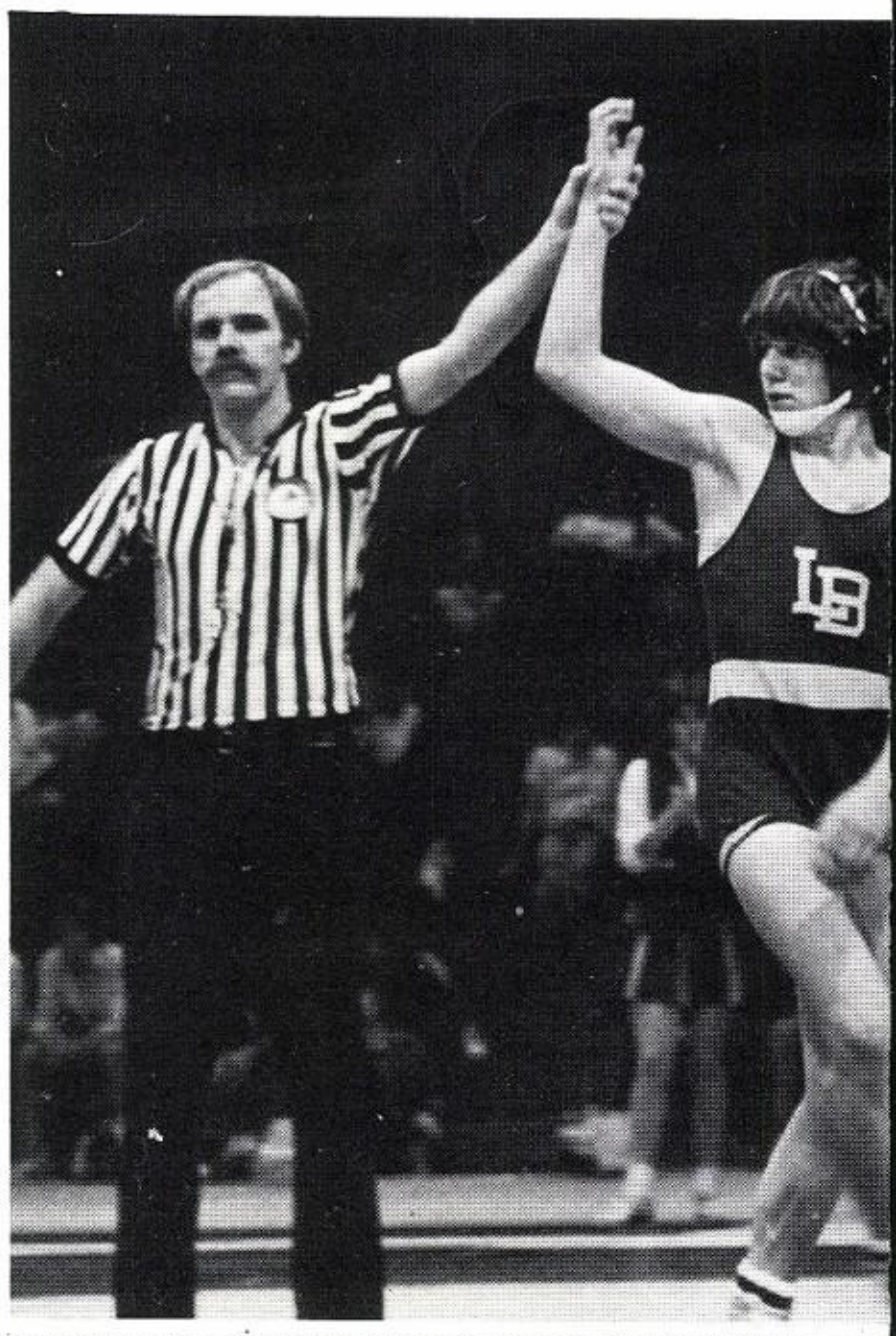
Losing two of the squad's finest wrestlers to injuries,John Hyer and John Moore,the Varsity Wrestling team suffered many agonizing defeats, but never showed signs of giving up. The season was highlighted by victories over district rivals, T.C. Williams and Chantilly. Coach Steve Friend stated, "The injuries really hurt us, but I am proud of the way the team performed." Pat Joseph was invaluable to the team compiling an outstanding 8-1-1 individual record.



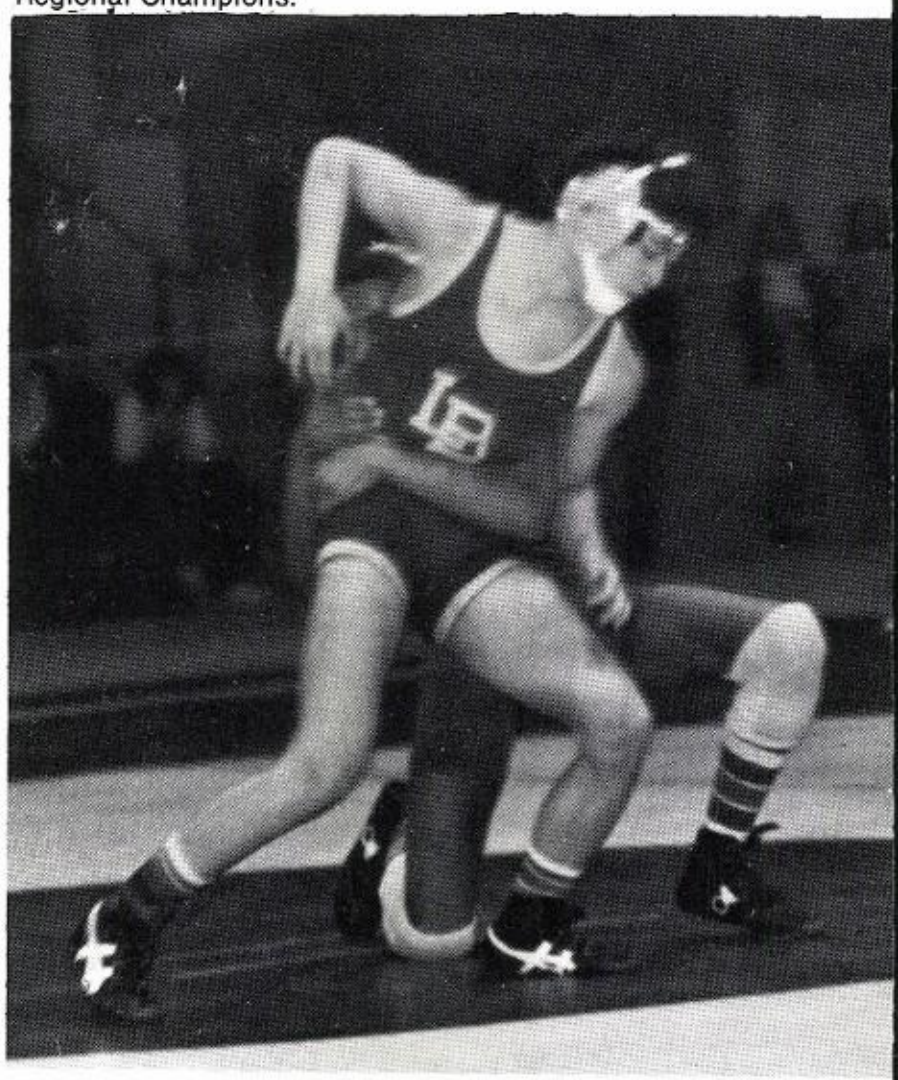
Trying to regain control, Gary Aldrich grapples with his Robinson opponent.



During the District Tournament, Joe Pustis prepares to elude his adversary.



Jeff Herb gains one of the two Bruin victories against Robinson, th Regional Champions.



Using his speed, Tim Kan breaks loose from his opponents grip.

Lori, Howdy! How've you been since I last saw you? It's been a great year, but FINE also a window. I'm really glad we've become such good friends and I'll remember you forever. Remember all those good times we had? Drinking, laughing, doughnuts, Resulting from the number of injuries and the lack of experience the JV Wrestlers were out maneuvered but not out spirited. Excellent performances by Joe Cirillo, Denis Kiley, Rob Slaven, and Rich Thompson helped the grapplers score points which led them to victories. Due to the absence of wrestlers, Jeff Herb wrestled both Varsity and JV. Coach Steve Friend remarked, "Even though they lacked experience, the team did well." With the experience gained and the healing of injuries, the team looked forward to a more successful future.

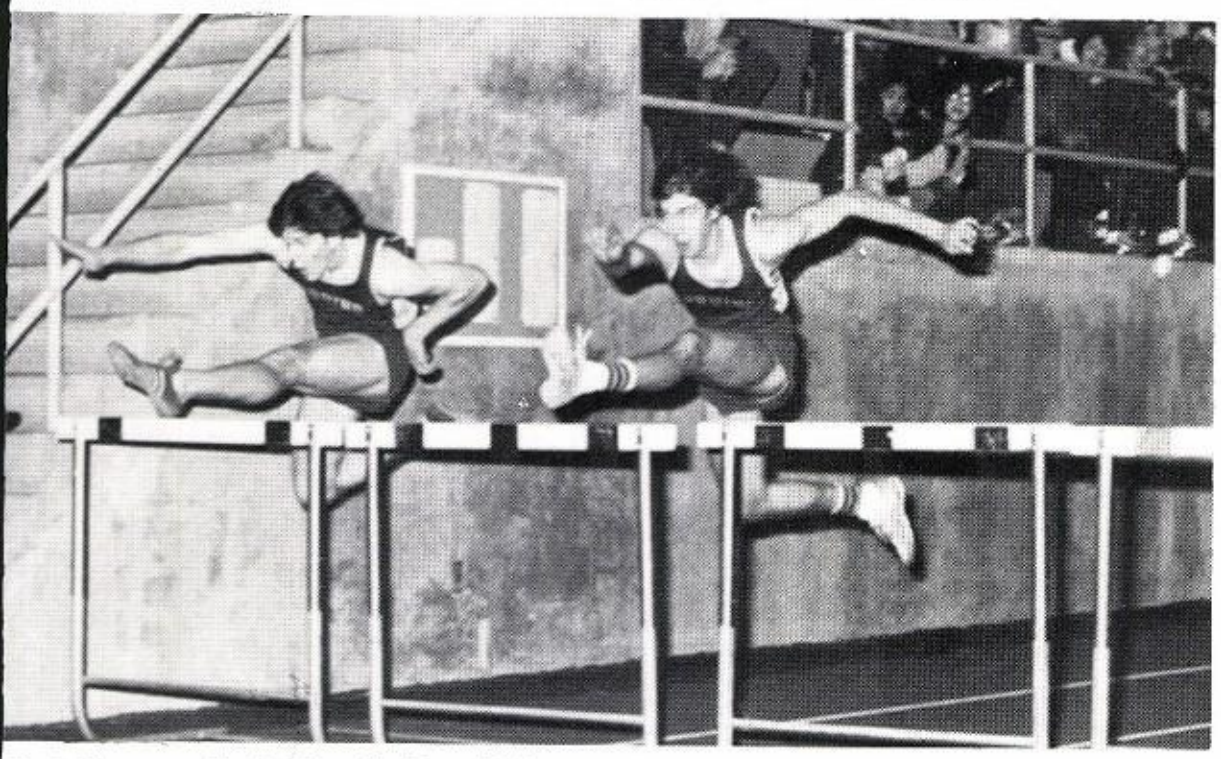
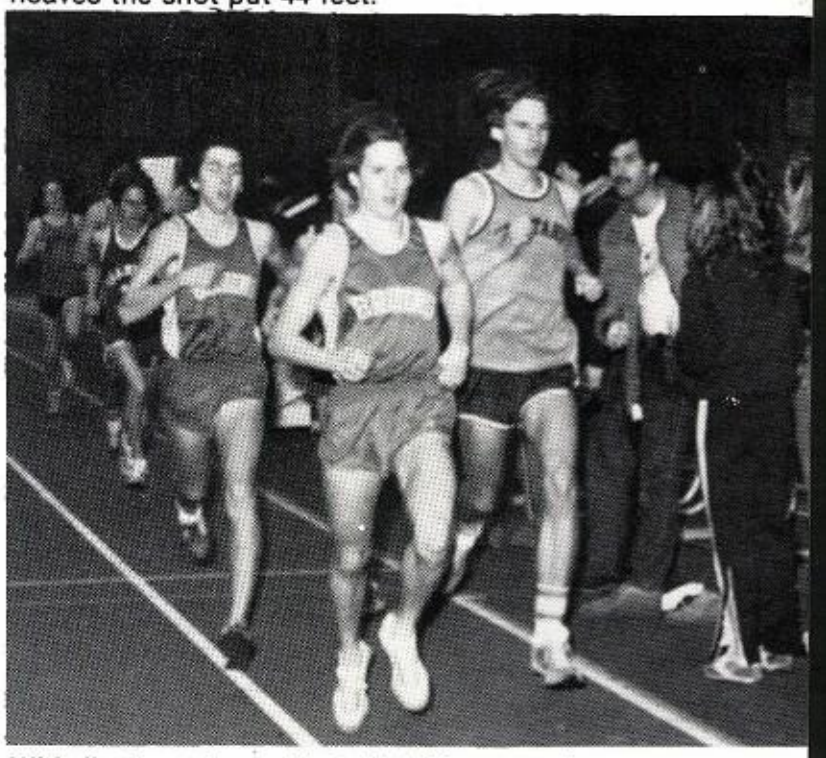
Taking a warm-up throw, Jules Clifford heaves the shot put 44 feet.



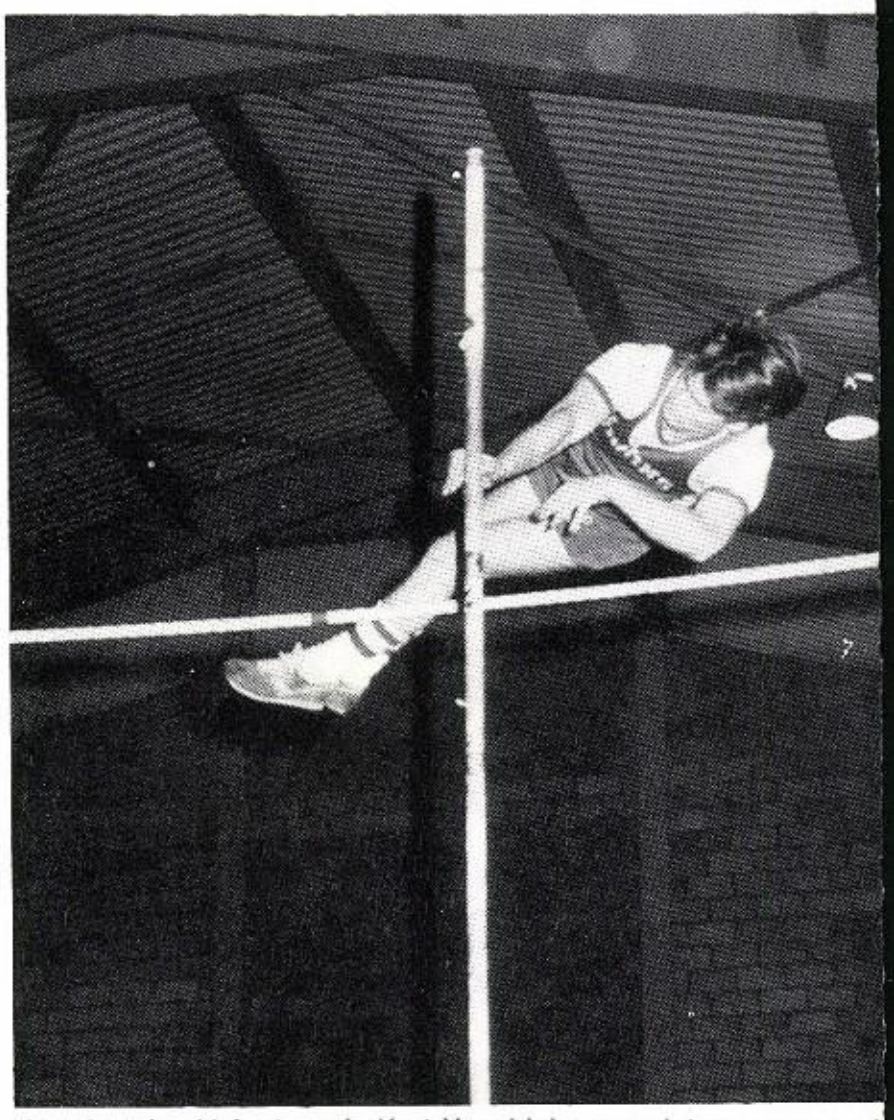
Stretching over the last hurdle, Tom McKay and Dave Nikovits are neck and neck for the lead.



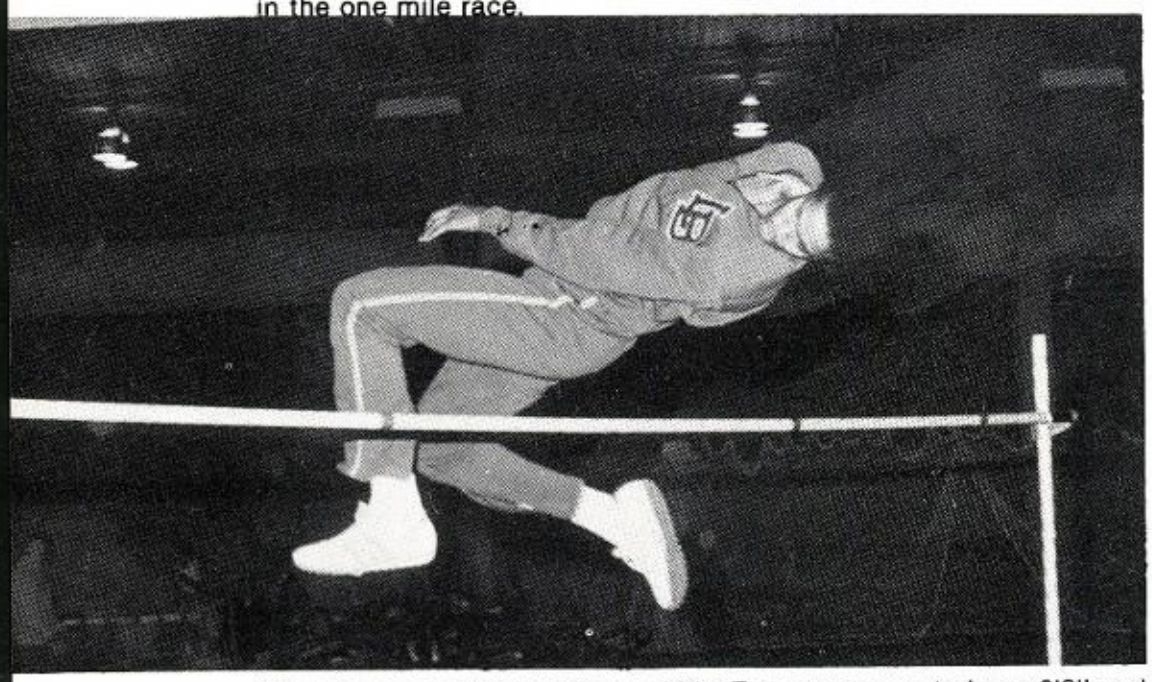
With five laps to go, Mark Hutchinson and Brian Moore keep a strong stride.

Equipped with talent and depth, the Boys' Indoor Track team remained highly competitive throughout the season. The team went 3-0 in the first three tri-meets and quad-meets. Participants were also sent to the William and Mary meet and the prestigious Naval Academy meet which were both held in December. Highlights of the season were the numerous record breaking efforts, includin Thad Smith's pole vault over 14 and Mike Turner's new high jump record of 6'8". Strong competition from Robinson and T.C. Williams kept the Bruins on the move always pushiong ahead. Coach Ed Trimm felt, "We have the bes team ever," and expressed high hopes for the team.

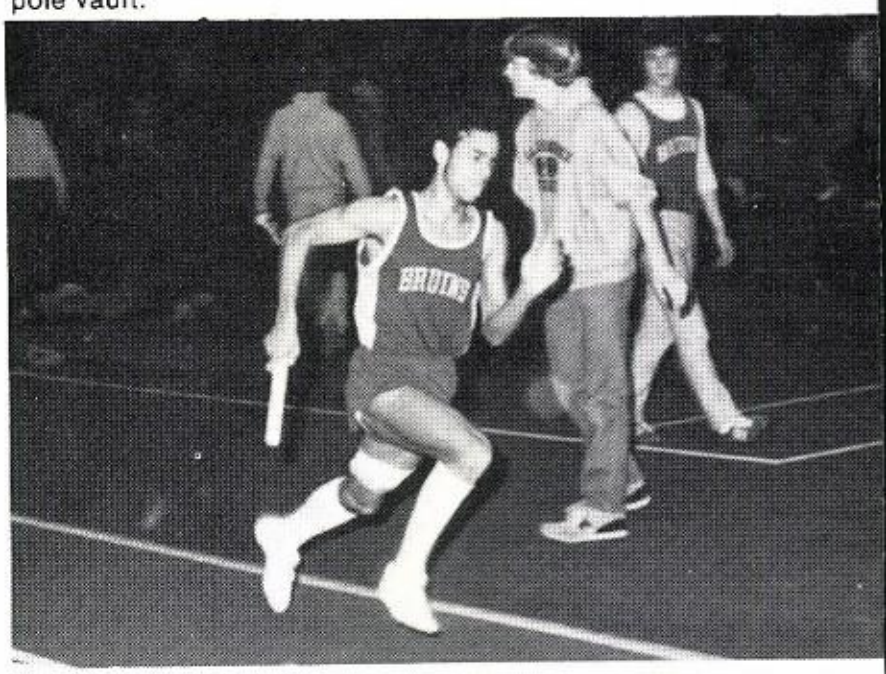
Battling for the lead with his Chantilly opponent, Jim Lull pulls ahead in the one mile race.



Clearing the 11 foot mark, Kurt Yanchinko completes a successf pole vault.

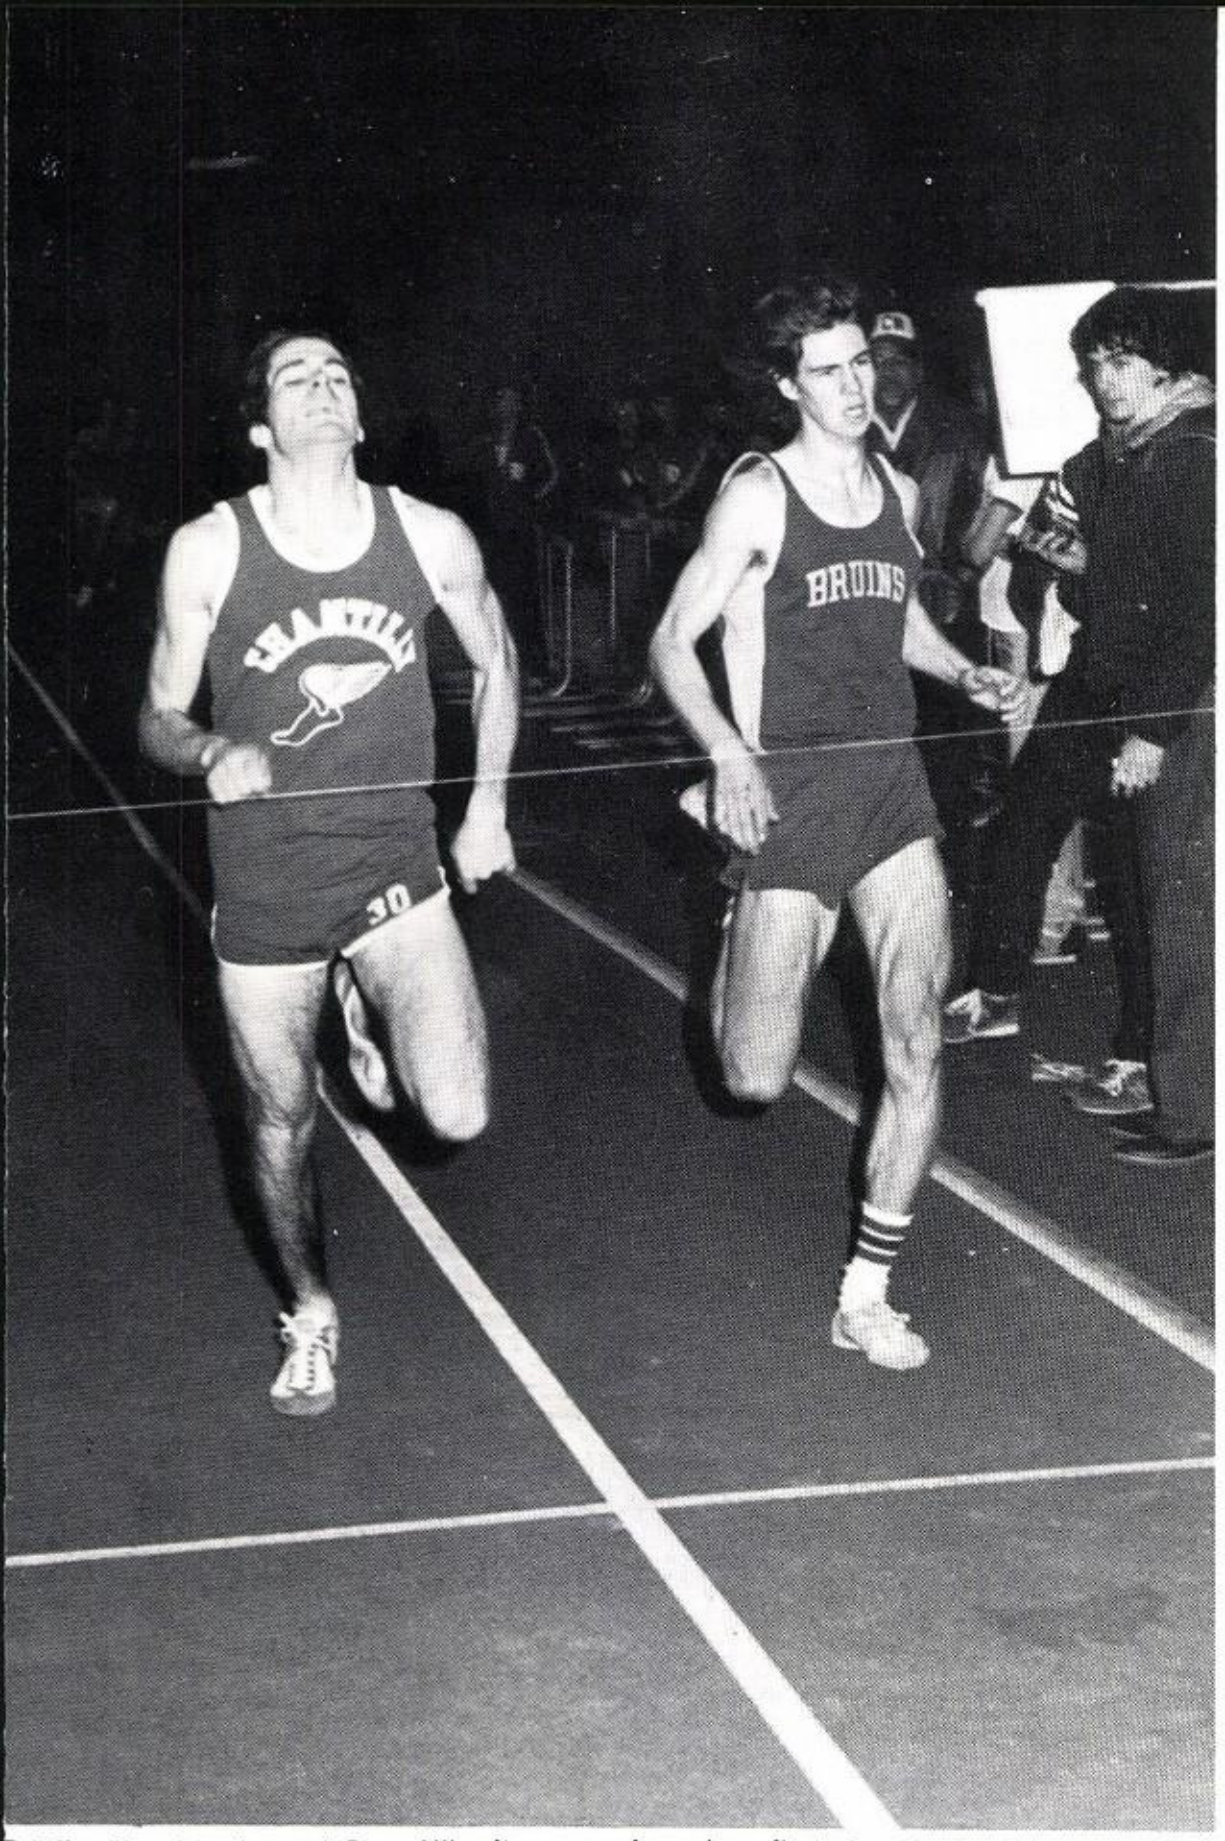


Warming up for the high jump, Mike Turner goes on to jump 6'8" and win his event.

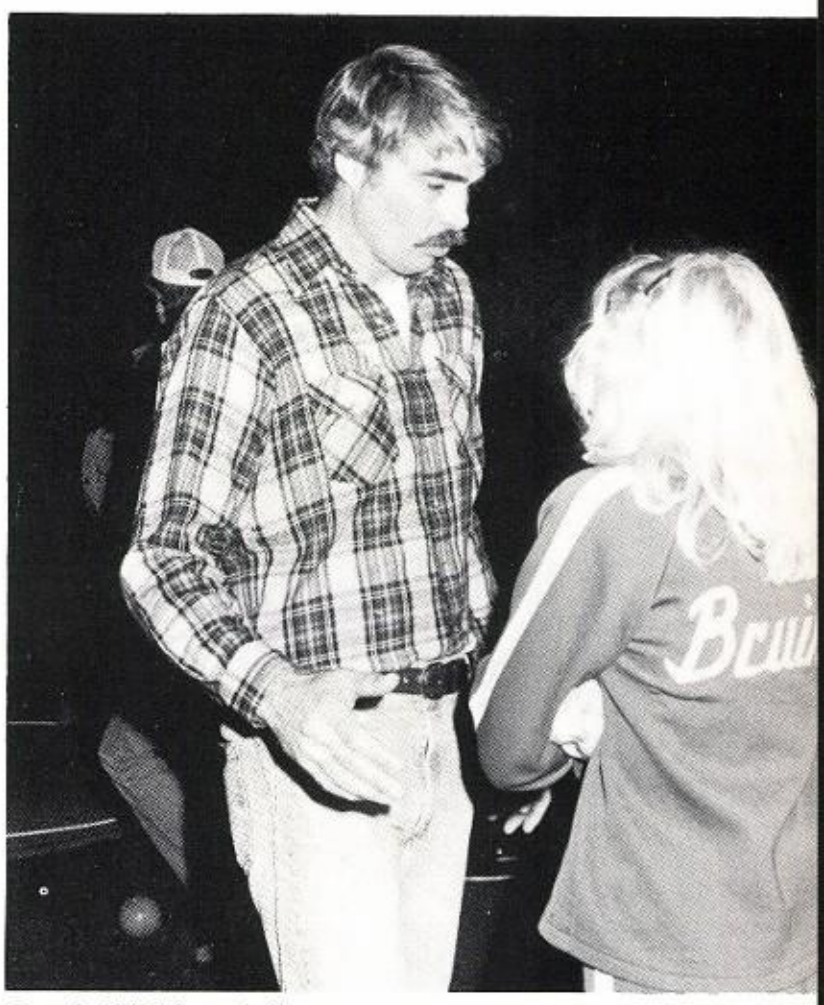


Running a leg in the 880 relay, Dave Redd sprints down th straightaway.

IN TOP FORM



Battling it out to the end, Dave Nikovits comes in a close first place in the 500 meter run.



Coach Ed Trimm talks over some pre-race strategy with a Bruin runner.

Increasing the gap between him and his Spartan opponent, Eric Pollard adds to the winning effort of the 880 relay.

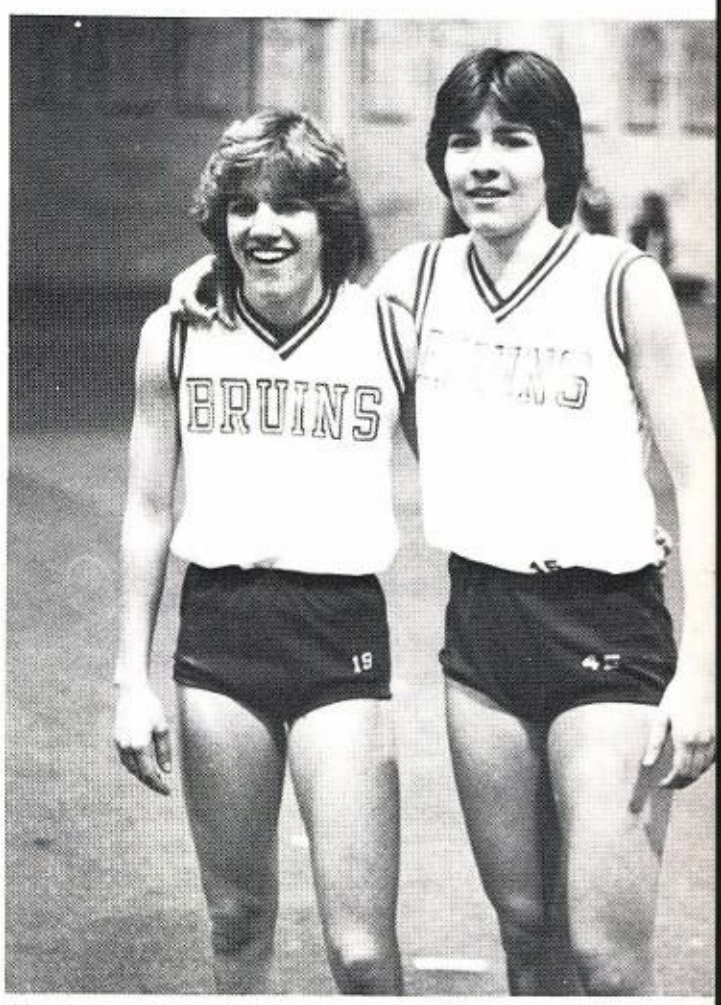
At the crack of the gun Martha Gandy and Andrea Volpe maneuver for good positions in the mile.

SOLID UNIT

Working together as a solid unit enabled the girls indoor track team to complete a successful season. Depth and outstanding individual performances were instrumental in the defeat of the majority of their district opponents. Distance runner Andrea Volpe was invaluable throughout the season, as was Steph Milstead in the shot put. Sprinters Arnetta Autrey and Lisa Clement added an extra boost in both the relays and individual events. Despite many injuries to the team veterans, the new crop of runners proved that the team had great depth. As the season drew to a close, the Bruins once again left their mark as they placed third in Districts.

On the last straightaway, Jill White and Julie Cunningham push to the finish of the 500 meter race.



Hurdlers Lisa Clement and Angie Winegeart congratulate each other.

Jenny Jackson successfully clears 4'10" at the first meet of the season.

Practicing after school severa days a week at Wakefield Park, the Swim and Dive team became a close and hard working unit. Unde the leadership of new coach Bar bara VanMatre, the team improved their times and form preparing to meet the toughest competition in the state. Paul Cassell, Jeff Leap and Rich Walter stood out on the boys swim team as they excelled in every meet. Tim Bottrell and Jim Fry were the standouts on the boys diving team, displaying near perfect form on almost every dive Commenting on the swimmers Coach VanMatre said, "They al worked hard, and they should im prove over the upcoming years."

SWIM AND DIVE

With the addition of defending state champion, Woodson, to the Northern District, the Swim and Dive team lost any hopes for a district championship. However, the team hung together and came away with a successful and rewarding season. Suffering only one loss during the season, to Woodson, the girls and boys teams both finished with 4-1 dual meet records. The girls team was led by swimmers Mimi Hanson and Diana Pryor, and diver Mary Baran. The girls team placed highly in every invitational including a 6th in the state meet.

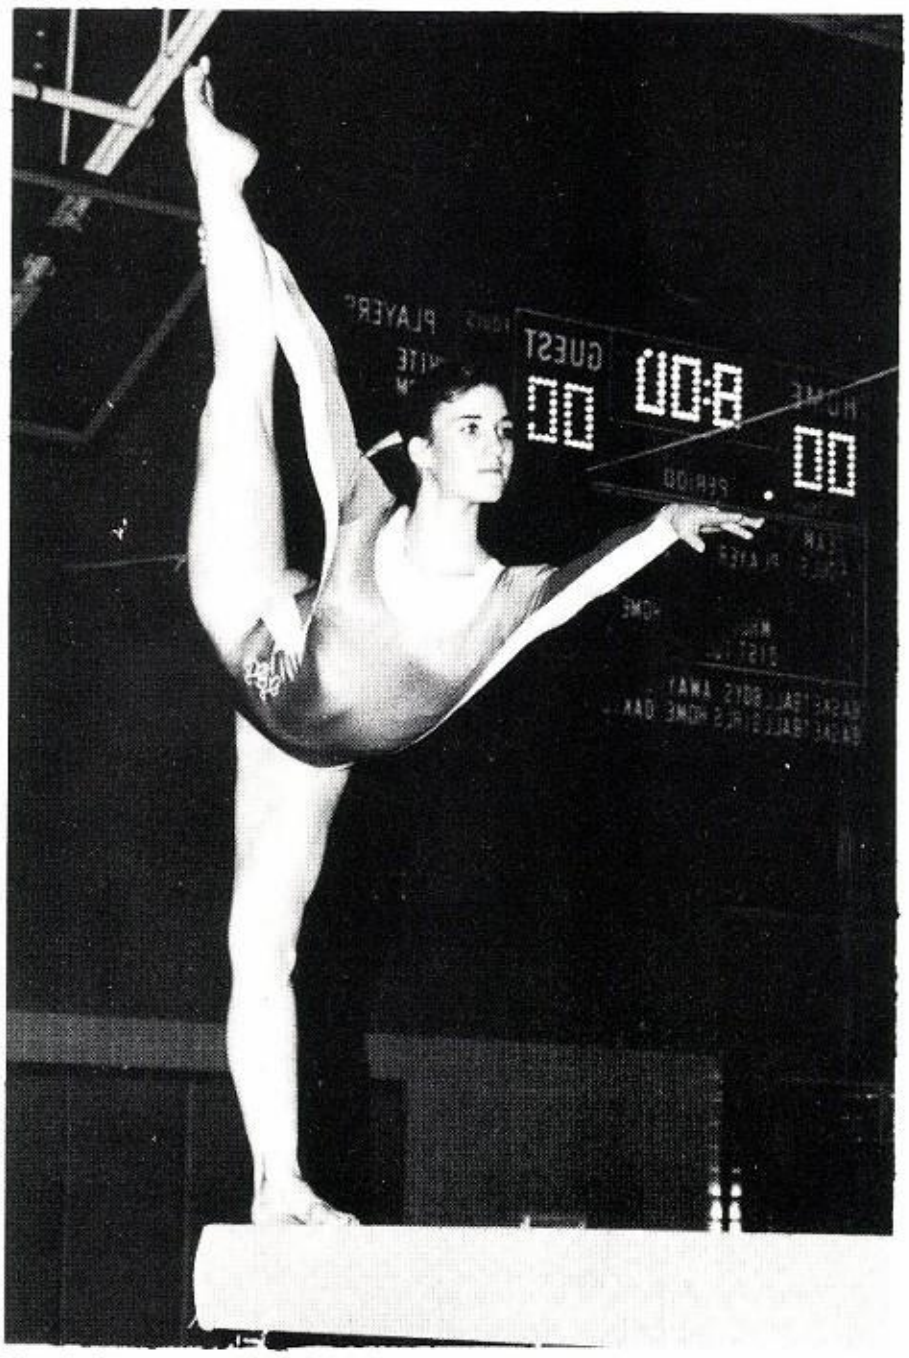
A BALANCED ATTACK

Graceful, energetic and dedicated were the only words to describe the Varsity Gymnastics team. Winning all their dual meets, the team trounced every opponent including the previous state champions, the Woodson Cavaliers. However, the loss of all-around state champion Kathy Ripley crippled the team in the major invitationals; placing second at South Lakes and Stafford and fourth at Parkview. The team had many outstanding individuals, including Janet Delaney and all-around competitor Maggie Eisenhower.



Displaying exceptional balance, Joyia Horstkamp perfects her routine on the beam.

DISTRICT CHAMPIONS

Defeating the defending state champion Woodson Cavaliers the Girls Gymnastics team came away with another district championship. The Bruins won three of the four individual events, and Maggie Eisenhower placed second in the all around competition and first on the balance beam. Kathy Ripley, performing for the first time in over a month, placed first on the parallel uneven bars with a score of 9.35. Wendy Jaffee also placed first in her event, as she earned an 8.9 on the vault.

THE VARSITY FOOTBALL CHEERLEADERS

A BIG CHANGE

Hey, what are those guys doing down there with the cheerleaders? Who do they think they are, anyway? Well, they were Varsity cheerleeaders also. In an attempt to make the '80-'81 cheering squads unique from other years, the guys were right down in front of the crowds, with the girls, leading chants. But cheering at various sports events wasn't the only duty of a cheerleader. They also decorated team rooms and lockers, sold spirit buttons, and handed out dimes during lunch. The squads kept the unity and spirit of our school at its peak whether we were winning or losing. Because of the Varsity cheerleaders undying enthusiasm all teams and the student body held on to that Bruin pride created during the school year.

Maribeth Jensen and Mike Swain work together to boost the spirit of the crowd.

Burying their inhibitions, Javier Arrias, Kevin Cecil, Andy Keninitz, and Chris Manzione joined fourteen girls and comprised the JV Cheerleading squad. While the girls were suited up in purple and gold, the boys appeared in Bruin Bear uniforms and added even more enthusiasm to the games. The girls were thrilled to have bears on the squad and they all worked together to cheer on our football and basketball teams. "Hopefully, more guys will try-out in later seasons," stated one of the Cheerleaders during a practice.

During the Robinson game Susan Szczypinski leads the fans in a cheer.

SHOUT IT OUT

Fun and school spirit were the name of the game. The Freshmen cheerleaders brought a fresh, fabulous, feverish, and fanatic tone to cheerleading. High energy combined with enthusiasm in every cheer to support the Freshmen squad. Unlike the seasonal squads, the Freshmen cheerleaders had one year-round squad. During the year, they decorated athletes' lockers and sold programs at the home football games. Their help was instrumental in bringing school spirit to Lake Braddock.

FRESHMAN CHEERLEADING: Leslie Brunner, Teri Gladstone, Cynthia Hood, Debbie Inciardi, Dawn Maas, Susan Nerseth, Jody Otto, Larissa Raum, Kathy Redinger, Jennifer Rowzie, Danny Schmidt, Jill Sexton, Libby Smith, Alicia Terry. COACH: Margaret Evans.

Show time! Bob Hope's U.S.O. show gave soldiers a taste of entertainment and talent like that of our music, drama, and art departments. A roll of the drums and one knew the band was about to begin the new, 1981 Spirit Song, "Bruins, Bruins, hats off to thee..." The drama department was proud to present its long awaited productions after hours of exhausting practice. Art students felt a sense of pride as they were rewarded for exhibiting artistic talents. Participating in these activities was not only rewarding, but enjoyable.

Secret Service

In the shadows of the theatre came whispering voices. Not those of actors and actress but those of the production crews, grips, and make-up artists. Similar to a secret service, the crews worked quickly and quietly, leaving behind no trace of their work except that of the finished product. After each act during a play the curtain would close and in a split second, reopen. Suddenly a new scene was set up by the 'invisible' working crews. No production was ever complete without the dedication of the crews. Their service was kept secret but it kept the productions going.

Première

In order to prepare themselves for upcoming productions, as soon as school started, Intermediate Drama students were hard at work learning the "tricks of the trade." During their classes, the soon to be actors and actresses went through annunciating drills of all kinds. Students also were divided into groups and each group was responsible for writing and presenting an original skit. By the time December rolled around the new actors and actresses were ready to present the production "Cheaper by the Dozen". After trying out for parts in front of Mr. Ed Petty and Mr. Dale Rumberger, many hours were spent in rehearsals. The students' hard work paid off, as they had four fine performances, on December 12, 13, 19, and 20, in the Little Theater.

During drama class, Beth Langston shows the facial expression needed to be a good actress.

Each of the ninety-two theatre art students were divided into four levels of classes depending on their previous experience. Years I and II brought on the basics: theory, design, research, and such productions as "Oedipus Rex" and "Antigone." Theatre classes III and IV performed straight popular productions such as "Little Women" in November, and two senior theses in February and April. Both the popular and historical worlds were brought to the stage of Lake Braddock through the talents of the theatre arts classes.

Calm blue water stretched out toward the horizon as far as the eye could see, while lounge chairs and beach blankets sat invitingly upon the polyester carpet. Strangely enough, this was a scene in the gallery of the art department, one of the many displays often echoed in paint and pencil. Always expanding, this year's art department offered new, in depth courses for the more serious artists, including commercial art, ceramics, and crafts. Students also had the opportunity to visit other departments, such as cosmetology, to gain experience in drawing moving models while increasing student awareness of the art program. Special events, such as collective and one-man shows, and the year end Mother's Day Sale, were also used to bring the much deserved attention to the student creativity and skill. Our art program brought "a touch of class" to our academic world.

Long hard hours of practice paid off for the marching band members as they heard the cheers of fans at football games and at competitions. It was a great feeling for them to come off the field and know that they had done their best. The band began practicing at band camp during the weeks of August 18-29 from 8:30 AM to 5:0C PM. It performed at all home football games. Most band members also took the initiative to support the team at away games as well. During the year, the band competed in several competitions. The first was the Autumn Music Festival at Episcopal High School in Alexandria where it won the grand prize and the specialty award for the best colorguard. Other fall competitions included the Marching Bands of America in Westchester, Pennsylvania, the Mount Vernon Annual Marching Band Competition at Mount Vernon at which the band placed second in its class, and the Robinson Spectacular at Robinson High School.

Terrific Talent

Terrific was the only word to describe the Symphonic Band. According to Mr. Bly, "There is just a great wealth of talent - especially from the senior class members who have played for four or five years." The fifty-six members, directed by Mr. Carl Bly, performed with the utmost style and grace in many festivals and concerts, such as the Christmas Concert on December 11, the Pre-Festival concert March 2 and the Spring Concert May 21. The band elected officers - Kevin Cordt, President; Leslie Nance, Vice-President; Lisa Peck, Secretary; and Mary Jett, Treasurer - to solve problems and unite the band. The presence of these officers provided the stability from which the band members created ear-pleasing music.

Preparation and practice were the big keys to the Concert Band's tremendous success. The "Sounds of Music" could be heard floating within the Music department as the Concert Band prepared for their four concerts. The first was a Christmas Concert given on December 11, followed by two concerts during the first week of March; a Pre-Festival Concert, and the District Concert Festival. The year culminated with the annual Spring Concert, given the fourth week of May. Practice and preparation certainly paid off for the Concert Band members as the year was a big success.

Big band music from members of the Jazz Lab engulfed room J104 during fifth period. The eighteen members practiced the sounds of Count Basie and other great band leaders each day, and learned how to use improvisation in their music. Consisting of saxophones, trombones, trumpets, drums, a tuba, a piano and a guitar, the group of juniors and seniors demonstrated their versatility and talent. Performances were given at the Jazz Ensemble Concert on January 22, the District Jazz Festival on January 24, the Marshall Jazz Festival on February 14, and the Madison Tri-State Jazz Festival on April 25. The year was considered a success by all as the fun and enjoyment of the music's big brass sounds were felt.

Sounds Of Music

Outbreaking sounds of music were heard by those approaching the Music Department during second period as members of the Concert Orchestra tuned up. Conducted by Mrs. Caroline Shaw, members in grades seven through nine met to perfect their musical skills. Various pieces were practiced, including favorites like "Feelings" and the "Brandenburg Concerto." Each section of instruments worked on a different part of the melody, which they then harmonized for perfection. Yet, extra hours of weekly practice were also required for improvement. Highlights of the year included performances given at the Christmas and Easter Concerts. Benefits also included awards members could try out for by attending festivals such as the Solo Festival and Junior Regionals. Although being a member of the Orchestra required a lot of time and effort, members played because they enjoyed it.

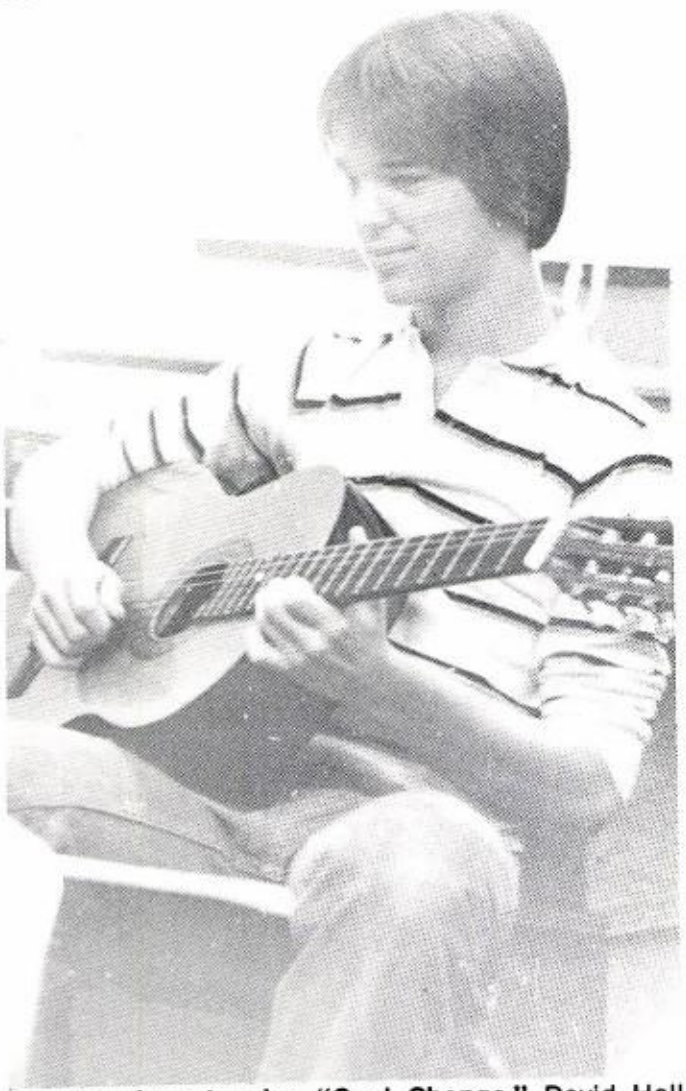
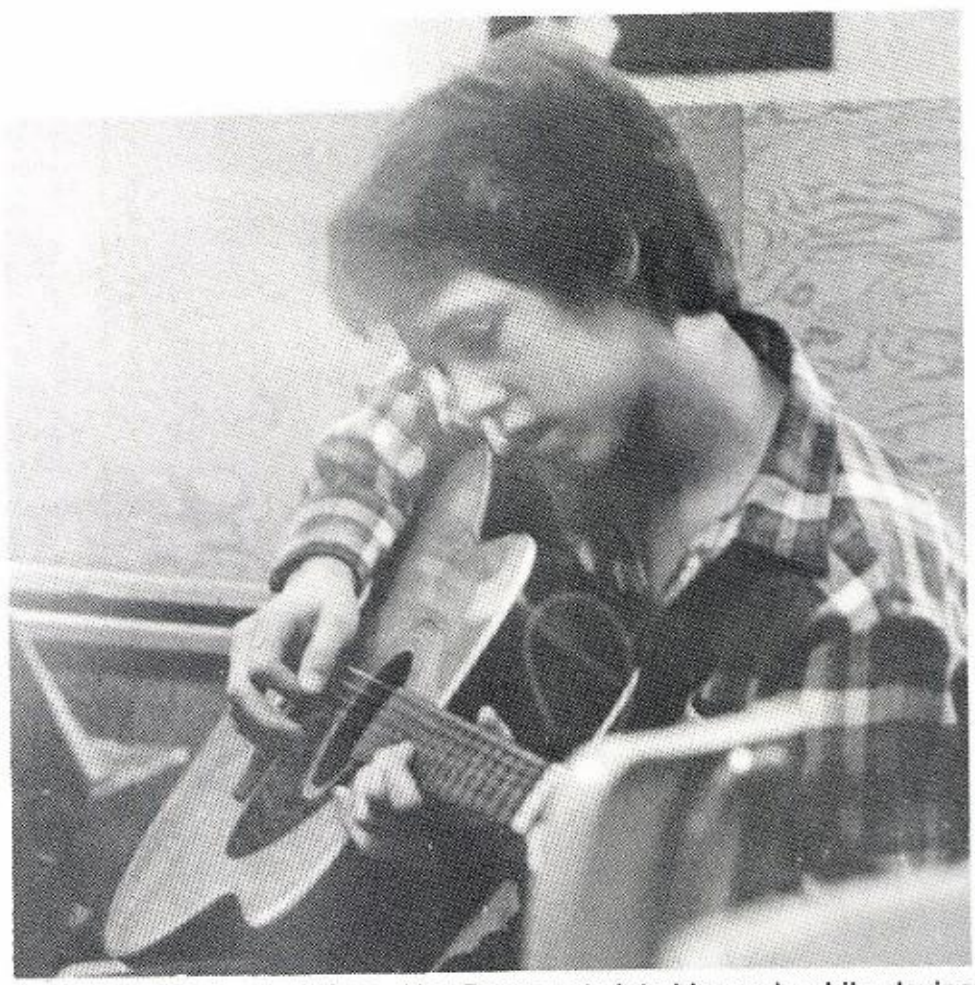
Strumming Along

Under the direction of Mrs. Slosky, the Guitar Ensemble performs "Christmas Medley of the Bells."

Guitar anyone? Guitar classes led by Ms. Susan Slosky were available for students of every degree of ability. Playing the guitar as a recreational instrument and playing to obtain a better understanding of music were both stressed. Techniques, such as playing by note, chord, or pattern, were emphasized in class. Level I included playing the recorder for the first quarter. An audition was required to get into the Guitar Ensemble. This was the first year this group performed, and they did so in conjunction with the Intermediate Swing Singers. The Guitar Ensemble performed at several area elementary schools as well as in the winter and spring concerts in January and May. Music ranged from classical, to popular, to folk, to jazz. A highlight of the year was having the Madison Guitar Trio perform for the classes and give a workshop.



Learning how to play "Cool Change," David Hall strums along with the rest of the class.



During his third period class, Alex Brown gets into his music while playing "Come Sail Away."

WIND ENSEMBLE: Director: Mr. John LaCava, M. Adams, G. Ahearn, K. Almstedt, T. Billings, C. Bonilla, K. Caponecchi, T. Casagrande, K. Cassell, S. Causey, C. Cecka, C. Cline, S. Cohn, J. Cooper, K. Preparing for the V.B.O.D.A. Band Festival are clarinet players Lee Godwin and Debi Roberts.

Wind Song

While most students were still focusing their eyes, these students were wide awake. Bright and early each morning they would play, filling the band room with the sounds of clarinets, cornets, and a host of other instruments. But who were they? They were members of the Wind Ensemble, a talented though little known performing band. The Wind Ensemble was composed of intermediate students who had successfully auditioned for the band the preceding spring. Performances included their winter concert on December 16, their festival concert on March 10, and their spring concert on June 2, as well as the all regional band auditions in January and the V.B.O.D.A. band festival in March. Eighteen musicians from the Wind Ensemble made the all regional band, making them the largest group to represent any one school in the region. Through long hours of practice, the Wind Ensemble rose to be one of the most outstanding groups in our excellent music department.

Trumpet player Jason Trizna concentrates on his technique.

Do-Re-Mi

Notes of do-re-mi rang out from Ms. Olga Morales' first period class as members of the Concert Choir began warming up their vocal cords. The eighth and ninth grade girls sang both serious and popular music in preparation for performances given at the Christmas Concert on December 23 and the Spring Concert on May 19. Members competed individually in the All Regionals in November, the All County in January, and the District Festival in early February. Each girl received ratings such as superior or excellent for their pitch, loudness, and memorization of the music. Although the class required a lot of effort, everyone enjoyed themselves and took pride in their song-filled melodies.

Sing And Swing

Those who saw the Intermediate Swing Singers perform, soon observed the talent, skill, and drive of the group. Although numerous eighth and ninth grade students auditioned, only ten girls and six boys were selected. Throughout the year, the sixteen member song and dance team, along with the Guitar Ensemble, performed at many nearby schools. They usually gave hour long presentations consisting mostly of popular music. The two major shows were the Christmas Show held on December 23, and the Spring Concert held in May. Highlighting the spring show was Kelly Stamback's awe inspiring solo, "The Rose". Each performance demanded hours of rehearsal, which were held after school. The quality of the performance justified those rehearsals, proving that old adage that practice makes perfect.

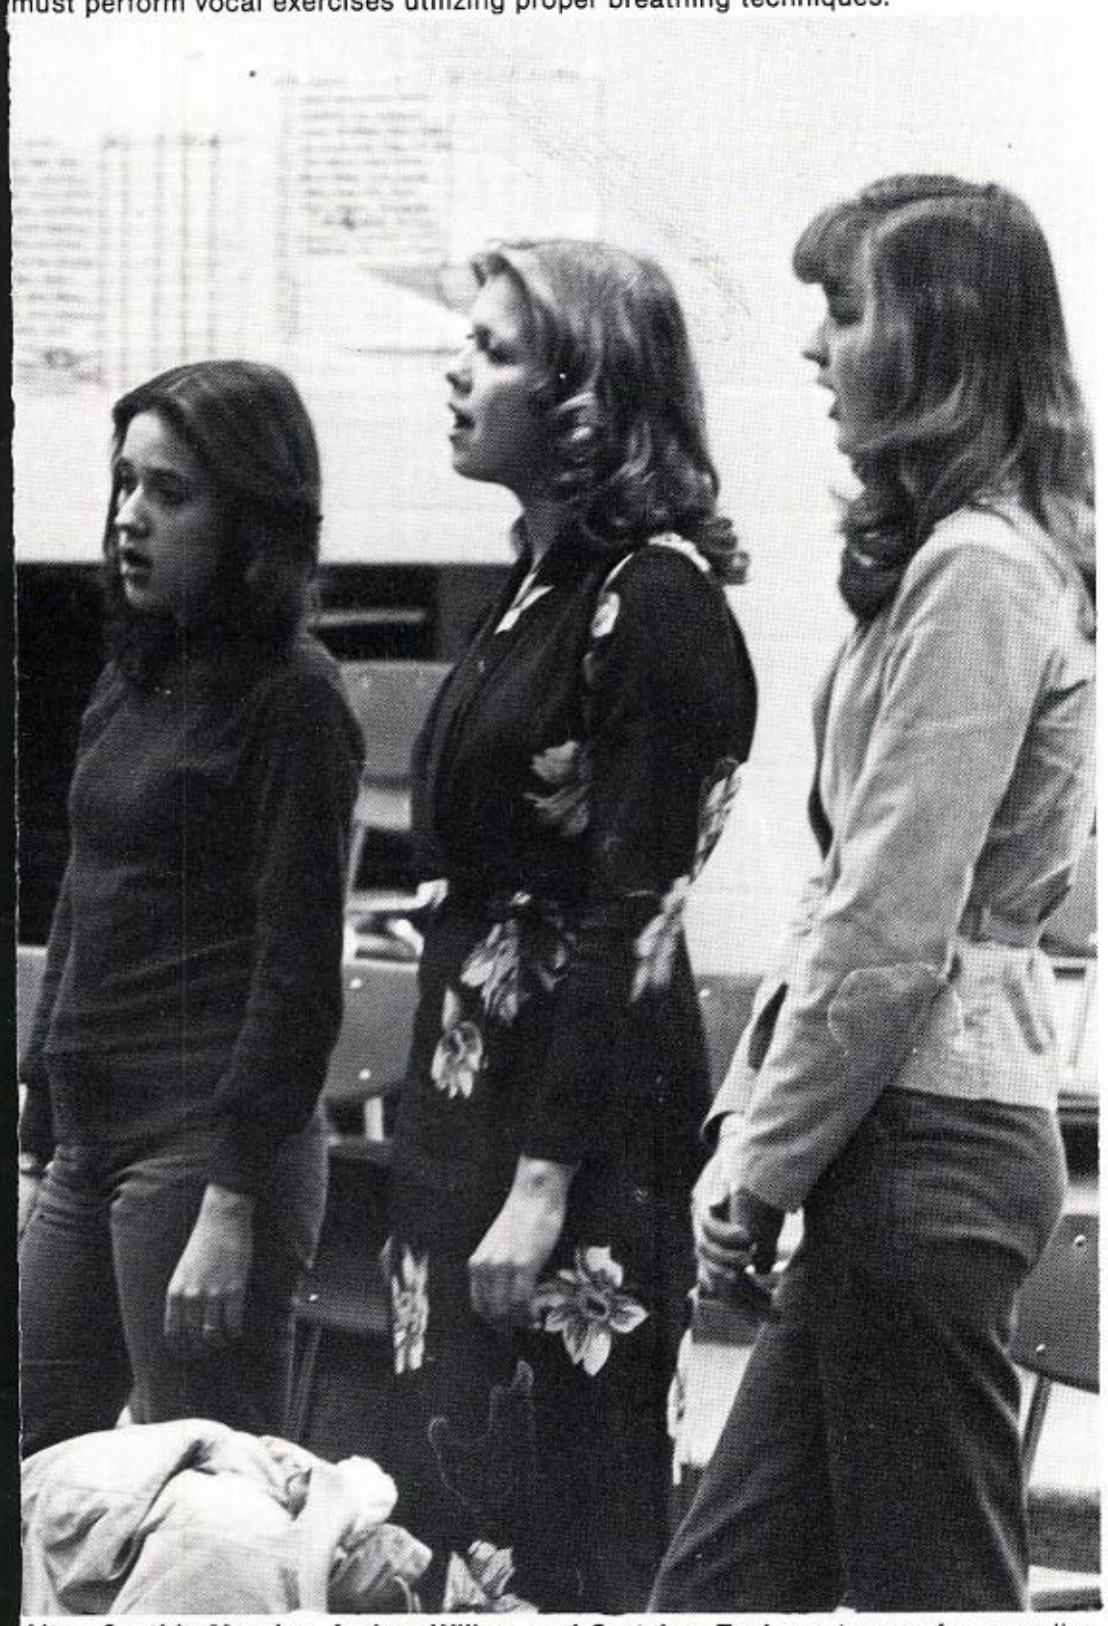
Singing a slightly updated version of 'Grand Ole Flag' are Lissa Lindenauer, Kelly Stamback, and John Petrillo.

INTERMEDIATE SWING: Director: Olga Morales. David Bova, Vinnie Caporuscio, Karen Champigny, Rob Churchman, Erin Corning, Tania Demchuck, Tim Foster, Leigh Anne Larance, Duke Lash, Lissa Lindenauer, John Petrillo, Jenny Schleyer, Sara Sowders, Kelly Stamback, Tanya Stowell, Rich Thompson, Kathy Vogelsang and accompanist TomiAna Trimm.

Pondering the stability of her makeshift stage, Tanya Stowell practices a new routine.

Performing at Orange Hunt Elementary School are Intermediate Swing Singers Robby Churchman, Dave Bova, and Leigh Ann Larance.

Before actually rehearsing, Colleen Sheriden, Carolyn Schock, and Roxanne Walker must perform vocal exercises utilizing proper breathing techniques.



Altos Cynthia Morales, Andrea Wilbur, and Gretchen Taylor, rehearse for a medley for the upcoming Christmas Show.

Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors who auditioned for Ms. Olga Morales' Women's Ensemble knew that if accepted they could could expect a year full of music, fun, and hard work. Almost every day was spent practicing the latest songs or rehearsing a dance choreographed by Ms. Olga Morales and some of the girls. Deciding on a costume wasn't easy. They seemed to be happy with the final choice; black jumpsuits and a scarf. December came too fast. Would they ever be ready for the Christmas show? When finally it arrived, they did well. Then came more practicing for the Spring show that wasn't seen until four months later. It also proved to be a great success. At the year's end they practiced less, but they still had plenty of music and fun.

WOMEN'S ENSEMBLE: Director: Olga Morales. P. Alber, A. Blasch, P. Brown, D. Burke, S. Cameron, J. Campbell, L. Cozino, C. Escobar, L. Feisee, K. Gillen, G. Graham, D. Hinson, K. LaRock, N. Director Olga Morales encourages the chorus to clearly project their voices.

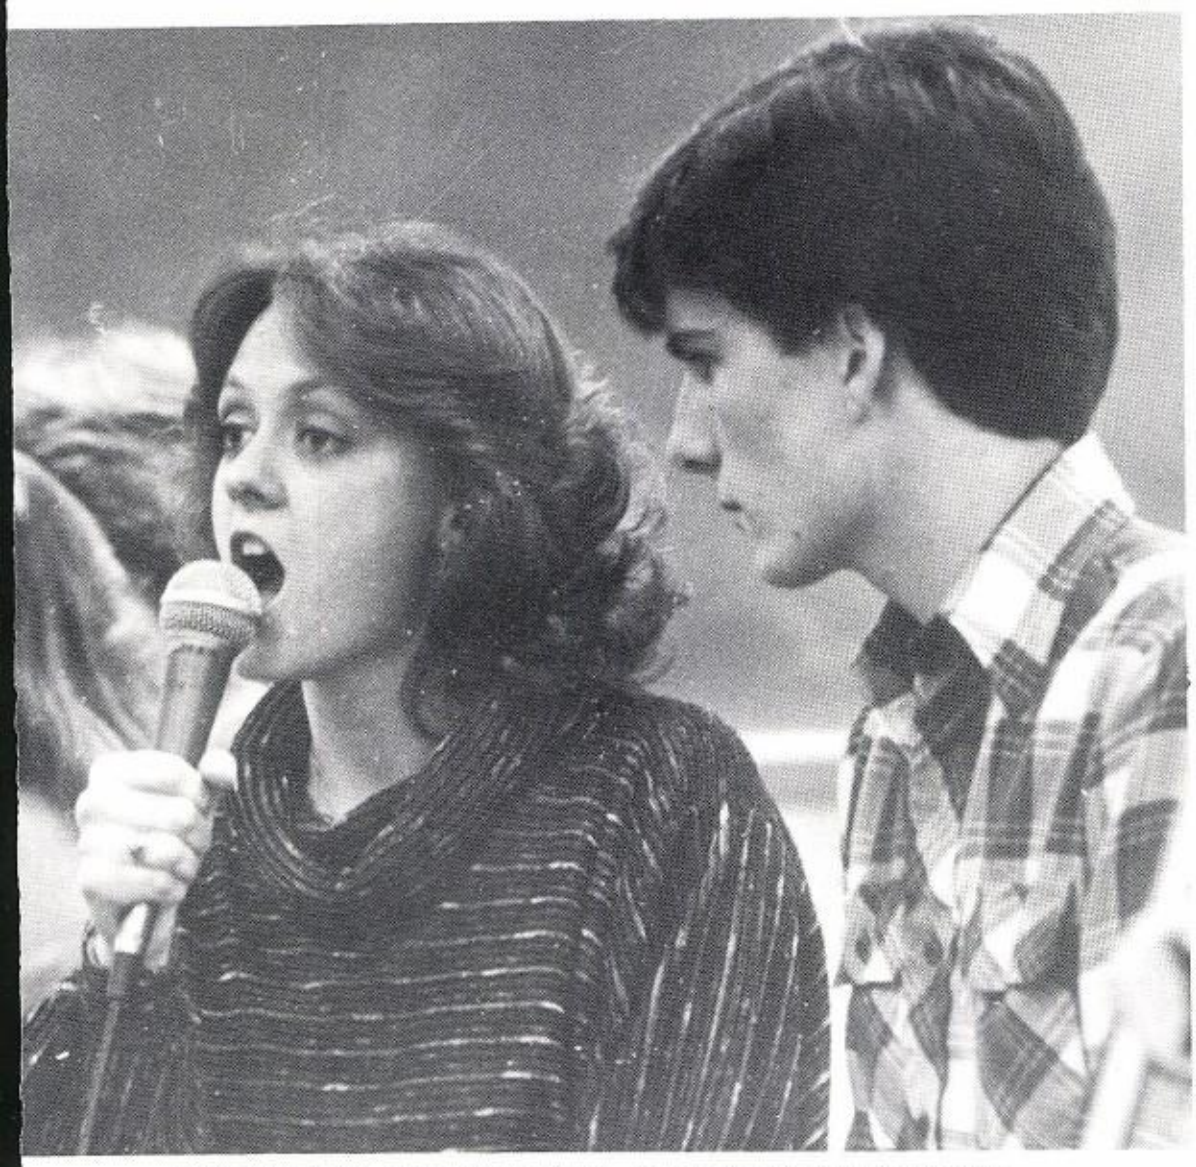
Accompanying the Swing Singers during their daily second period class, Johnna Sorg concentrates on the melody.

The Swing Singers rehearse for their show at the Connecticut Connection, an outdoor mall.

Karen Pieper adds her voice to the harmony of "Walking Blues".

During "Sing A Song Of Christmas", Sue Bova holds her note clear and strong.

Any Requests?



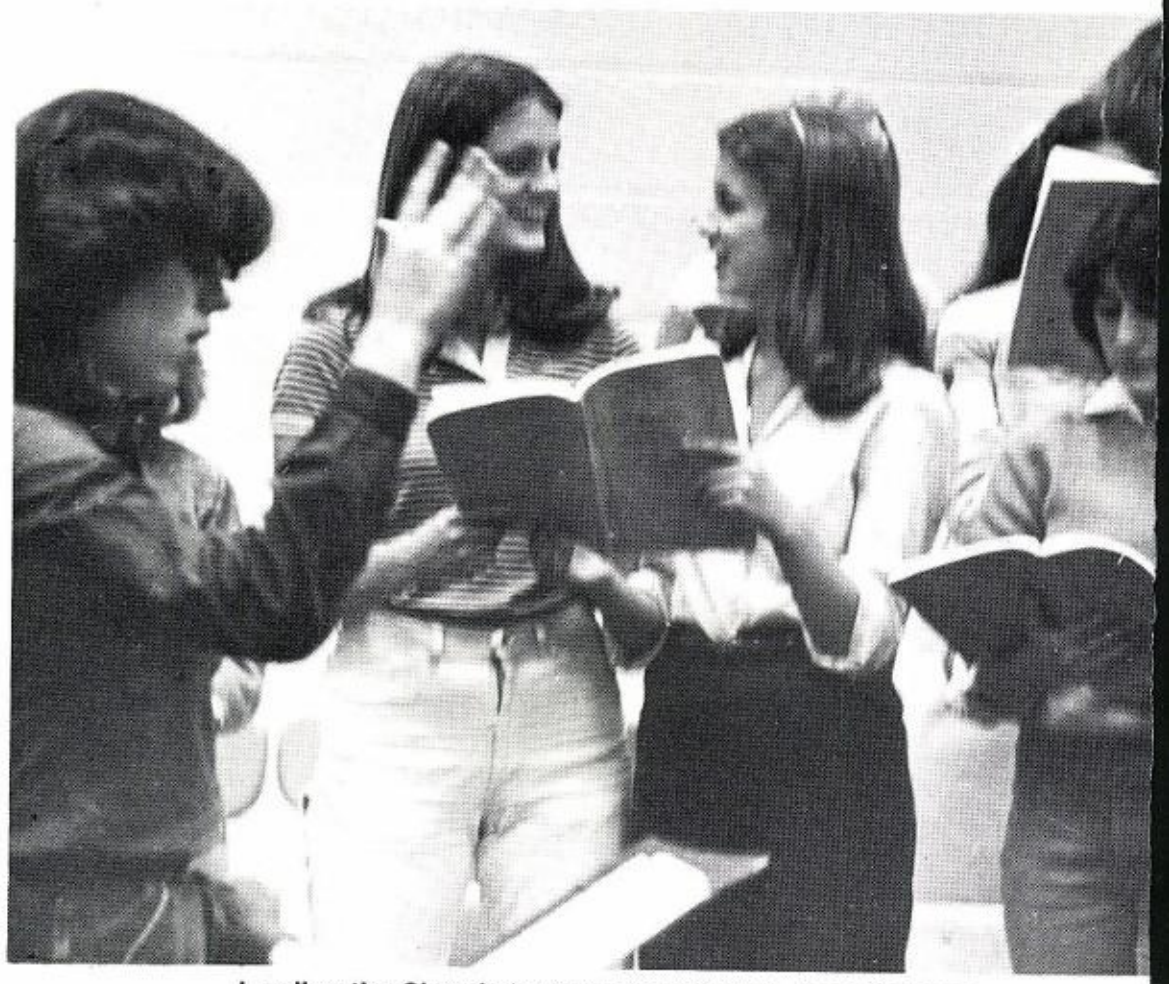
As Karen Payne solos, her partner, Jimmy Mudd, listens intently.

Perform by request only is a professional phrase indicating a long history of success and a reputation for excellence. This was the foundation upon which the Swing Singers, formed in 1976 by Mr. Bob Stamback, grew. A performance given by the Swing Singers was a complete show in every sense, including songs ranging from nostalgia to folk rock, as well as the spirited choreography taught by Ms. Olga Morales and Ms. Susan Slosky. Beginning their concert season with the Fall Festival, the Swing Singers also performed for a Falls Church women's club and for passersby on the Pentagon Mall Concourse. For many former Swing Singers, the experience they gained led them to the pursuit of entertainment careers, as well as further participation in college vocal groups. Our Swing Singers truly represented us well, bringing their talent and energy to every corner that was in need of a little music.

Concentrating on their music are Lisa Williams, Mark Weaver, Alyson Taylor, and David Rivers.

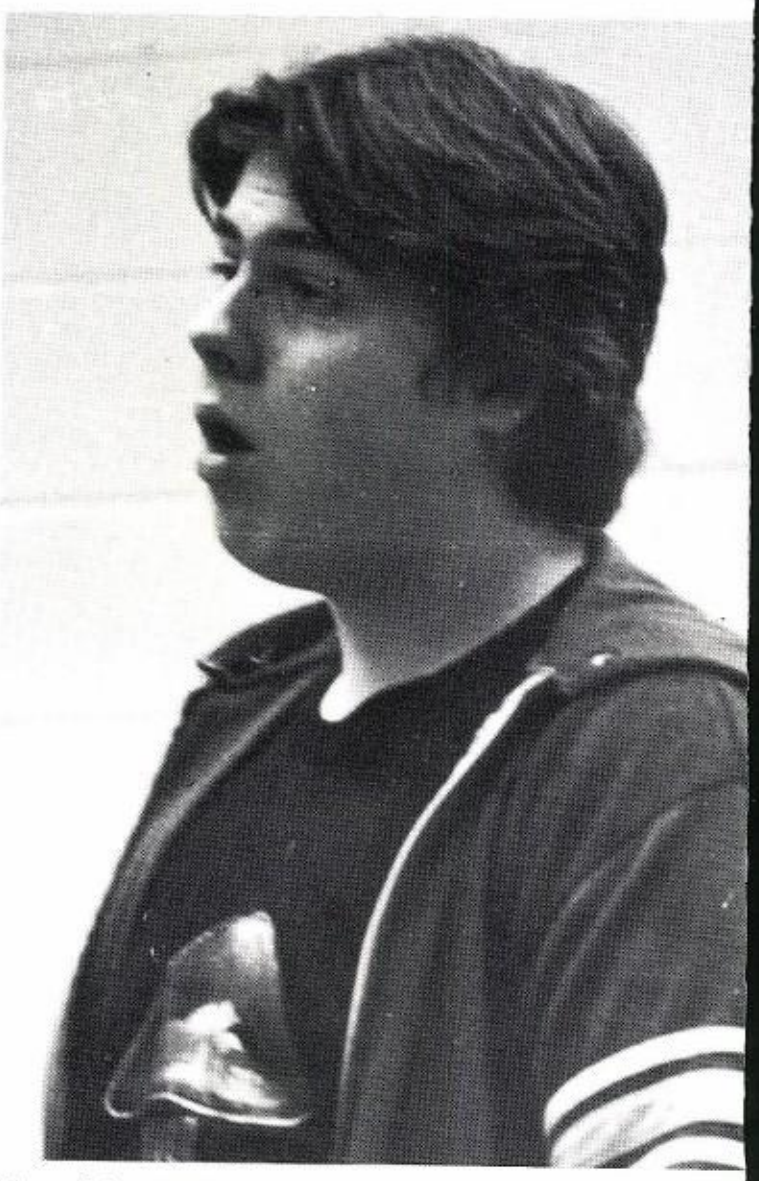
Traveling Team

Traveling great distances, the Symphonic Chorale performed for a wide variety of audiences. For their first show on December 4, the Chorale was accompanied by the Symphonic Orchestra in the musical The Messiah . After their performance in our own Little Theater, they then traveled in January to Harpers Ferry, West Virginia, for yet another unfamiliar audience. Members also tried out for All County and All Regional tournament. No matter where the Chorale traveled, they were always welcomed.



Leading the Chorale is student conductor Janet Dawson.

Taking a breath between verses are Eddie Conlon, Matt Klee, and David Morris.



Memorizing his lines, tenor Larry Reppert sings "Glory to God."

During fourth period, members of the Symphonic Chorale rehearse for their upcoming performance.

For many, it began as early as the fourth grade- those morning string classes which squeaked and twanged their way through endless introductory excercises. In those days, the class period was divided into two equal halves; time spent on tuning obstinate instruments and time spent on actually trying to produce listenable music. For the select few who were able to stick it out, high school brought with it the opportunity for advancement which true musicians so highly prized. For those students whose talent and ambition led them to the top, there was the Symphony Orchestra. Members of the Symphony Orchestra strived for perfection in all they attempted, from their December performance of Handel's Messiah, to their house-to-house delivery of Christmas caroles, complete with a costumed string quartet. Many members went even further, achieving places on the regional and all-state orchestras, a high honor. With every note they played, the joy of music was expressed, reaching out to the minds and hearts of all who listened.

Under the direction of Mr. John LeCava, the Select Band had a busy and exciting year. The sixty member intermediate group performed in three major shows and many competitions throughout the year. The first of these shows was the Winter Concert held on December 16 in the Little Theater. Songs played were "Do You Hear What I Hear?" and "A Merry Christmas Medley." March brought the Festival Concert which proved to be a success. Selections played included "Little Animal Suite," "Royal Celebration," and Royal Pageantry." Filling in the gap between the March show and the Spring Concert were numerous VBODA Festivals, where the band competed against other area bands. These competions required many hours of rehearsal at school and at home also. Finally the Spring Concert arrived, signaling the end of the year.Their last performance reflected a year of practice and meant a relief from a hectic schedule.

R&R

It was 2:30...and lingering amidst the rush to the lockers was that ultimate question. Homework or Rest and Recreation? For the majority of students the choice was easily made. After a seven hour day of academics, a rest at a planning meeting and discussion, or recreation from sales, fund raising, and pep rallies, would give a first-rate change of pace. Joining a club or organization, getting involved, having responsibilities and doing different activities brought a feeling of pride into accomplishments and a new school unity. A lot more people, with many exciting ideas would do their part in reaching goals set by each group. But no matter how rapid the stride, every club and organization was on the march, putting in that extra effort, with pride; and together, as one.

HEADQUARTERS

Tucked away in a corner of the cafeteria was a room filled with VIP's, where meetings of utmost importance were held and where battle plans were conjured from intelligent and creative minds. It was the headquarters of the SGA (Student Government Association). Commanded by five officers, the sixty members kept the student body involved in numerous social activities throughout the year. During the first week in September, they sponsored the Back-to-School week ending with the dance. Then beginning on October 13th, they presented the Homecoming events. On December 13th was ladies' choice for the Snowball, and after winter break came the Teacher Appreciation Week, Class Night, Bruin Spirit Week, and the Magazine Drive. In early spring were the Sadie Hawkins, Leadership Conferences, SGA elections, and finally an Award's Luncheon. By formulating tactical strategies the SGA provided enough ammunition to keep the student body full of spirit and in top working condition.

When someone originated a brilliant idea that would have a long range effect on the student body-where did that person go? Who did he turn to? What was the missing link between the student body and the SGA? The answer was found in a direct route to the general staff. A liason between the student body and the SGA was the General Assembly. Six representatives from each class and one representative from each club made up the members of the Assembly who reinforced all manuevers and strategies developed by the SGA. One goal set by the staff was to achieve a better constitution for the student government by revising and updating the present one. They also began working on plans to eliminate the drug abuse situation in the school. Every other Thursday meetings were held in the Recital Hall to discuss the student government and to hear any student opinions or ideas. With the help and knowledge the General Assembly provided, students were able to overcome obstacles, work together, and achieve a stronger and more efficient student body.

Finally being the top contenders in the school was what becoming a senior meant to the 720 members in the Class of 1981. Lead by a great team of officers, the class made their last year a big success. On September 18 they had their first class meeting, and from then on, they dominated all pep rallies with loud and spirited voices. October brought a senior sponsored Soc-hop on the fifth and at the end of the month came the crowning of the senior Homecoming queen. The major events all the seniors enjoyed were ordering announcements, caps and gowns, attending the Baccalaureate, and the Senior Prom at the Springfield Hilten. So time flew by as the excitement rose for their special day on June 10. The Class of '81 had made it, their time had come and it was their year as the top contenders. They were seniors.

Being on a task force meant getting prepared to take over a special assignment. For the Class of 1982 it was getting ready to step into the role of seniors the following year. With extra spirit and a super set of officers to lead them, the class started early to show everyone what they could do. They began by winning the Homecoming Float Competition for the second year in a row and proceeded to win the powder puff football game against the seniors. The fall months brought a thousand dollar profit from a soc-hop and all the excitement of ordering class rings.

Near the closing of the year came the Ring Breakfast and Spirit week which ended with music from Easy Living at the Junior Prom. As a task force, the Class of '82 made a strong, united front, working together to make their final two years their best.

MARCHING ON

Starting early in the summer with a tremendous turnout at Camp Varsity, the aroused spirit and school concern of the Class of '83 was evident. More members were present from the Sophomore Class than any other class, with the exception of the Senior Class. In an effort to promote more enthusiasm and a direct participation of the student body, the Sophomore Class Council, a group of student representatives, chosen by their English classes, met randomly throughout the year with their sponsor, Mrs. Joan Strokes. Participation in various activities such as the Powder Puff football game, the Third Annual "Missed America Pageant," in which guys daringly dressed as girls to compete for the honorable title, and Spirit Week, a week before Spring break, appropriately brought the students together as they displayed the pride and togetherness of their class.

Proudly representing the first rate Freshmen are officers Joce Pena, Scott Calvert, Sandy Timmeney, and Jennifer Rowzie.

Promoting class-wide participation, pride, and responsibility was the big effort of the Class of '84 under its sponsor, Mrs. Jackie Deckel. The class newsletter, a "Communications Wall" in SS III, and the new Student Council, which was made up of representatives from World Studies classes, were all initiated to promote the coming together of the freshman class. The planned activities in which the students partook were a float in Homecoming, "Good as Gold", a skit in the Fall Follies, entitled "Family Fued", and a "Mouse Race", in which bets were placed on a chosen mouse to win the race through a maze. The freshman class sponsored a soc-hop just before Christmas vacation and a dance to wrap up the excitement of their Spirit Week in March.

Taking time out from sixth period. Randy Roush and Chris McIntyre try their hand at flower making.

MOVING UP

Showing their unity and pride, the Classes of '85 and '86 joined together in their effort to promote spirit and concern for the student body. The Class of '85 held an inaugural ball for the Class of '86 at the end of a hectic week of campaigning for the class elections. The two classes often joined forces, but the competetiveness between the two resulted in a 14-14 tie in the Powder Puff game in which over fifty girls competed for positions in the game. Spirit week, held in the spring by each class, and participation in class-night in January proved to be a great success in arousing enthusiasm by two classes that let no one forget they were moving on up.

Determined to be more than just a name, the National Honor Society undertook a wide range of activities. Besides keeping up a 3.5 grade point average, members actively participated in a tutoring service--one of the club's biggest projects. Subjects such as math, English, science, and foreign languages were tutored to students in all grades at their own convenience after school in the SS VI AC area. Each member had ample opportunities to display the qualities which had led originally to their selection as members of the National Honor Society. Participation in the induction ceremony and a party proved that not all NHS activity involved intense study and serious pursuit of academic exellence.

SUPPORTING

Johnna Sorg, Laura Essman and Sara Trexler listen as president Cindi Paschal leads the meeting.

Keyettes, an international girl's service club sponsored by Ki-Wives, were forty members strong and offered service to school, community, and international projects. Founder's Week, September 29 through October 3, found the Keyettes celebrating twenty-five years of existence and holding the "Sexy Eyes" Contest for the Founder's Week Fund. Dedicated to school activities, Keyettes devoted their time to work at the concession stand during all home football and basketball games. Tasks taken for granted such as the stencilled room numbers in subschools 2, 4, and 6 and the returning of dimes in the cafeteria during the month of November were taken care of by the dependable Keyettes. December brought with it the construction and delivery of Santa-Grams as well as the Salvation Army canned food drive on Saturday, the thirteenth. Throughout the year, this club certainly proved to be dependable as well as enthusiastic in their service activities.

Koko Rahn and Lynn Miller, two of the newly accepted females, display enthusiasm at a Key Club meeting.

Club members often put forth their best effort to make each service project a success in the school and community. Parking cars for football games, ushering at basketball games, and covering assigned areas during the Salvation Army Food Drive in December were just a few of the responsibilities taken on by the Key Club. Closer toward the winter holidays, Key Club members looked forward to carolling through the school collecting donations to present to Children's Hospital. The month of December proved to be a busy one for members of the club as they hosted a Regional Rally for their division of the Key Club International. The Lieutenant Governor hosted the procession which included a guest speaker from Kiwanis, sponsor of the Key Club. Films were shown promoting the theme, "Dare To Influence." The theme was appropriate as the admittance of females into the club came about. It was the first year for the change and an all-new experience. Throughout the year, the club showed its dedication and carried out all responsibilities placed in the hands of its members.

With map in hand, Shelly McCollum looks for lost parents at Back-to-School Night.

A point in the right direction is worth a thousand words. At many school functions girls dressed in black skirts and white blouses and guys in coat and tie could be seen pointing all over the place. They were members of the Host and Hostess Club. They gave directions to lost visitors attending district and regional sporting meets, dinners served in the home ec department, back-to-school nights, the Homecoming reception for alumni, Baccalaureate, and Graduation. Members had to be poised, polite, responsible and familiar with the school. And of course, they had to have a good pointing finger.

P. J. Miles, Becki Robb and Lisa Plunkett believe in the idea that three heads are better than one when it comes to giving directions.

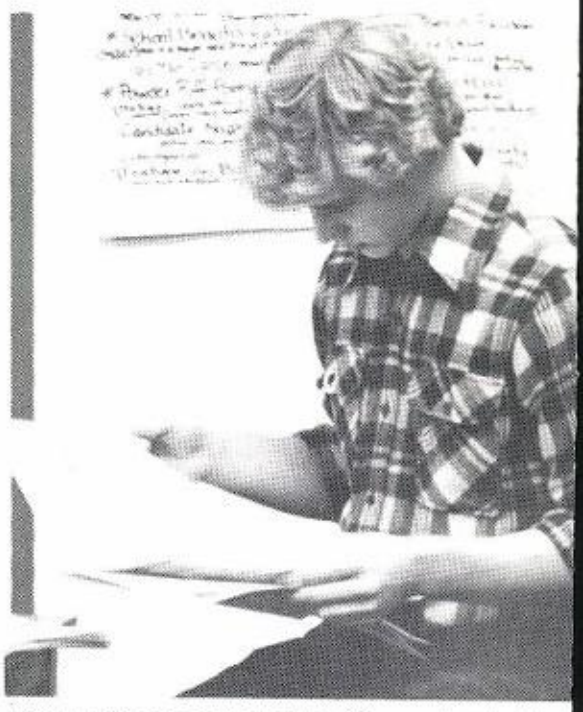
PROGRESS

The Bear Facts just keeps getting better and better! The journalism department, under the guidance of Dr. Pat McCarthy and co-editors Brian Sapp and Ed Vanderhoeven, continued the long upward trend for The Bear Facts. A TrendSetter typesetting computer, purchased jointly with The Lair office, greatly speeded production, enabling the paper to expand to ten pages. The longer paper, with its school and community news stories, features, editorials, cartoons and sports, was planned, written and printed every two weeks with time to spare. Of course, much patience and practice was necessary for all to become familiar with the TrendSetter and its floppy disk storage. Nevertheless, some semblance of past years remained, including the perpetual clutter and an occasional music sweep on 105.



With pride, co-editor Brian Sapp checks the sports and feature pages.

Suzanne Lilly and Debbie Talmadge discuss advertising posters.

Quotes were always supposed to liven copy. Well, The Lair office provided quite a few. There were decisions made. "I want sergeant's stripes!" There were questions asked. "Mrs. Dent, why did the computer beep at me?" There was copy written. "How can I write about the year before it happens?" There was copy printed. "Oops, I forgot to code my disk!" There was pleading. "Come on, all I have to do is mark a file." There were pictures taken. "Can you shoot a meeting this afternoon?" There was plain hard work. "Can I have a corner of the light table?" There was editing and co-editing. "Maybe Keith or Cheryl can come up with a headline." There was also fun. "That bear is making strange noises." "Whose birthday is it?" "Look at this picture!" In the end, the combination of co-editors, production and editorial staffs and the TrendSetter computer seemed to work. Oh, what memories!

FANCY

Pronounced kī-mĕr-ə and defined in Webster's as an impossible or foolish fancy, Chimera was a misnomer for the literary magazine. The enthusiasm of the new sponsor, Mr. Ron Axelrod, was carried over to the crowd at the opening meeting. The Chimera staff was responsible for creating a theme and cover design, desinging layouts, graphics and artwork, as well as selecting and editing the work submitted by students. The completed magazine was printed by the journalism department and mailed to every student in April. Chimera was hardly an impossible or foolish fancy.

FLORES

"Send your sweetheart a flower!" Where did that suggestion come from? The Easter flower sale, along with bake sales and raffles, provided financial support for the Spanish Honor Society. After society expenses such as induction costs and supplies, were met, the balance was given to needy Latin American and Spanish families in the area. Another service activity of the society was a new tutoring service for students who were falling behind in Spanish. What about having fun? Well, the various holiday get-togethers including a Christmas party provided some of that. Members also had an opportunity to really munch out at the traditional progressive dinner with the French Honor Society and Club and at the annual dinner at a Spanish restaurant. The Spanish Club got a new start with fresh faces and innovative ideas for Spanish fun. Membership in Los Ositos was based not on grades but on an interest in Spanish culture.

PARSLEY SOUFFLÉ?

Parlez-vous Francais? Well enough to earn an "A"? If so, you were probably a member of the French Honor Society. If you weren't, but still enjoyed the beautiful French language, the French Club was the place to be. Together these organizations met every two weeks in Mrs. Garcia's room to plan activities. A new idea, a tutoring service for students having a little trouble in French, was developed.

The social aspects included a delicious French dinner at a nearby restaurant and many get-togethers in conjunction with the Spanish Honor Society, specifically the traditional progressive dinner and a Halloween party. By the time the year was over, the group of 73 had the opportunity to have some fun, eat their fill, and learn a little French.

CROSS CULTURE MANEUVER

Numerous fun-filled activities were planned by the active German Honor Society and Club including a gummi bears sale at the Fall Festival, a trip to the Pennsylvania Dutch Country, and participation in the Foreign Language Festival. Topping off the excitement, the club participated in the Student Exchange Program by housing German Exchange Students during Germany's three week vacation in the spring. Discovering and experiencing normal everyday teenage life in America allowed the exchange students to attend classes, soccer practice, dances, and any other ordinary activities. At the same time, club members sampled a small part of German culture and language in the short time spent with newly-made friends.

EXPLORERS!

At a science club meeting, Martha Grossel and Alan Pollard take interest in science instruments and magazines.

Sparking interest and enthusiam in the Science Club was an arrangement of approximately six guest speakers scattered randomly throughout the year telling of their occupations in the field of Science. Field trips furthered the opportunity to observe first-hand what was demonstrated by guest speakers and the material covered in the classroom. Futhermore, entrance into the Science Fair and Virginia Junior Academy of Science offered a chance for the members to demonstrate their own ideas.

CENTURIONS CONVENTION

Enthusiastic and energetic best described the very active Latin Club. Boosting a strength of forty-three members, the club, open to eighth through twelfth grade Latin students, journeyed to the State Latin Convention November 14th and 15th to demonstrate their creativity and scholastic abilities. In the course of two action-packed days in Roanoke, students from all over the state of Virginia gathered to participate in a toga contest, a Roman banquet, and various trials designed to identify and acknowledge outstanding academic achievement in Latin. Latin contests, similar to "It's Academic," were entered throughout the year by club members. Club sponsor Bette Bartelmes was seeking to schedule one of several Latin contests at Lake Braddock. New money making ideas contributed by club members included designing and selling Latin tee-shirts. All in all, the Latin Club enjoyed one of its most active and beneficial years.

For most people a family hour concerned sitting around the dinner table, watching prime-time television, or just doing things as a family unit. But deep inside the Home Economics Department there were two organizations that went beyond the routine family hour rituals. F.H.A. (Future Homemakers of America) and the H.E.R.O. club (Home Economics Related Occupations) gave all their energy, sunshine, and care to the school and surrounding communities. In the winter, F.H.A. sold caramel apples; in the spring, daffodils and bunny grams; and they visited orphanages and senior citizens homes throughout the year. For F.H.A.'s theme, "The Year of the Family," they sponsored parent-daughter banquets to form a more close-knit family life. H.E.R.O. club students were able to help with nursery teaching at the Lab School, give holiday parties for the children, work at a Familyfest, go applepicking, and visit the elderly at Christmas time. F.H.A. and H.E.R.O. clubs had their hands full making sure that everyone from a young toddler to a senior citizen, were happy. The events and activities of F.H.A. and H.E.R.O. definitely gave family hour a new meaning.

Who was always there, ready to help out and make things look better or more special? It was the international service club called the Junior Civitans. Their activities ranged from helping pass out dimes during lunch shifts or providing refreshments at faculty meetings, to cleaning trophies in the display case and cleaning blackboards in the subschools. To top off Homecoming week, they let off 500 colorful helium balloons before the game against Oakton. Outside school in the surrounding communities they were also very busy helping out with fund raising for the Association for Retarded Citizens, the Kidney Foundation, Easter Seals, and working with the Special Olympics. In May, they spent a weekend at Ocean City, Maryland for the annual Junior Civitan convention. The Junior Civitans made the year special by always being there when needed and were always ready to help out.

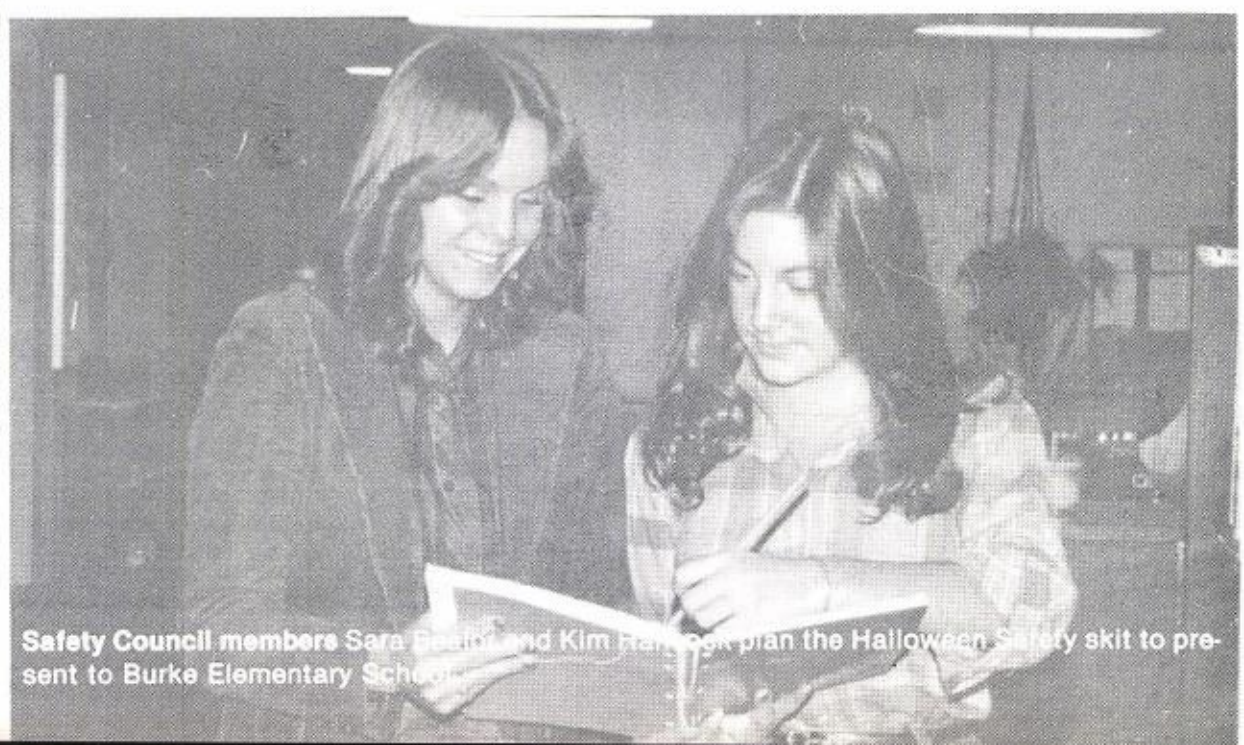
SAFE GUARDS



Safety Council members Sara Bealor and Kim Hancock plan the Halloween Safety skit to present to Burke Elementary School.

"Being safe in what you did," was the easily transmitted idea from the National Safety Council. The service club which was organized to promote safety in the school and community made that point in all their activities. In October they made special trips to local elementary schools to warn children about possible dangers on Halloween night. Throughout the year they sponsored bake sales, a Safety Week, and a Bloodmobile. To get the needed assitance in important projects such as the Bloodmobile, the Council attended County meetings once a month and state meetings in November. Whether it was safeguarding the school, traffic or community, the National Safety Council was on their guard to keep things running smoothly.

INITIALS

PMN, 1AC, SQ, DA, 2NR! These were familiar initials to old members of the Debate Club, but to the newcomers who attended Mrs. Vicki Drinnon's September debate workshop, these acronyms were part of a strange new language. The year's debate topic, consumer protection, was new to novices and experts alike. The year wasn't easy. The club sold cokes at soc hops to raise money. The search for new and better evidence was neverending. Boy, those ox boxes got to be heavy! All the effort did pay off. Team members Mike Liess and Jonathan Massey demonstrated their superior debating skill at invitational tournaments across the country. Their winning record made it the fourth year in a row that the Debate Club was number one in the Washington Catholic Forensics League which, of course, had its own initials, WCFL.

MUMBLE

The fourteen members of the Forensic Society may have been seen mumbling in school but, during competition, eloquence prevailed. Competition took place under nine categories which could be divided into three groups: those which involved original composition, such as Original Oratory, Extemporaneous Speaking, Original Works, and Impromptu Speaking; the drama catagories consisting of Dramatic Interpretation and Dramatic Duo; and those which involved the presentation of previously written works, including Prose Reading, Poetry Reading, and Declamation. As a member of the Northern Virginia Speech League, the Forensic Society was eligible to participate in ten tournaments held at area schools.

Less Intense than usual, Jon Massey resists the temptation to spread.

Who had the fastest hands in the school? Who could answer questions on almost any topic under the pressure of television lights and cameras? It was the Dynamic Trio which was the It's Academic Team. Most people knew the trio as Alan Episcopo, Al Schultz, and Maria Stamoulas. Maria had the distinction of being the first female in the team's history. Competition with area schools was aired on Channel 4's It's Academic, hosted by Mac McGarry. The trio and two alternates were chosen from the thirteen member It's Acamemic Club. The eight remaining members attended the Wednesday team practices throughout the year both to give the team some competition and to get ready for next year's tryouts.

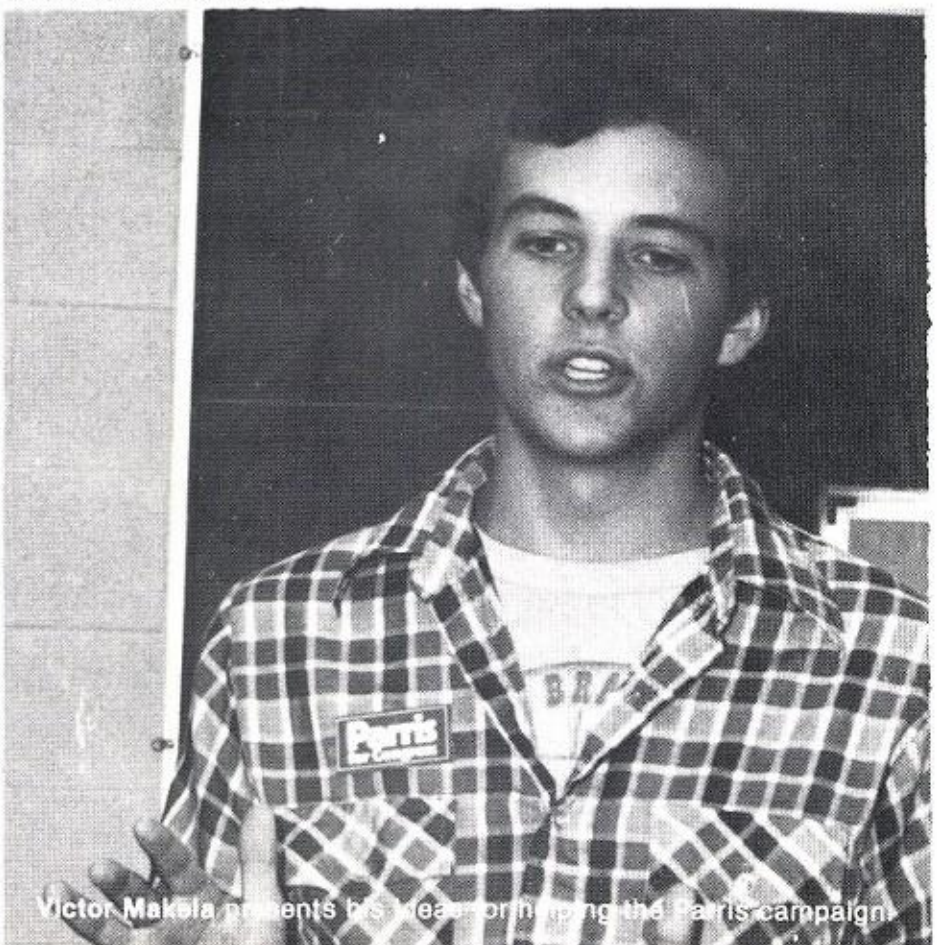
In its first year of existence the Republican Club was proof that one didn't have to be eighteen to get involved in politics. The club, composed mainly of minors, certainly had its share of involvement--volunteer work for the Parris and Reagan campaigns, lobbying efforts, special tours of Congress, and demonstrations in front of the White House. In addition, the club was responsible for bringing Republican speakers to school. A high point of the year was an invitation to Reagan's National Victory Party at the Washington Hilton on election night. Club members were there as election returns showed Reagan's landslide victory, an event some observers felt was a significant turning point in U.S. political history.



Victor Makela presents his ideas for helping the Parris campaign.

ON THE MOVE

One row after another rises to recite the induction pledge in the Little Theater during the F.B.L.A. banquet.

Working hard and accomplishing goals took time, effort, and unity. These characteristics were vital to the large career oriented group known as the Future Business Leaders of America. Everyone involved in this organization took business related courses, attended meetings during class time and used their ideas to promote civic and personal responsibilities. Leadership was one of the many important roles stressed to the one hundred and sixteen F.B.L.A. members who wanted to achieve the highest success in their work. Within the group, competition in business and vocational fields was brought together in state and national contests. Through these organized competitions they learned new levels of education, skill, competency, and responsibility. Never having an idle moment to spare while working toward the future, the F.B.L.A. easily showed everyone that they were on the move.

Using a printing calculator, Renee Lafond tabulates the annual SGA magazine drive's finances.

Knowing what career to begin after high school gave the members of V.I.C.A. (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America) and C.O.E. (Cooperative Office Education) the chance to get ahead by starting training early. To catch an overall beautiful affect, designing and hairstyling were applied during class time in the Cosmotology department. V.I.C.A. members with money raised from their Fall Festival make-up and hairstyling booth were able to visit international, state and local clothing and hair shows throughout the year. As an extension of classroom work, C.O.E. students were allowed to work in an office occupation, making job skill training possible while receiving credit for graduation. Working in a chosen job objective, getting paid a part-time salary and being responsible for the finances in the annual SGA magazine drive kept C.O.E. students on their toes. Whether in front of mirrors or behind typewriters and computers, these organizations knew what they were doing all of the time. Preparing for tomorrow by using their talents and skills had these students moving right on course.

LONG DISTANCE

Opponents were unseen and unheard. Competition took place in silence but eyes kept a close watch on the clock. When time expired and competition ended, members of the Math Team didn't know the results - they would have to wait until their papers were sent in to be compared with those from other schools. This "long distance" competition was substituted for the normal field trips to area meets in the name of energy conservation. Competition, which involved problems ranging from Algebra to pre-calculus, took place on the county level for Superintendant's Academic Awards as well as on the state level for titles in the Virginia Math League. The Math Team offered twenty-one students who enjoyed math the opportunity to sharpen their problem solving skills and to become involved in intense mathematical competition, even if it was "long distance."

The titles were a bit bizarre-"Analytic Geometry in Four and Five Dimensions," "Riemannian Geometry," "Probability and Genetics," "The Mathematics of Cryptography." The respective authors, Haw-minn Lu, Mike Thomas, Mike Hanko and Phil Crisswell, had carefully written the papers as part of the application process for Mu Alpha Theta. The other requirements were a 3.5 or better average in all college preparatory math courses and completion or current enrollment in Algebra II /Trig. The society's annual field trip to the National Bureau of Standards was held in November and included an opportunity to meet with four researchers in their laboratories. Mu Alpha Theta was a good way to provide recognition of achievement in the field of mathematics.

Patty Hooper picks up a few pointers on the art of flash photography from club president Dale Rye.

"Let's go into my darkroom and see what developes!" Photographers really got tired of people who tried to make photography jokes. After all, the Photography Club was certainly no joke. Members strove to increase the depth of their knowledge in the field by studying advanced techniques in camera operation, film processing, printing, and picture mounting. The club sponsored movies on the various styles of famous photographers and the owner of Photo Craft was invited to speak. The club's field trip to Lake Braddock gave everybody an opportunity to stop and shoot nature scenes. A photo show gave the club's talent exposure in the school while a school-wide photo contest helped raise funds. Members concentrated on the artistic aspect of photography once the mechanical operation of taking a picture had become a single reflex.

MANEUVERS

Flexibility, poise, agility, coordination, stamina, balance, hard work and hours of practice enabled the sixteen girls on the Intermediate Gymnastics team to accomplish many different and intricate manuevers. Each gymnastic event; the uneven bars, balance beam, floor exercise, or vault, gave team members plenty of room for individual creativity. Taking advantage of time during intramurals after school, the team practiced every Thursday and attended special workshops throughout the year. Routines were performed at Varsity basketball halftime shows, seventh grade orientation, Parents Night Show, and the Intermediate Night. Goals were set and achieved in improving all around gymnastic ability, good sportsmanship, team togetherness and especially team work. With a physical effort and a lot of spirit the Intermediate Gymnastic team truly displayed their talents in each and every manuever they made.

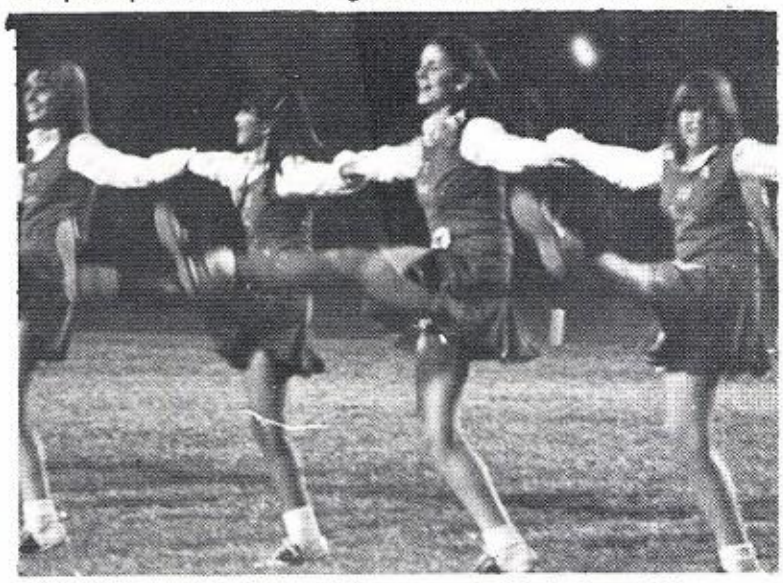
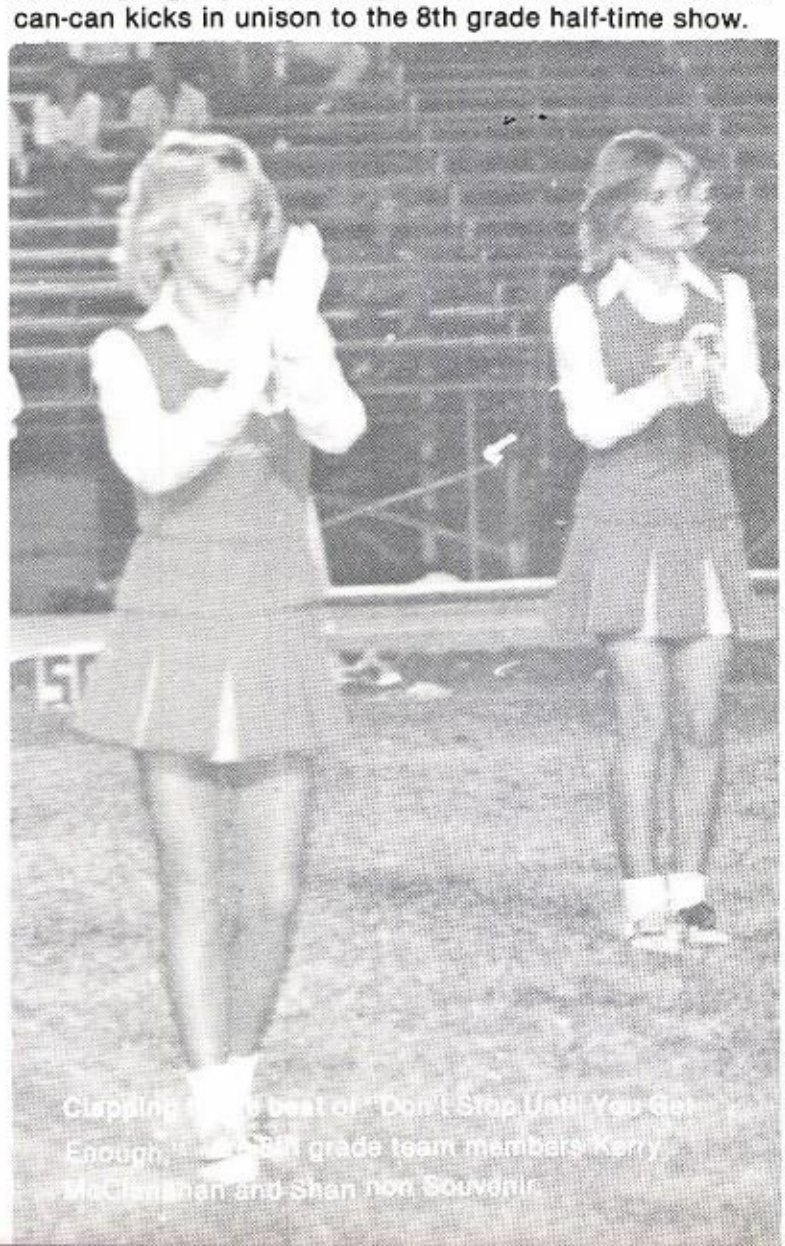
TACTICAL PRECISION

During a basketball halftime show Stacey Gupp swooshes her pom poms to the 7th grade team routine to "Dallas."



Anne Myong, April Bucklinger, and Christine Julliano do can-can kicks in unison to the 8th grade half-time show.



Clapping to the beat of "Don't Stop Until You Get Enough," 8th grade team members Kerry McClanahan and Shannon Souvenir.

A shrill whistle blew and the sound of marching feet began. Dressed in matching purple, gold and white uniforms, they marched in unison to the center of the football field. The whistle blew twice more; they turned and hit a stance facing the home crowd with smiles on their faces. Over the loud speaker, music blared as a routine of tactical precision began. No, it wasn't the U.S. military forces but the thirty members of the Eighth Grade Drill team. With a position usually held by a teacher, Junior Stacey Staats sponsored and taught the Eighth Grade Drill team routines to "Don't Stop Until You Get Enough," "Pop Music," "Give Me Some Lovin," and the theme from "The Force." They performed these specially choreographed routines at all the home J.V. football and basketball games. The thirty-two members of the Seventh Grade Drill team practiced on Mondays in the Gym Hall on routines choreographed by Juniors Cindy Ackerman, Julie Gillespie and Karen Zaterka, to the music of "American Bandstand," the theme from "Dallas" and "Burn That Disco Floor." All of the routines were performed at home freshmen football and basketball games. Both the Seventh and Eighth Grade Drill teams showed their talents in performing with spirit, tactical precision, and of course, a smile.

STRATEGY

There was more to after school activities for members of the Games Simulations Club than just a routine club meeting every week. Mondays' meetings meant mind-stretching competition where each player derived his own strategy and tactics before testing them out against an opponent in the form of a war game. On into the month of December, tournaments began on Monday afternoons and were often continued on Saturday mornings. Who knows...perhaps the strategic genius of the future now stalks the halls of Lake Braddock.

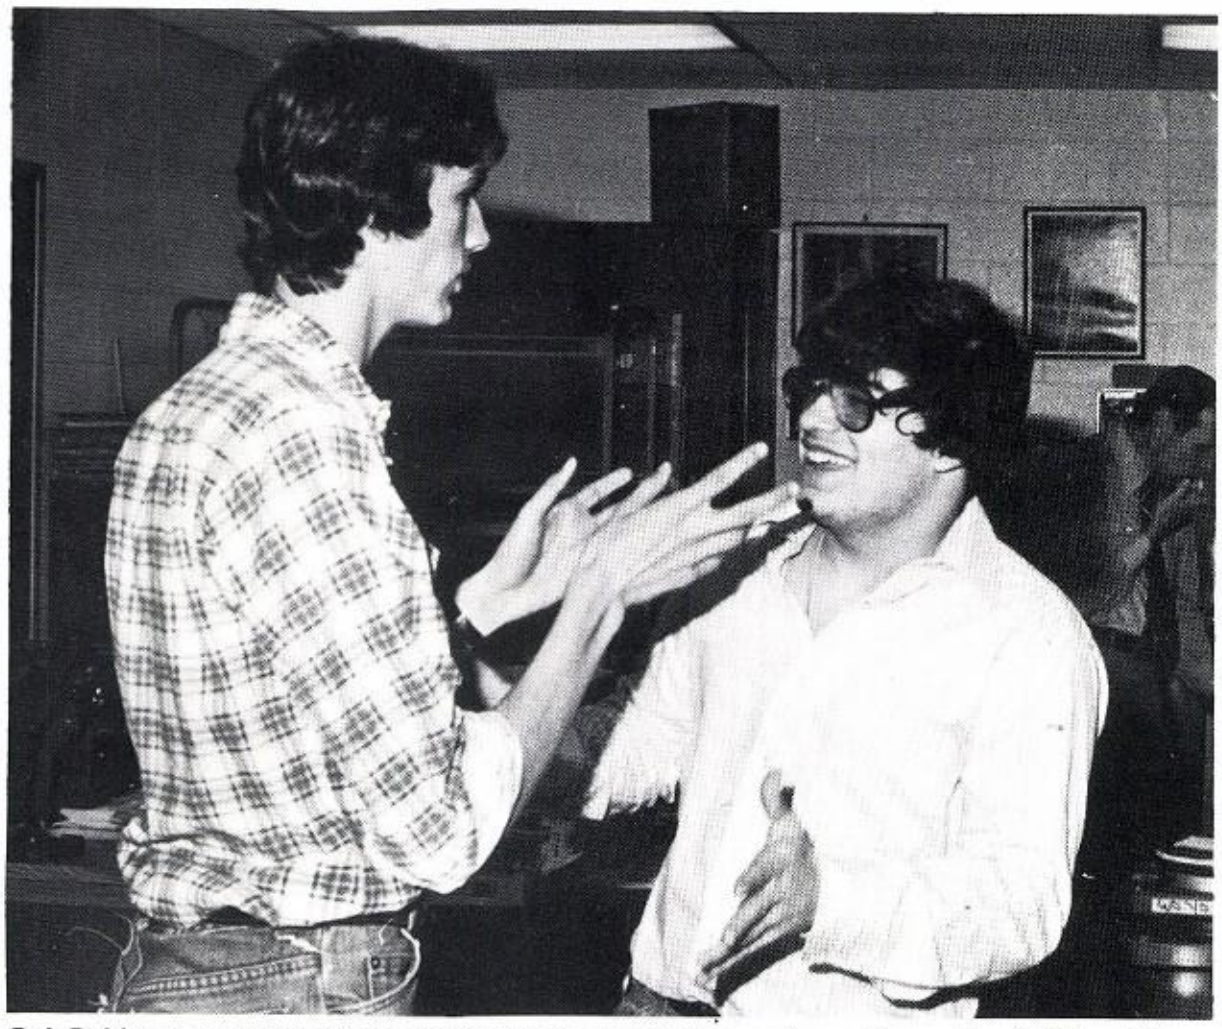
COSMIC CRUSADERS



Bob Robinson and Marc Beebe participate in an arid discussion on the works of Michael Mourcock.

Students interested in unusual aspects of science fiction were encouraged to join the Science Fiction Club. In-school activities included a book exchange and the annual Short Story Contest held in the spring. Furthering their interest, members attended Science Fiction and Fantasy Conventions in the area and traveled to local places of interest throughout the year.

Angela Sylvas contributes her ideas on the showcase for Black History Month.

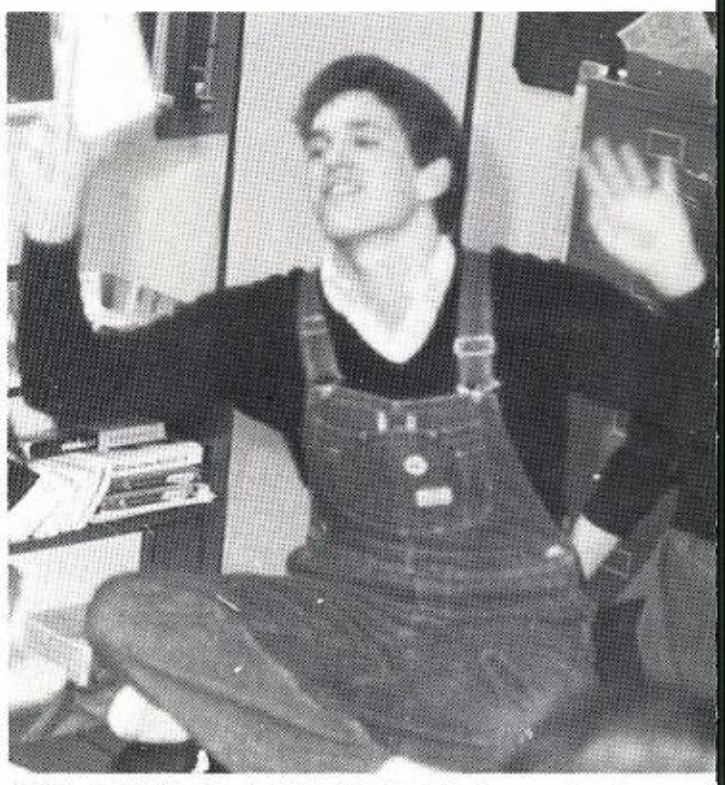
Encouraging students to become more aware of Black American Culture, the Afro American Culture Club involved itself in various activities each month. The club, open to students of all grades, participated in a Soul Food Banquet in June, a Career Month in April, in which professional people were spotted in various careers. A trip to the Museum of African Arts in December enabled members to view the multiple contributions of Africans in world society. February brought an opportunity to demonstrate black ingenuity as members arranged the showcase during Black History Month. One of the most interesting events during the year for the club was when they sponsored a policeman specially trained in seeking out illegal drugs and drug traffic. Experiencing an increasing awareness of the American Black Culture kept the club active throughout the year.

PRIDE

A NEW VOICE

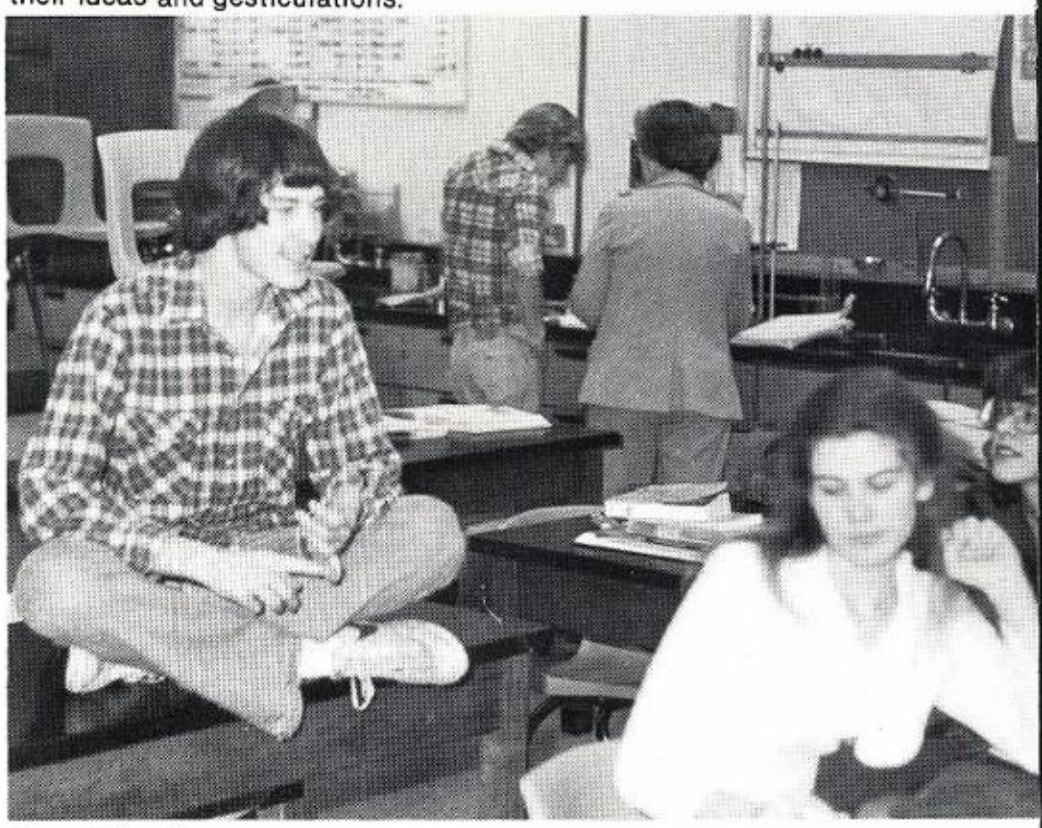
"Want to sign this petition?" "What's it for? An Honors Government class? Sure, let's give the rising Seniors a choice next year." Establishing an Honors Government course was the first objective of SCREAM, the brainchild of Mike Thomas, Peggy Wright, and sponsor, Mrs. Helen Price. The acronym SCREAM stood for the Society for the Creative Reform of Educational and Academic Matters. The Honors Government petition was a success. The administration attended an "issues and answers" session where they were presented with the outline of the course as well as the 250 signature petition and they later agreed to consider the course for the following year. Another SCREAM project was lobbying to get money set aside to pay for rented films since teachers were no longer able to charge students. The ultimate goal of SCREAM was to establish honors courses in all academic disciplines and to establish some form of recognition for achievement in those courses.

SCREAM Sponsors: Dr. Bill Johnson and Mrs. Helen "Mom$_2$" Price; Pres.: Michael Thomas and Peggy Wright; Vice Pres.: Lynnie Euler; Sec.: Teresa Stefanelli; Members: Mr. John Alwood, Mr. Ron Axelrod, Mark Beebe, Bill Beha, Karen Donnelly, Jeff Eisenhard, Susan Hamel, Becky Jones, Ronnie Maas, Brian Morgan, Kevin Mosley, Kristin Newman, Audrey Short, Lisa Simonetta, Virginia Slaughter, Mr. Bill Wolff, Annmarie Wooten. Because of SCREAM's open membership, this is a partial listing.



With agenda in hand, Kevin Mosley calls the meeting to order.

Pres. Peggy Wright gives Teresa Stefanelli and Lynn Euler time to present their ideas and gesticulations.



Pres. Mike Thomas, Annmarie Wooten, and Audrey Short talk over future SCREAM projects as Mrs. Price helps Ken Blackstone with a chemistry lab.

HOMEWORK COMES LAST

"Do you consider apathy to be your greatest attribute?" "Yes?" "Great! You're in." "Want to be a Cabinent member?" "No, I'm sorry. We already have a Director of Paraphernalia, Phil Sessoms. You'll have to come up with another title." Such lax entrance requirements and radical cabinent positions could only come from one organization, the Former Good Students' Society. A new club, the FGSS advocated school day excursions to Burke Lake, staying out late on school nights, and partying all weekend. The FGSS was conceived by a group of seniors who had finally given up the fight against senior slump and had decided to band together and make the most of their fall into apathy. Cabinet officers were self-appointed. A total of 49 persons claimed to be members of the FGSS, however the club's ideals were supported by many more as the falling grade point averages of the class of '81 showed.

Twenty-four of the forty-nine former good students pose at the first organized meeting of the FGSS held for the sole purpose of taking pictures.

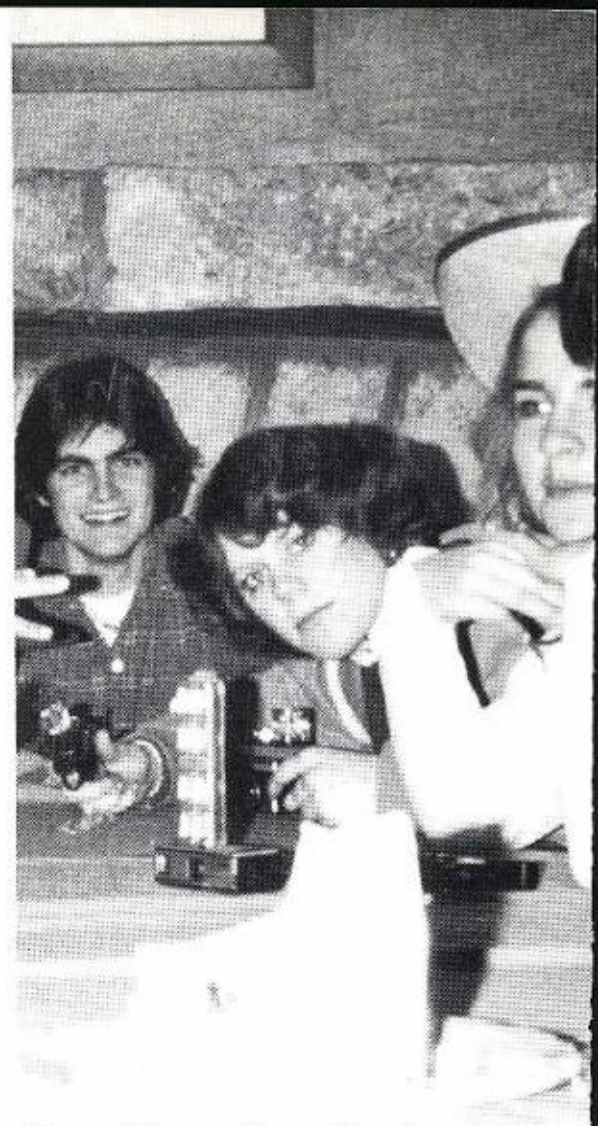
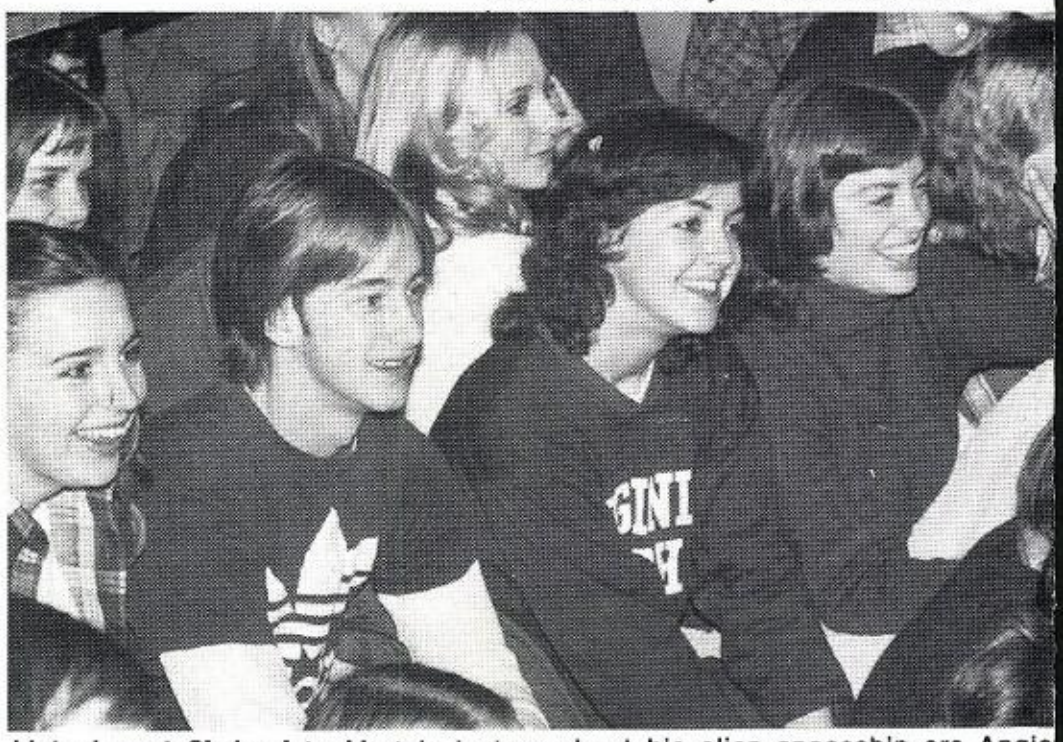
GOOD HIT

Skyland Wranglers and Wranglerettes listen to Marty inform them of the evening's activities.



Shawn Johnson, Nancy Rowzie and Sharon West make sure their cameras have film and flashes ready for the next events.

Some came just to sing and get kicked out of Mac's, others to laugh and socialize, even more to learn more about God and themselves. All agreed with Mike Cullerton and Steve Weedman that Younglife was a real "good hit." Wednesday nights were a time for refrains of "Wade in the Water" and skits like the letter to Santa. During the Thanksgiving holidays a group of eighty enjoyed a chilly weekend at Skyland. For those who wished to learn more about how scripture can give answers to problems in their lives, Campaigners was held on Monday nights at the Rowzie's. If a personal problem couldn't be worked out there, Kiki Galvin and Cindy McKay were always ready to talk privately. Younglife provided both entertainment and guidance to a very large group of ninth through twelfth graders.



Listening at Skyland to Marty's lecture about his alien spaceship are Angie Bonts, Eddie Conlon and Dana Dunning.

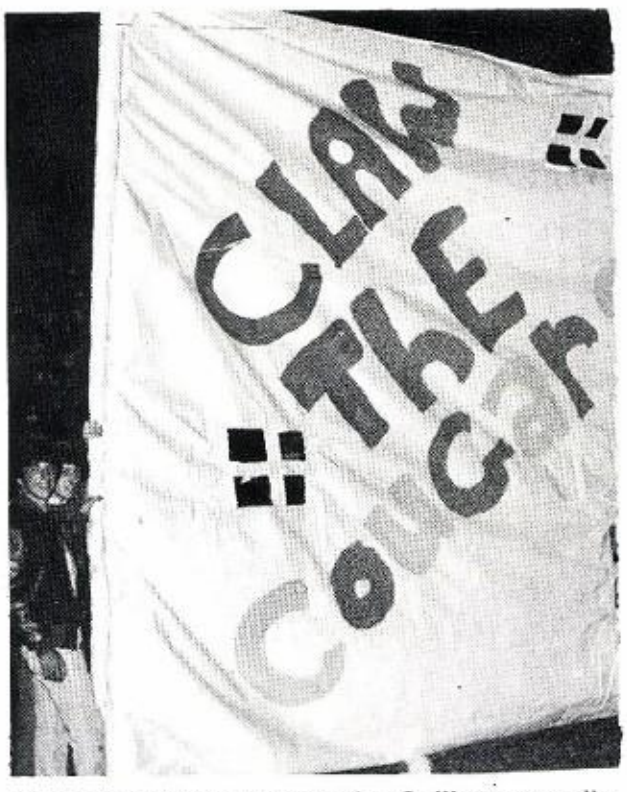
"BE A PEPPER"

Enthusiastic and spirited "Peppers" make themselves heard at the Varsity football game against Edison.



Sean McCaffrey and Brendan Sullivan proudly help hold up their artistic work before the game against Oakton.

Showing total togetherness, top official "Peppers" pose for their family portrait.

A noticeable change had been made at sporting events. There was yelling, screaming, and people cheering and chanting with the cheerleaders. They had their own section marked off at the games and they certainly made themselves heard! There was spirit and the new Pep Club. Over 200 students joined the club to cheer for one sport or another. The group was lead by seven enthusiastic junior and senior officers, two fuzzy mascots and a devoted sponsor. The bears romped around between the cheerleaders and held up signs with chants on them to keep everyone involved. The wild and spirited group were not "Being Peppers" because of the soft drink; but to them, to "Be A Pepper" meant having fun and lots of spirit.

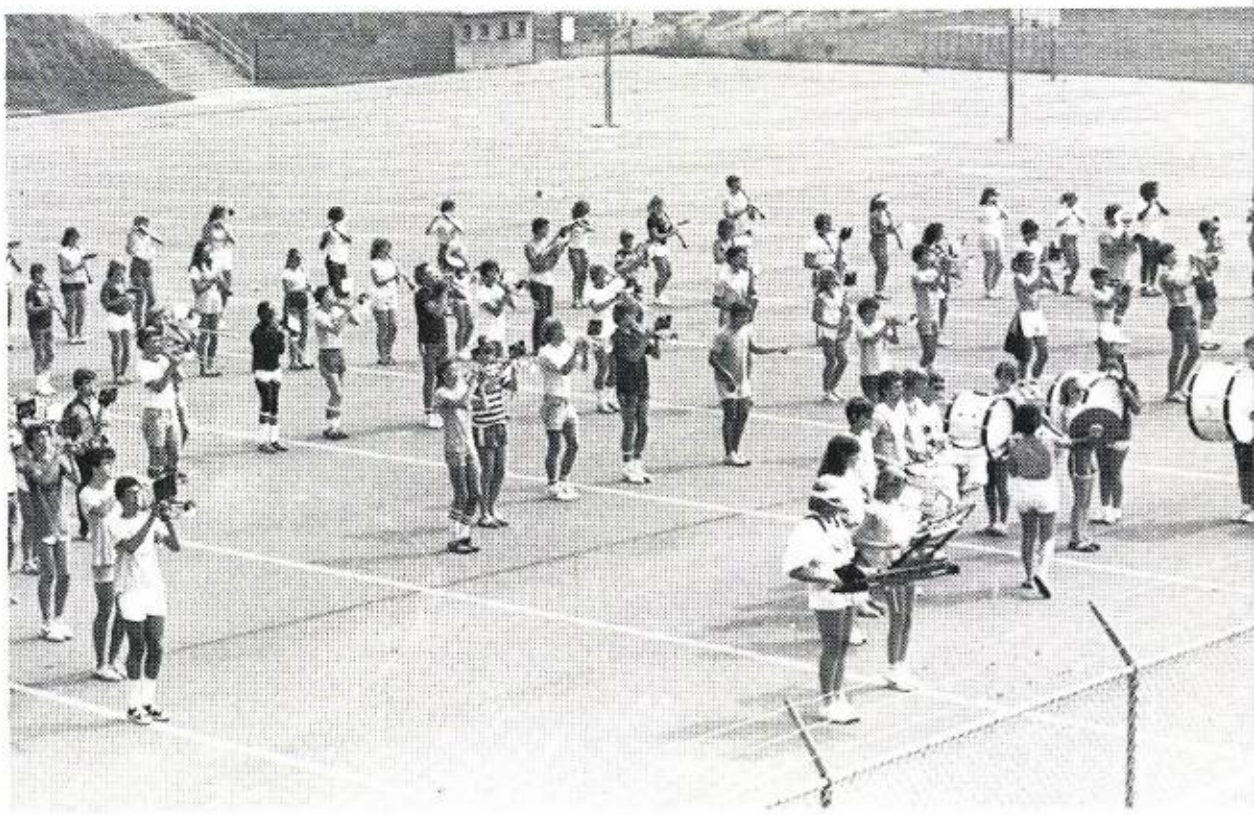
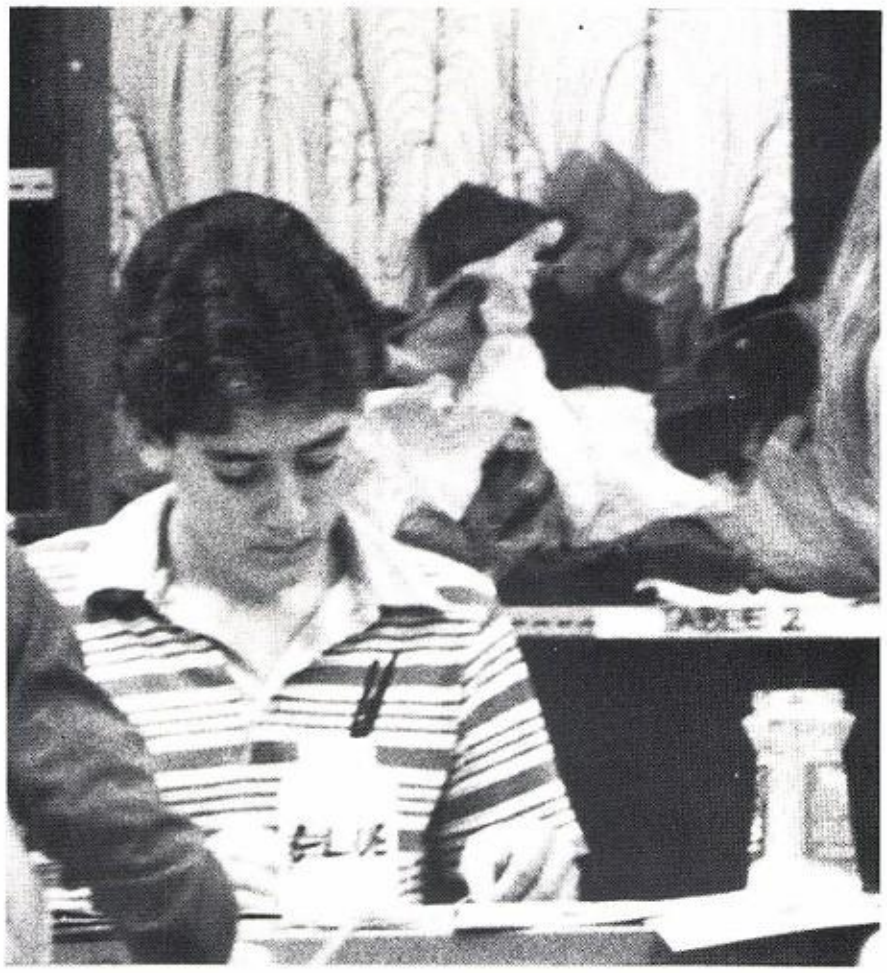
One For All

Prehistoric Bruin Andy Tubbs traces the origins of Bruin pride at the Fall Follies.



Working diligently after school, the Marching Band prepares for their first band competition.

Touchdown! Sandi [illegible] shows her Bruin pride [illegible] against West Spring[illegible]



Working on his upcoming art project is eighth grader Brett Hagen.

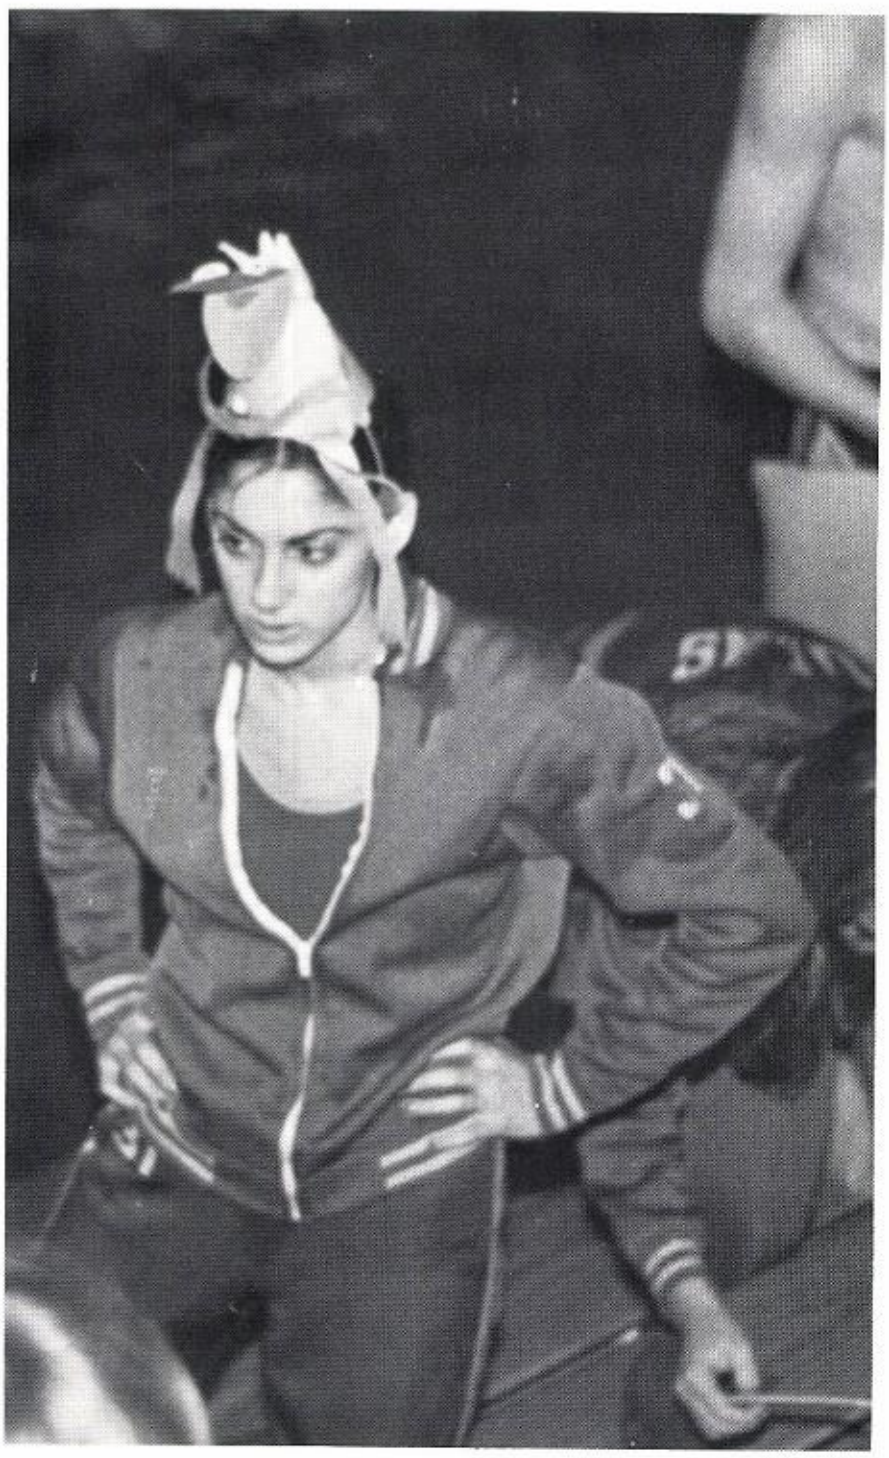
Not only did we achieve a sense of unity as a school, but we also made many accomplishments as individuals. The Debate team of Jon Massey and Mike Liess earned national rank and was responsible for over half of the school trophies in our showcases. Also representing Lake Braddock was our winning It's Academic team as it advanced to the octo-finals. Speaking out was effective for the newly-formed club SCREAM as well. They were responsible for many of the changes in the school policies and course selections. SAC representatives strove to reverse Superintendent Linton Deck's decision to reinforce the policy concerning student funding of movies and field trips. Athletically we were challenged by the addition of Oakton and Woodson to our district; however, the Bruins continued to excel and achieve as individuals and as teams. The music department proved to earn high standings as well. Travelling around the eastern states, they won numerous festivals and earned individual positions at the regional and state levels. The accomplishments of a few select individuals contributed to the diversity of the student body, making us proud to be Bruins.



Showing her individuality, Elisa Levitz gets some advice from her aquatic friend, Kermit the Frog.

Members of the Pep Club, Brian Champigny and Pat Broos cheer on the "Bruin Growlers"

Striving for a sense of oneness, students and faculty alike worked together to form a more unified student body. New traditions were established and spirit filled the halls from subschools one to six. The new Pep Club offered a chance for students to give their full support to our athletic teams by being part of an uproarious cheering section. To create a better means of communications, the SGA delivered announcements personally to each fourth period class twice a week. On March 19, classes were taken over by Seniors in the new Teacher Take Over Day. Not only was the school buzzing with excitement, but as a nation the year was full of major events. The killings of former Beatle John Lennon, and prominent heart surgeon Michael Halberstam caused much alarm, great grief, and a public demand for stricter gun control. November brought the election of our 40th President, Republican Ronald Reagan. In the congressional races the Republicans became the majority party in the House of Representatives.The new decade also brought the end of a fourteen month crisis. Following the ups and downs of the story caused much anxiety as we anticipated the release of our fifty-three fellow Americans held hostage in Iran. After the long negotiations by the outgoing Carter administration, the hostages were released from Iran on January 20th. Patriotism was at its high as the United States celebrated their return. Symbolic yellow ribbons could be seen on trees and car antennaes, and American flags were waved as the former hostages were greeted with parades and motorcades. Nationalism brought the American people a sense of unity that would be remembered for years to come.

The Grand Finale!

Time marched along as the year passed by with flying colors, much like a military parade. The pomp and pageantry of a spirited infantry division kept in step by over two hundred VIP'S remained at a feverish pitch as we were proud to be together, to be Bruins! This pride manifested itself in early February with the institution of Bruin Spirit Week. An echo of 4058 Bruins marching side by side with tactical precision was heard as we progressed through winter and into spring. Those who marched to the beat of a different drummer were not chastised or forced to face the music, but rather accepted for their individuality.

Spring brought with it draft registration for 18 year old male Seniors and course registration for the following year for underclassmen. An increased practice of going AWOL resulted from the incurable diseases of Senior Slump and Spring Fever which reached epidemic proportions with the advancing days. Rising temperatures and extended periods of daylight served as symptoms for the passing year plagued with brevity.

But before the parade passed by and the blare of the bugle faded into the melancholy tune of Taps , there were memories to be made, knowledge to be gained, relationships to be formed and experiences to be encountered. Seniors would always remember the unforgettable Honorable Discharge-Graduation. Juniors would not forget the Active Duty of preparing for their last year of high school. Sophomores would remember planning strategies in their SS IV headquarters, while Freshmen realized the new opportunities and responsibilities of being in high school. Eighth graders found time for a little R&R as they had adjusted to Lake Braddock, and seventh graders made their presence known in the Roll Call of 4058. Though the droning of the buzzer, the mechanical elegy of the passing year, was short-lived, dying in but five seconds, the memories of the friendships and experiences of 1981 would live forever!

The Lair, 1981 edition, had a cover of 160 point binders board covered with brown Fabrikoid material with Cordova grain and silkscreened in ivory. The book was printed on Taylor 80# enamel made by the West Virginia Paper Company. Colored pictures were separated by computerized laser scanner and printed on Miller four-color presses. Typography and pagination of Helios body type in 6, 8, 10, and 12 point type was done by staff members on the Compugraphic MDT (Mrs. Dent's Toy) 350 computer. All headlines and graphics were set by the staff. Contributing photographers were Mike Cottle, Ken Frager, Walter Galindo, Becky Heavner, Karen Levin, Ann Longmore, Bill Mason, Mark Maxwell, Cheryl Oslund, Stewart Pattison, Dale Rye, Don Seemuller, Phil Sessoms, Andy Tisler, and Eric Wallgren. Junior Chuck Poreda provided a workable rendition of an artist's sketch for the cover design. Other contributing artists were Doug Lantry, Becky Heavner, and Fran Wright.

The staff would like to recognize Segall-Majestic for their help with class pictures, sport shots, and color pictures. We appreciate the PTO's Publications committee's help with underclass pictures and yearbook sales. We would like to welcome Tom Scarry as Lake Braddock's Taylor representative and thank him for his assistance. The staff would especially like to bid a fond farewell to Mrs. Barbara Dent as she leaves the world of late night deadlines and enters the world of late night feedings.

Lori, (hey, that's you!)

You're one hell of a chickie babe!! I'll always remember this year because of you! I wouldn't have been able to survive Mr. Friend all alone. Always remember all the crazy things we did this year and all the things we've been through. You were always there when I needed a friend and I really appreciate it !!!! Call me this summer because if I stay away from you too long I'll return to sanity, no, but really, if you don't call, I'll shave my head and become a monk, or is it nun? If you find someone over the summer remember, I'm still singing "I need somebody to love!!" Oh yea, I can't let you leave lake Braddock w/out one of my famous, funny Debbie jokes, so here goes: Once there was this girl whose name was Lori and she went to Lake Braddock. She also had some friends named Debby, Wendy, & Debbie!!! Get it, she had some friends... ha, ha, ar, ar !!! No, really I don't deserve you!! He he! Welp! Gotta budge !!!! Luv Debbie p.s. can I be the first one to see your "J" !!!! (oh, I'm such a card!)

Remember these?

Lori,

Hi!! Brag of a year huh? I mean us both passing English even though you're always late when you elecide to come at all! But more on serious side, this year wasn't all that bad, I mean, I met you. It's funny, because at the start of the year, in English I wanted to meet you, but you acted like a damm bitch, it was unreal!! But, since you got the great privilage to sit across from me, when we got moved, you and me got to know each other and I found out that you were really sweet, (even though you were a freak!) then, I guess, I started to like you. One thing, I don't believe all the time's you had to cheat off me during all the times you weren't prepared for, (study wise) boy, if it wasn't for me, you probably would have flunked!! Anyway, I'm glad we got together, although you're probably using the shit out of me (I don't mind) no matter what, we've had some good times already, I'm sure we'll have plenty more to come. So, with the summer coming, I know you plan on staying at my house for at least half the summer, right? Damm right!! Who knows, I guess we'll have to go sneaking out more often huh? Oh come on, you know it's fun, and there's no way you're parents will ever catch you, they trust you so much, who cares, we'll see alot of each other anyway, because I know you want to be with me, who doesn't right? You're so damm lucky to [redacted] have me, Jeff Ridley, fuckin' damm stud!! Future star of all sports you can name, preferably basketball. Oh, well I better stop writing for now, got to be goin' home, I'll add another chapter later, ok? [redacted] But seriously, I'm damm glad We're together, I really do love you, (sometimes!!)

hore always,
Jeff
